Mr. A. H. Baldwin submitted an oval plaque in gilt bronze of Charles II. and the medal by P. Van Abeele of the sailing from Scheveningen, from which it was reproduced; also a Harrington farthing reading BRITA., hitherto unknown, and Mr. Henry Garside the pattern shilling of 1875.

Mr. W. Sharp Ogden exhibited the first of a series of medals of English literary and political celebrities, which he intends to issue, in silver and bronze, to the memory of those who have not as yet received any real medallic commemoration from an artistic point of view. The medal was to Shakespeare, and bore his portrait on the obverse, from the painting recently discovered by Mr. Ogden, whilst the reverse, designed by the exhibitor, included the profile from the bust at Stratford restored to its original condition as it would appear before its renovation in the middle of the eighteenth century. The work, which was much admired, was that of Mr. F. Bowcher and the medals are issued through Messrs. Spink & Son.

THE LIMERICK MUSEUM.

10th May 1911. — The newly established Limerick Museum, in connection with the Carnegie Free Library in that city, has just received a very fine collection of Irish coins and tokens from the Rev. St. J. D. Seymour, B D., Rector of Cappawhite. The collection dates back to the thirteenth century, and nearly all the coins are in an excellent state of preservation. The more interesting specimens include a silver penny and halfpenny of the reign of King John, silver pennies of the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I., silver groats of Edward IV., Henry VIII., Philip and Mary, and Elizabeth, besides numerous coins of various reigns. One of the Edward IV. groats was struck in Limerick, and the collection also includes specimens of the Ormonde "Money of Necessity", which was coined, pursuant to King Charles's letter from Oxford, 25th May, 1643, directing the Lords Justices of Ireland, in consequence of the "extreme penurie" caused by the "bloody rebellion in Ireland", to encourage the loyal subjects of His Majesty to bring in their plate to the Treasury to be coined. The copper coins are from the Elizabethan penny to the George IV. halfpenny, the last distinctively Irish coin, the coinages of Great Britain and Ireland being since then assimilated. Mr. Robert Gelston has also lent to the museum a valuable collection of Irish manufactured silver, glass, and china. The silver pieces date from 1713 to 1805, and are by D'Olier, Ward, Jackson, Bridgeman, Sawyer, and Mosse, of Dublin; Green and Stevens, of Cork, and Purcell, of Limerick. The glass is of Waterford and Limerick manufacture, and the china by Donovan, of Poolbeg street, Dublin.

YORKSHIRE NUMISMATIC FELLOWSHIP.

A well-attended meeting of the Yorkshire Numismatic Fellowship was held in the Institute, Leeds, on Saturday afternoon, 20th May. Mr. W. Sykes (Cottingham) in the chair. The party included Mr. T. Pickersgill (Leeds), Mr. S. Hamer (Halifax), Mr. H. Knight (Barnsley), and Councillor Harrison (Hull). Mr. Brigg (Batley) read a paper on "Queen Anne Farthings", and exhibited specimens of all the known varieties, one of which had realised the enormous sum of nearly £40. In this connection an interesting paper by the late James Sykes was read, which originally appeared in the "Hull News" of November 7th, 1868. Mr. T. Pickersgill read a paper on the "Silver Coinage of Queen Elizabeth", and showed an almost complete series. Mr. T. Sheppard, F.G.S., exhibited and described six hitherto unknown Yorkshire halfpennies of the seventeenth century, viz.: John Cook, Pocklington, 1666; Robert Malbie, Bawtry, 1664; William Walker, Scarborough, 1667; Robert Garbut, Helmsley, 1667; Ann Forth, Doncaster; and Sam Greenwood, Leeds, 1668. The members dined together after the meeting.

OBITUARY.

Prof. N. Story-Maskelyne, who has passed away at the age of 87, was for many years Keeper of Minerals at the British Museum and Professor of Mineralogy at Oxford. At a time when the study of crystallography was rather neglected in this country he employed the advanced methods now in general use, and in 1895 he published a treatise which had been for many years in preparation, but delayed by Parliamentary and other duties. This work dealt only with the morphology of crystals, and he had in contemplation another volume on crystallographic physics. A great lover of precious stones, he described the famous collection of Marlborough gems, and prepared a catalogue, which appeared in 1870. Prof. Story-Maskelyne also contributed much to our knowledge of meteorites.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Numismatic Circular"
Sir,

In Mr. Valentine's excellent work, that treatise recently published on the MODERN COPPER COINS OF THE MUHAMMADANS, I have noticed what would at first sight appear to be a slight mistake in connection with the coins of Chinese Turkestan, but which to a Sino-numismatist would make all the difference possible.

In the coins of Aksu, page 192, under No. 11, a coin of the Tung Chih period is, as far as the Chinese inscription is concerned, correctly described, but not so with No. 12, which has only the information "As last but much larger coin".

I do not think that Mr. Valentine can be acquainted with Chinese or he would have at once noticed the great difference between the two coins mentioned, other than the size.

In No. 11, the Chinese inscription reads Tung Chih tung pao, (同治通寶) or "(Ordinary) Currency of the Tung Chih period", while No. 12 has the characteristic inscription Tung Chih CHUNG pao (同治重寶) or "HEAVY Curreney of the Tung Chih period".

This important difference will be better appreciated when it is pointed out that this is the only coin, so far known to me, of the entire issue for Chinese Turkestan of the value of 10 cash, which bears this unusual inscription, although it is the reverse in those of the general series issued for the other provinces of China proper.

This coin (No. 12) as the metal, inscription, size and workmanship indicate, is clearly a pattern piece made at the Peking mint.

I was under the impression that the specimen in my own collection was the only one known to exist, but I see that Mr. Valentine has attributed the one illustrated in his recent book as belonging to my friend Mr. Howland Wood, to whom I sent a rubbing of my piece some few years back.

Yours respectfully,

Yokohama, 5th May, 1911.

H. A. Ramsden, F. R. N. S.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO NUMISMATICS!!

I intended to let old coins severely alone for a time, as a description of some occupied about half of my space last week, but on Monday a man met me in the street with one which he had recently dug up, and as it is an early and interesting specimen I am giving an account of it at once according to promise. It is a Roman silver coin of the Emperor Trajan, who reigned from A. D. 98 to A. D. 117. His heathen subjects looked upon him as an excellent ruler, for he possessed good sense and moderation, showed great reverence for Jupiter and the gods, and persecuted the Christians.

A few remarks upon the inscription may not be out of place. Appianus was a historian of Alexandria, who flourished during the reigns of Trajan and his successor Hadrian. He was the author of Roman history. Besides having this title applied to him, Trajan is invested with the attribute of deity, "AUG.," that is "Augustus", which the Roman Emperors claimed. He is also styled "P. M.," that is "Pontifex Maximus," high priest; holds the sacred authority of Tribune, "TR." and is termed "Pater Patriæ," the father of his country, "P. P." The "COS III.," a contracted form of "Consul tertium," indicates that when this coin was struck Trajan had entered for the third time into the honourable office of Consul.

Judging from the large number of Roman coins which have been found from time to time in Wycombe and its immediate vicinity, and from the fact that others are continually being turned up by the spade, the locality must have been occupied by the Romans during the time that they held sway in this country. The discovery of extensive remains of Roman buildings in the meadow

No work on ancient Greek numismatics has ever rendered greater services than Dr Head's ' Historia Numorum '.

Its first publication in 1887 was epoch-making; it gave a fresh impetus to the study of classical coins; it became the indispensable companion to all students of Greek archaeology, the most useful ' multum in parvo ' reference book of all numismatists.

When presenting Dr Head with the "Corolla numismatica' on his retirement from the keepership of the Medal Department at the British Museum in 1906, the late Sir John Evans, expressed the earnest desire that the erudite author of 'Historia Numorum ' might long be spared in the interest of science and live to see the second edition of his standard work, the completion of the crowning work of his life.

Sir John Evans is no longer amongst us, but his wish has been realized; and we heartily congratulate Dr Head on the speedy termination of his great task.

As the author points out in his preface ' during all the five-and-twenty years which have elapsed since the publication of the first edition of ' Historia Numorum ' there has been no interval, pause, or standstill in the steadily increasing output of numismatic works, all necessitating changes of some sort in the text of the ' Historia '. Catalogues of public and private collections, and innumerable special articles in the periodicals devoted to classical numismatics and archaeology, have all had to be taken into account. In Great Britain alone no fewer than seventeen volumes have been added to the still unfinished ' Catalogue of Greek Coins ' in the British Museum, while the Hunterian Collection at Glasgow has been scientifically arranged and described by Dr G. Macdonald in three stately quartos (1899-1905) ". A corresponding number of important works have seen the light on the continent within the same period. To mention only the principal, Babelon's various Catalogues and his ' Traité des Monnaies grecques et romaines ', Dr Imhoof-Blumer's numerous memoirs and papers, published either as separate volumes or in contribution to various periodicals, the publications of the Royal Prussian Academy of Sciences, Dr Haeberlin's monumental work on the Aes grave of Rome and Central Italy, and the able works of Mr. J. N. Svoronos, keeper of coins at the Athens Museum.

To incorporate all the new material available since 1887 and to condense it in the way Dr Head has done was not an easy task, and could only be accomplished by one who, having such a wide grasp of the subject, was able to discriminate between the wheat and the chaff, the contributions of real practical value and the mass of speculative literature varying more or less in reliability.

The author was well advised in publishing the revised edition of the Historia ' in one volume, thus retaining its style and appearance with which we are all so familiar.

Some portions of the former edition have been omitted which were not of absolute necessity, but notwithstanding the additions amount in all to no less than 160 pages, consisting principally of new references, descriptions of coins recently published, interesting notes, etc.

In his revision of the ' Historia ' Dr Head secured the eminent assistance of Messrs. G. F. Hill, and Warwick Wroth of the British Museum, Dr George Macdonald of the Hunterian Museum, and Prof. E. J. Rapson who gave their special attention to the respective parts of the work with which they were most familiar.

Admirable as the new edition of ' Historia Numorum ' is, it does not, perhaps, altogether come up to the expectations that were held out. Scientists may challenge as out of date some of the theories on metrology, classification, etc., that Dr Head still retains. Some minor publications, chiefly German, have remained unnoticed. But it is not in my province to pass any adverse criticism on a book which must ever remain the standard work on Greek numismatics. Some varieties which have come to light within recent years are omitted; thus to mention only one, the remarkable didrachm, acquired in 1906 by the Berlin Museum, shoving on obv. in front of a horse, a naked warrior by the side of whom is a youth engaged in fastening his armour. It is also a matter for regret that all the old blocks have been used again for the new edition, as some of them which were of poor quality might have been recut at little expense, and fresh ones included. A few autotypes plates at the end of the book showing characteristic types of the various periods of Greek coinage would have been also a welcome addition, without materially increasing the size of the volume.

These matters of detail were no doubt thought of by the author, who found good reasons for issuing the ' Historia ' in its present form, and any further comment is unnecessary, as Dr Head's name is the best guarantee of the high quality and thoroughness of the work.

This medal is to be sold with the badge described below.

88726a During the war of the Austrian Succession, France prepared to invade England in support of the Stuart cause, and various associations were formed to defend the country and uphold King George. The medal first described was struck by one of these Loyal Associations, and the badge, illustrated below, evidently belonged to the same body, for the main design is similar to that of the reverse of the medal. The badge is a splendid piece of fine old paste set in silver, and differs in several respects from the specimen previously in our possession, illustrated and described in the Numismatic Circular of August 1906 ; amongst other details, that piece was surmounted by three flags only, and had, instead of Britannia, a pear-shaped paste pendant.

Here the five white sails, each surmounted by a blue flag with the red cross of St. George on a white ground, seem intended to point that England's security primarily rested with the fleet continually on the watch in the Channel to check the threatened invasion.

It may be noted that the men shown clasping hands on the obverse of the medal are each wearing a large badge.

The medal and badge (in original case) are offered together at £35. 35 » »

LA MÉDAILLE DE M. ERNEST BABELON.

Notre collaborateur M. Ernest Babelon, membre de l'Institut, conservateur du cabinet des Médailles à la Bibliothèque Nationale, fut, l'an dernier, l'un des organisateurs et des présidents du Congrès international de numismatique qui se tint à Bruxelles, et l'on se souvient à ce propos qu'il a consacré dans la Revue un article d'ensemble à la section des médailles de l'Exposition internationale de Bruxelles. La Société de numismatique de New-York et la Société hollando-belge des Amis de la Médaille ont décidé de lui offrir, en hommage de reconnaissance, une médaille, dont l'avers représente le profil du savant, par M. G. Devreese, de Bruxelles, et le revers offre l'effigie de Minerve, par M. R. Bosselt, de Dusseldorf.

JUST ISSUED.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. PARKES WEBER, M.A., M.D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual—his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action, — as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described.

but most interesting, account of Greek history and mythology, commerce and progress in civilisation. The colonies and conquests of the Hellenes, their foolish feuds and transient friendships all come under survey and comment, and the usually erudite style of Greek numismatists is transformed into a brilliant and most readable essay upon the ancient Greek world. This first volume is provided with a useful index and catalogues of the monograms, initials, symbols, and various mint marks are duly set forth to the various chapters, assisted by numerous engravings of all the more important types."

CORONATION OF KING GEORGE V. & QUEEN MARY 1911.

The Reverse depicts King George V. crowned, enthroned, and wearing his Coronation robes, holding the Royal Sceptre in his right hand and in his left the Orb. On his left side Queen Mary is seated, crowned and robed, holding Sceptre, and with her face turned towards the King. On the right of His Majesty, Britannia, standing and holding her trident in her left hand and a branch of myrtle in her right, is turning towards their Majesties. At the feet of the King rests the British Lion, behind which is the Union Shield, the rising sun in the background. Behind Her Majesty the Queen is a view of Westminster Abbey. Below, to right and left, are Amorini, linking together festoons of the National flowers. In the exergue, in three lines: "HOMAGE OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE, 1911"; above, "GOD SAVE THE KING."

We have had the honour of submitting specimens of the medals to H.M. The King who has expressed his "approval of their design and execution".

The medals are struck in gold, silver and bronze; also in smaller sizes in white metal for school children &c.

GREEK COINS.

THE PERIOD OF EARLY FINE ART, OR THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

It is difficult to find a satisfactory name for the period in the history of numismatics between that called Archaic and that commonly called the period of Fine Art. The phrase commonly used, the Transitional period, does not well express the character of any one period, all are in a measure transitional for change is always going on.

If we seek for an expression descriptive of the coinage we are met by the difficulty that no one description would apply to the coins of the beginning and the end of the period 480 to 415 B.C.

The words Coinage of the Democracy, for instance, would not apply to the period of the rule of Hieron, although it would suit the latter part of the period. Perhaps "early fine art" is the most accurate of those which have been suggested. The "Transitional Period" however has become a well-known recognized technical term and as such is adopted.

The sixty-five years from 480 to 415 B.C. may be subdivided into three periods clearly marked by events which changed the conditions of life in the Sicilian cities.

a) In the first of these from 480 to 461 B.C., the cities were under the old Aristocratic form of government. Hieron was reigning from 480 to 466 B.C., and we may associate the coins of this period with the names of the great men who used them, such as Pindar, Bacchylides, Epicharmus and Æschylus. The last five years were those of preparation for the downfall of the old rule of the tyrants and the triumph of Democracy.

When the great Geloan dynasty fell at Syracuse in 465 B.C. the many despots who ruled in various cities of Sicily under the protection of the Geloan family were driven forth and a democratic government was introduced (Grote, Hist. Greece, Part. II, chapter XLIII).

b) From 461 to 427 B.C. The cities were governed by democracies, Syracuse and Agrigentum being the most influential.

It seems strange that a time of such confusion as this second period should have been one of prosperity and progress. The families which had been exiled by the tyrants returned, and drove forth the men who had occupied their lands, Messana and Camarina grew and prospered especially on account of the new settlements in their borders. The troubles were increased by the rising of the Sikel tribes under Ducetius; Morgantia was taken by him in 452, and retaken by the Greeks in 442 B.C.

The principal men who influenced the minds of the Greeks in Sicily were Empedocles at Agrigentum, Corax at Syracuse, and Gorgias at Leontini.

The improvement in the artistic work in the mints continued throughout the period, and in 440 B.C. the artist Eumenes began to place his name on the coins. In his studio were educated those great artists whose work made a new period in the history of Greek coinage. On p. 173 of Dr A. Evans, Syracusan Medallions, an earlier artist's name is mentioned, Kimon of Himera.

c) From 427 to 415 the Athenians were involved in the strife which prevailed throughout the island. In 427 the Athenians sent assistance to the Leontines.

Gorgias was the ambassador from Leontini to Athens. It was the year in which Aristophanes first competed, and he gained the prize with a play which is lost.

The art of this period is that of the Spring, full of promise, with no sign of decay, like the beauty of childhood and youth in which the perfect proportions of the whole are not developed; thus on some of the reverse representations of chariots the driver and the Nike are far more artistic in treatment than the horses. Mr. G. F. Hill has quoted a passage from Ruskin's "Aratra Pentelici", § 119 which beautifully and simply expresses the impression which the art of this period makes upon modern art lovers in England.

On the coins of this period we never find the human eye represented in the archaic manner, fullfaced on a face in profile.

The hair is represented with greater variety, and the fillet gradually took the place of the string of beads. Horses are more boldly treated, no longer as walking but rather galloping or prancing. The legends or inscriptions are seldom, in this period, written retrograde. During the first of the three periods into which the whole may be divided the letter R gave place to the common form P, but the old form does appear occasionally during the two later periods which might well be called the period of Early Fine Style. The form Ω is not yet found on the coins.

During this period copper coinage was introduced at Syracuse if we may judge by the style of art on the copper coins existing.

The following passage from: "The Rise of the Greek Epic" p. 11 by G. Murray illustrates this period. "Every Greek community is like a garrison of civilization amid wild hordes of barbarians; a picked body of men, of whom each individual has in some sense to live up to a higher standard than can be expected of the common human animal. As the shield is the typical weapon of the Greek warrior so the wall is the typical mark of Greek civilization. Hellenism was represented everywhere by a handful of men holding an outpost, men who wrought their wonderful day's work in political and moral wisdom, in speculation, in beauty of outward form and inward imagining, with an ear ever open to the sternest of life's calls, and the hated spear and shield never far out of reach."

It is not easy to subdivide the coins of Agrigentum in the great museums belonging to the Transitional Period into three classes corresponding to the three periods above mentioned.

The coins however may be readily divided into two classes, those bearing symbols, and those without.

The following symbols occur on the tetradrachms, a barley corn, a dolphin, a flower, a Nike, an eagle, an eight-rayed star, a bull's head facing on the carapace of the crab.

On the Didrachms we have a male head, a female head, or an eagle.

The eight-rayed star is also found on coins of Thurium and Neapolis, and a star on coins of Caulonia Metapontum and Valentia.

A figure of Nike is also seen on coins of Metapontum and Neapolis.

A Dolphin also occurs as a symbol on coins of Thurium and Neapolis.

It appears probable that the coins without symbols are earlier than those with symbols.

The exact meaning attached to these symbols is not apparently known; they may have been moneyers' devices for distinguishing the various issues of coinage from a certain amount of bullion, it is hardly likely that they were merely ornamental devices designed by the artist; they may more probably have been devices or badges belonging to the family of the head of the mint, or chief officer of the city.

On p. 37 of "Coin Types" by Dr G. Macdonald we read "It is generally agreed that in the great majority of instances these symbols denote the magistrates responsible for the issue".....

"Direct proof is not lacking, since there are series on which the name of the magistrate accompanies the symbol, the variations of the two being concomitant. The symbol thus stands to the magistrate in the same relation as the type does to the city. One indicates the individual the other the state." The symbols were probably the seals or signets of the magistrates.

The public seal of this city was the crab, but when the age of the tyrants was ended the magistrates added their own seals to that of the city. The symbols are heraldic rather than religious, for heraldry is far more ancient than the middle ages. Plutarch in "Alcibiades" (XVI) refers to the (ἐπίσημον τῶν πατρίων) family coat of arms of that warrior. A flower occurs as one of these family symbols in the Tabula Heracleenses.

The Nike as a symbol on these coins of Agrigentum may be parallel with that which was borne by MIKI son of Eurycleides who won a four-horse chariot race recorded in an inscription of circa 191 B.C., and our little figure of Nike on the coin of Agrigentum may be a memorial of a similar victory.

The eight-rayed star may be a star-fish, its appearance on the later bronze coins is thus interpreted by Mr. G. F. Hill, Coins of ancient Sicily, p. 114.

TETRADRACHMS WITHOUT SYMBOLS.

Normal weight 270 grains.

I. Obv. AKRAC in field on right, behind an eagle standing to left with closed wings, on a line decorated with cable pattern, in front ΣOTNA.

Rev. Crab, with claws upwards.

II. Obv. AKRAC / ΣOTNA } Eagle standing to left with closed wings on an Ionic capital, perhaps representing the Meta of the chariot race course.

Rev. Crab, no symbol.

This coin on account of the Ionic capital on the Obverse is placed in the British Museum among the coins bearing a symbol.

TETRADRACHMS BEARING SYMBOLS.

III. Obv. Similar to No 1.

Rev. A crab, under which a barley corn.

IV. Obv. Similar to No 1.

Rev. A crab, under which a dolphin inverted.

V. Obv. Similar to No 1

Rev. A crab, under which a flower, on either side a spray.

This flower is called a rose in the Brit. Mus. Catalogue but it is not like a rose.

(Catalogue Hirsch, No XVI, Tafel VI, No 207.)

A well-known botanist has expressed his opinion that "the flower represented on these coins is undoubtedly a tulip, certainly not a rose, and as there is at least one Sicilian species, Tulipa Cludiana, my conviction is fairly strong. There is an admirable work on the conventional treatment of flowers and leaves by the ancient artists by M. Meurer "Vergleichende formenlehre des ornamentes und der pflanze" but this especial flower does not appear to be there represented.

Another work which should be consulted concerning animals and plants represented on coins is "Thiere und pflanzebilder » by Imhoof-Blumer and Keller.

VI. Obv. AKPA / ΣOTNAƆ } Eagle with closed wings standing to l. on Ionic capital.

Rev. A crab; above, Φ; beneath, similar flower to that on No V but with two sprays on either side.

(B. Mus. and Catalogue Sotheby, Sandeman Sale, 1911, No 20, Pl. 1.)

VII. Obv. AKPAC / ΣOTNA } Similar type to No. VI.

Rev. Crab; beneath, a spray in the form of two volutes one curled upwards the other downwards.

(Calogue Hirsch, No XVI. Tafel V, No 208). A fine specimen in the British Museum.

VIII. Obv. Eagle normal but whether standing on capital or on a line cannot be seen on the specimen in the Brit. Mus.

Rev. Crab, under which Nike flying to right, the wings spread one behind, one before, carrying wreath and fillet. Not in Museum Catalogue, a variety exhibited in Catalogue Hirsch, XIX, Tafel II, No 107 in which the wings of Nike are both behind.

(Catalogue of Sotheby, Sandeman Sale, 1911, Pl. 1, No 19.)

IX. Obv. AKPA / ΣOTNAƆ } Normal Eagle to left.

Rev. Crab, under which a small eagle similar to that on obverse.

(Illustrated in Sale Catalogue Hirsch, No XIII, 1905. Tafel III, No 273.)

N. B. — This type is also found in a didrachm.

X. Obv. AKRA / ΣOTNAƆ } Eagle standing on an Ionic capital to left.

Rev. Crab, with a star of eight rays underneath, all in a circular incuse.

(Catalogue Hirsch, No XV, 1906. Tafel VII, No 917. Weight : grammes 17.14.)

XI. Obv. AKRAC / ΣOTNA } Eagle standing to left.

Rev. Crab with markings on body arranged in the likeness of a facing bull's head, within incuse circle (Catalogue of Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge, 20 Ap. 1909, No 9, Plate 1. Weight grains 253 ½).

DIDRACHMS WITH SYMBOLS.

I. Obv. Eagle to right with closed wings AKPA.

Rev. Crab, beneath which a male head to right, archaic in style. CAΣ.

Illustrated in Sale Catalogue Hirch, No XIII. Tafel III, No 267, grammes 8.33, grains 128, also another specimen in Catalogue Egger of Wien, 1900. Tafel III, No 101, same weight.

II. Obv. Eagle standing to right with closed wings AK—AϘ.

Rev. Crab, under which a female head to right, archaic in style.

Illustrated in Catalogue Hirsch, No XIX, 1907. Tafel II, No 100. Weight 8.82 grains 135. The ideal Dekalitros or Didrachm weighed 8·7 gram.

III. Obv. AKRA. Eagle standing to left.

Rev. Crab, under which a small eagle.

Catalogue Hirsch, No XV, p. 69, No 913. Weight gram. 8.8. Catalogue Egger, 1906. Tafel I, No 49. Weight : 8.50 gram.

IV. Obv. AKRA / ΣOTN } Eagle standing to left, wings closed.

Rev. A crab; beneath, an olive-wreath.

Weight : 132 grains.

Catalogue Sotheby-Sandeman Sale, 1911, Pl. 1. No 22.

DRACHMS (about 66 grains).

Obv. ΓEN. Eagle, with closed wings, standing to left on Ionic capital : cable border.

Rev. ΨIA. Crab.

Weight of specimen in Brit. Mus. 65.6 grains. Size .6.

The legend ΓEN is read by Dr Head on πεντάλιτρον, The capital is not Corinthian as in B. M. Catalogue (Poll 4.173).

SILVER LITRA.

I. Obv. AK / AЯ } Eagle with closed wings, standing to left on Ionic capital : border of dots.

Rev. Crab, under which a flower.

(The capital is not Corinthian as in B.M. Catalogue.)

II. Obv. Similar to N° 1.

Rev. Crab, under which AI. Query AI[TRA].

Weight of specimen in B. Mus. 12.1.

Silver Coin of Æginetic weight?

SILVER COIN OF &c.

There is a coin of Agrigentum in the British Museum of an unusual weight presented to the collection by Sir Henry Howorth.

Obv. AKPA. Normal eagle.

Rev. Crab, no symbol.

Weight : 73 8 grains.

As three Æginetic drachms, weighing 90 grains each, weighed the same as one Euboic Attic tetradrachm, these two standards could be used together, but Dr Imhoof-Blumer prefers to consider the coins of 90 grains as thirds of the tetradrachm.

Naxos, Zancle and Himera are the only cities known to have used drachms of 90 grains. Dr Head (p. 120, Hist. Num.), mentions another coin of Agrigentum which has been considered as belonging to the Aeginetic Standard. It is at Paris and weighs 173-77 grains. This is nearer the ideal 180 grains than the B. Museum coin whose weight is 17 grains lighter than the ideal 90.

BRONZE.

"To this period may also be attributed a series of very strange looking lumps of bronze, made in the shape of a tooth with a flat base, having on one side an eagle or eagle's head, and on the other a crab, while on the base are marks of value ⁚⁚ ∴ : (Tetras, Trias, Hexas). The uncia is almond-shaped, with an eagle's head on one side and a crab's claw on the other. The weight of these coins points to a litra of about 750 grains" (Dr Head, Hist. Num.).

These curious pieces of bronze are described and illustrated on p. 23 on the British Museum Catalogue.

The tetras weighs 236 grains ⁘
The Hexas — 105 — ⁙
The Uncia? — 74 — Eagle's head and crab's claw.

They appear to be weights rather than coins but whether they are connected with coin weights appears doubtful.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

SMELTZING, JOHANNES or JAN (Dutch). Medallist of the second half of the seventeenth century, born at Leyden on 3. August 1656, died in that city on 18. October 1693. His parents were Quiring Jans Smeltzing and Margareta Cornelis dr. Van Roen. He married twice, first in 1677, Gertrud van Hove, and after her death, again in 1680, Catharina Schrevelius, who survived him until 1720. From his second marriage, he left issue, three daughters.

Immerzeel's information that the artist was born at Nimwegen and died in 1703 has been proved erroneous.

The date of Jan Smeltzing's activity is chiefly comprised between 1684 and 1693, although some of his works date from 1669. In 1690 he accepted employment at the Paris Mint, having been obliged to leave his native country on account of some satirical medals of which he was the author, but his stay in the French capital was of short duration.

The artist's usual signatures are : J. S.; — S. N. (Smeltzing of Nimwegen); — I. SMELTZING.

"Smeltzing executed a large series of medals", says Mr. Grueber, "which on account of the excellence of their workmanship were much esteemed." English collectors of medals claim the following on account of their connection with British history : 1685. James II., Opening of the Scottish Parliament (*Med. SMELTZING, MAARTEN or MARTINUS (Dutch). Medallist of the latter end of the seventeenth and early part of the eighteenth century. The date of his birth is not known, but he died at Leyden and was buried on 17. February 1714 in St. Peter's Church there. He is said to have been a younger brother of Jan Smeltzing, but the latter may be the Die-sinker, and not the Medallist, of that name.

Martin Smeltzing flourished at Amsterdam; his work however is not of considerable merit.

In the inventory of his succession, dies are mentioned of nineteen medals. I have come across the description of 25 of his productions. Some of these portray William III. of England, Philip V. and Charles III, of Spain, Leopold I. of Germany, Augustus II of Poland, and others.

The following appear to be his best known medallic productions: 1691. Triumphal Entry of William III. into The Hague, $\frac{26.\text{ Jan}}{5.\text{ Feb.}}$; signed: M. S. (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{7}{102}$); — 1695. Brussels bombarded, $\frac{4}{14}$ August, and Namur retaken, $\frac{22.\text{ Aug.}}{1.\text{ Sept.}}$; signed: M. SMELTZING (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{129}{379}$); — 1696. Assassination Plot against William III. $\frac{22.\text{ Feb.}}{6.\text{ March.}}$; M. SMELTZING (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{152}{415}$); — 1697. Peace of Ryswick, $\frac{10}{20}$ Sept.; Rℒ. Peace, PAX PVBL.; unsigned (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{176}{465}$); — 1698. The House of Orange; two varieties, numbered 1 and 2; the first signed: M : SMELTZING. F., and the second: M. S. (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{498.499}{544.542}$; — 1699. Treaty of Carlowitz, $\frac{21}{31}$ Jan.; signed: M. S. (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{204}{514}$); — 1700. Toubucan stormed; Scotch colony at Darien; signed: M. S. (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{209}{529}$); — 1702. Death of William III., $\frac{8}{49}$ March, signed on obv.: M. SMELTZING and on Rℒ. M : S : F (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{223}{550}$); — Expedition to Vigo Bay, $\frac{12}{23}$ October; Rℒ. a trophy (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{240}{25}$); — Successes of the Earl of Athlone, signed: M. SMELTZING (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{242}{27}$); — 1703. Cities captured by Marlborough, and Victories of the Allies; signed: M. SMELTZING (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{247}{36}$); — 1704. Prince Eugene and Marlborough, Battle of Blenheim, $\frac{2}{13}$ August; Rℒ. Marshal Tallard and his staff surrendering their swords to Marlborough and Eugene; medal unsigned, and attributed to the M. Smeltzing (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{260}{55}$); — 1706. Relief of Barcelona, $\frac{1}{12}$ May; signed: M. SMELTZING (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{283}{90}$) — Successes of the Allies in Spain and Brabant; unsigned (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{294}{401}$); — Capture of Ostend, $\frac{25\text{ June}}{6\text{ July}}$; Busts of Marlborough and Overkirk (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{292}{103}$); — 1708. Attempted Invasion of Scotland, $\frac{13}{24}$ March; signed: S. (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{318}{143}$); — Battle of Oudenarde, and Taking of Lille; signed: M. S. on both sides (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{344}{479}$), etc.

Other medals by him are enumerated in A. O. van Kerkwijk's Catalogus &c.: Philip V. enters Madrid, 1701 (V. L., IV, 267, 1); — William III. as Stadholder of the United Provinces, 1702; signed: M. SMELTZING (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{223}{550}$); — Godard, Count of Athlone, field-marshal of the Netherlands, 1702 (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{242}{27}$); — Leopold I. victorious over the French at Luzara, 1702; signed: M. S. (V. L., IV, 322); — Destruction of the French and Spanish Fleet at Vigo, 1702 (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{239}{24}$); — Satirical medal on the accession of Philip V. of Spain (in conjunction with N. Chevalier), 1702 (V. L., IV, 261.2); — Siege of Turin and Relief of Savoy, 1706 (V. L., IV, 465.1); — F. A. van Rheede of Renswoude, and J. van den Bergh, 1708 (V. L., IV, 540.2); — Silver Wedding of Paulus Scheltus Iz. and Katharina Brants, 1713 (Cat., 2317); — Augustus II. of Poland (Med. Ill., index).

SNOWDEN, Hon. JAMES ROSS (Amer.). Ninth Director of the U. S. A. Mint at Philadelphia, appointed June 3, 1853, by President Pierce. During his official term, nickel was first coined. He directed the publication of " The Mint Manual of Coins of all Nations ", and " The Medallic Memorials of Washington ", being mainly a description of a special collection made by himself. He was succeeded in 1861 by James Pollock.

SNOWDEN, Col.A. LOUDON (Amer.). Nephew of James Ross Snowden, was appointed Coiner of the Mint, Philadelphia, 1866. In 1876 he became Postmaster of Philadelphia, and on 1. March 1879 he assumed Control of the Mint until June 1885 when he resigned his commission.

SNYERS, JEAN BAPTISTE (Flem.). Mint-master at Antwerp, 17. July 1702 to 24. November 1707, and again from 25. April 1711 to 17. December 1712.

SOANE, HARRY (Brit.). Die-sinker of Birmingham (?), by whom is a Badge of the Tin Workers Co., 1881.

ΣΩ ΣΩΚ. These artists' (?) signatures occur on Tarentine coins. They had already been noticed by Raoul Rochette, who illustrated two on Pl. IV, of his Lettre, &c.

The following Coins are thus signed :

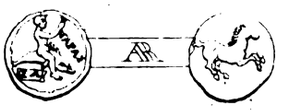
two, including the piece reproduced by Raoul Rochette in M. M. P. Vlasto's collection at Marseilles.



According to Dr A. J. Evans and M. Vlasto, the following Didrachm is by the same engraver, although signed ΣΩΚ.

M. Vlasto has been able to decipher the inscription ΚΑΛ on the tablet of ℞. instead of ΣΩΚ as described by Dr A. J. Evans. ΚΑΛ (q. v.) thus signed a coin in an identical manner to Evaenetos.

" This remarkable piece ", observes Dr Evans (p. 50), " exhibits on the reverse, beneath the design of the youthful Taras spearing a cuttle-fish, and again beneath the horseman on the obverse, the signature ΣΩΚ engraved on an oblong tablet, which recalls an artistic device adopted by the great Syracusan engravers for disposing of their names on the field of a coin ". And he adds in a note : " This in all probability the same engraver whose signature appears as ΣΩ on a small tessera on a diobol described by Raoul Rochette (Lettre à M. le duc de Luynes, &c., p. 45, pl. III, 39), who justly regarded it as an example of an artist's signature. Raoul Rochette being unacquainted with the didrachm described above, sought erroneously to identify the signature witth that of the engraver, who, on a late didrachm of the reduced standard signs ΣΩ in minute letters between the horns of a bucranium, and also with the Pyrrhic magistrate ΣΩΣΤΡΑΤΟΣ. The diobol above mentioned must be regarded as probably the earliest of those presenting the type of Taras on his dolphin, and which mostly belong to the period after 300 B. C. "

ΣΩ and Bucranium. This signature occurs on Tarentine staters of a later period than the coins described above, and given by M. Vlasto as circ. B. C. 235-228.

℞. Didrachm. Obv. Ephebos, wearing short chiton, on horseback galloping to right; his body is thrown back, and with his

in left hand trident, and with right extending hippocamp; in field to right, head of bearded Pan seen sideways, and Ε. (Raoul Rochette, op. cit., Pl. IV, 38. — Evans, op. cit., Pl. X, 2.;

Carelli, Pl. CX, 129 with ΑΡΙΣΤΙΩΝ. — M. P. Vlasto Collection.

Another specimen of this interesting Didrachm figured in a Sale Catalogue by Dr A. Sambon, March 1901, lot 303.

Raoul Rochette was evidently wrong in ascribing the above Didrachms to the Engraver of the Diobol, as they are at least a century later.

SOCCHE, GODWIN (Brit.). Ruding mentions, under Henry I., a Mint-master of that name, at Winchester (British Topography, I, 389). Mr. Andrews gives, under Edward the Confessor, a Godwine Socche, chief moneyer and tenant of the Winchester mint. The moneyer Ceca, who signed pennies of the same reign LODPINE-CEOCA, may be the same as Godwin Socche. Hildebrand further states that the names Godwine Ce, Ceo, Ceoc, Ceoca occur on coins of the Winchester mint under Canute, Harold I., and Harthacanute. From this the inference may be drawn that several moneyers of the name of Godwine Socche held office at the Winchester mint in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, for a period of over one hundred years. It is evident that a Godwine Socche was Magister monetarius under Edward the Confessor.

The Anglo-Saxon word SOC means ' a franchise ', ' a privilege '. The name SOCCHE may signify that these particular Godwines were ' freemen '.

SOCHOS, LAZARE NICOLAS (Greeck). Contemporary Sculptor, born in the island of Tenos; pupil of the Schools of Fine Arts in Athens and Paris, and of Antonin Mercié. The following exhibits have been made by him at the Paris Salon : 1892. Princess Alexandra; — Mme F; — 1894. The poet Souris; — M. G; 1896. M. D. P; — Competitive Prize Medal for the Olympic SOCKH, A.; also SOCK, SOCKHER (Austr.). Die-cutter at Kremnitz, 1617, in which year he applied for a post of Engraver at either of the Mints of Prague or Kuttenberg. He may have also engraved a medal, signed A. S., the dies for which are preserved in the Vienna Mint Museum, and which commemorates the Election of Archduke Ferdinand as successor to Emperor Mathias in Hungary, 1617.

SOCKH, MICHAEL; also SOCK, SOCKHER (Austr.). Die-cutter, and later Chief-engraver at the Mint of Kremnitz; died in 1615. He was the son of Thomas S. Sockh, who died in 1588, and possibly the father of A. Sockh.

The date of his appointment as Chief-engraver at Kremnitz is 3. June 1601. On the occasion of his marriage, 11. November 1607, the city authorities presented him with a silver cup.

By this Engraver are the Rudolf II. Kremnitz Thaler, 1601, and subdivisions (Half and Quarter Thaler; Four Groschen; Zehner; Denar), also of later dates; — Medal, signed M. S., dated 1601, on the Recapture of Gran by Archduke Matthias; — Religious Medal (Betpfenning), Bust of Christ; — Another, with instruments of torture; — Hungarian Coronation of Mathias II., 1608, with bust of King, and Arms on Rℒ.; signed : M. S.

The portrait of Rudolf II. on the currency engraved by Sockh is copied from that of a medal by Valentin Maler.

SOCKINC, I. C. (Germ.). Mint-master at Cologne, under Archbishop Maximilian Frederick, Count Königseck-Rothenfels, circ., 1777. A Conventions Thaler of that date occurs with the initials I. C. S., beside those of the Engraver Elias Gervais.

SOCOCLES (?) (Greeck). Gem-engraver's signature on a chalcedonyx intaglio, with bust of Medusa (20×16 mill.), formerly in Cardinal Ottoboni's collection at Rome, later in the Rondanini, and Carlisle cabinets, and now in the British Museum. The signature is CΩCOCΛ and should be read Σῶσος λε... The Engravers' name may have been Sosos. The gem which is perfectly genuine was already known at the beginning of the eighteenth century, at which time it was published by Stephanoni. Pichler considered it as superior to the Medusa by Solon. Vide SOSOCLES infra.

SOME IMITATION COINS ISSUED BY THE MINOR GONZAGA MINTS.

The Gonzaga family of Mantua was one of the most interesting and illustrious of Italian ruling houses, and its history is quite as romantic and fascinating as that of its contemporaries the Este of Ferrara, the Visconti and the Sforza of Milan, and the Montefeltro of Urbino.

Cadets of this family split off from the parent stem and became lords of tiny states (Imperial fiefs) in various parts of northern Italy. It is with the currency of some of these princelets that we propose to deal in the present paper.

Castiglione delle Stivere. — A town in the modern province of Brescia. This Imperial fief belonged to a younger branch of the Gonzagas of Mantua.

Marquis Rodolfo Gonzaga 1586-93. — Among princely forgers the palm must certainly be awarded to Rodolfo, who, finding that the circumscribed area of his dominions did not afford him sufficient legitimate profit from his mint issues, flooded the markets of Italy with small counterfeit copper coins. The prevailing ignorance of the lower classes of the day greatly facilitated this rascally marquis in his nefarious schemes, for few of the mass of the people were able to read, and they only identified the small change which constituted the bulk of the currency of the period by the designs on the pieces and not by their inscriptions.

Rodolfo's reign was indeed one of terror for his unfortunate subjects and he even went so far as to conceive the mad project of poisoning all the citizens of Castiglione with a view to repeopling the town with his soldatesca and camp followers. His career of crime culminated with the dastardly murder of his uncle, Alfonso Gonzaga Lord of Castelgoffredo. In May 1592 Rodolfo slew his uncle, and compelled his aunt and girl cousin to acclaim him lord of Castelgoffredo. In the following year this monster of iniquity was himself assassinated, one of his own much-tried vassals shot him in the back while performing his devotions in church : so strong was public feeling that the murderer escaped scot free.

The forged quattrini, sesini, and baiochelli (copper coins about the size of a modern farthing) of this reign may be divided into six classes : —

1. Bologna.
2. Pope Gregory XIII.
3. Sixtus V. Types : — St. Francis, The Holy Spirit, the Conception, the B. V. of Loreto, and cavalier with sword.
4. Sede Vacante.
5. The Italian states.
6. European states.

Imitations of Bologna coins. — 1. Quattrino. Obv. R. C. (Rodolfo Castiglione). P. BO. Ex. A.L. Crossed keys surmounted by a papal tiara.

Rev. SAN PIPUS. Bearded saint with nimbus, seated, looking to the right, holding in his right hand model of city, and in his left a pastoral staff. The saint resembles St. Petronio of Bologna. Ex. FANUM.

This quaint forgery belongs to the mule variety, as it is a sort of cross between the quattrino of Bologna and the baiochella of Fano. By the way, the Roman Calendar does not contain the name of a Saint Pipus.

2. Quattrino. Obv. P.BONOR.CA(stiglione). Crossed keys surmounted by tiara.

Rev. S.PETRVS. St. Peter bearded, with nimbus, seated facing, model of city in right hand, pastoral staff in left.

3. Obv. P.BONORU.C(astiglione). Keys as 2.
Rev. SANT.PETRVS, etc. as 2.
4. P.BONORU. C(astiglione), etc. as 2.
Rev. SAN PETRUS, etc. as 2.
5. P.BONORU.C(astiglione), etc. as 2.
Rev. S-PETRUS, etc. as 2.
6. Obv. Crossed keys and seated figure of saint.
Rev. BONOS-PROTETOR.N.
7. Keys and seated saint.
Rev. BONA.MA.

Gregory XIII. — 8. Quattrino. Obv. ROD.GON. Arms of Gregory XIII.

Rev. S.PETRUS.D.CAS(tilionis). St. Peter standing.

Rodolfo's career as a forger can easily be traced, he commenced by placing an abbreviated form of his name on the coins issued from his mint, later he abandoned even this slight leaning towards numismatic honesty, and frankly omitted his initials.

Sixtus V. — 9. Billon. Obv. SIXTUS.PO.M.1590. Bust of Pope to l. Ex. Cross in circle.

Rev. ROD.GON.MAR.C(astilionis). S.RO.IM.PR. A cavalier riding to l., in imitation of St. Julian on the baiochelli of Macerata. This coin contains a small proportion of silver, examples in copper are known.

10. Variety of 9. Obv. S.SIXTUS.PA.MA.1590. The letters PA.MA. stand for Papa Martyr instead of the usual Pontifex Maximus.

11. Billon. Obv. SANCTUS.GI.MA. (Sanctus Geminianus Martyr). Bust of Pope I.

Rev. ROD.G.M.C(astilionis). S.R.IM.PR. A cavalier charging, waving sword. In imitation of the coins of Ancona.

12. Copper baiochello. Obv. SIXTUS V.P.MA.S.A.I. Bust l.

Rev. MARIA.ADVOCATA.CAS(tilionis) C.A.M. Virgin on the Santa Casa of Loreto. Ex. SANTA. Imitation of a Fano coin.

13. Billon. Obv. S.SIXTUS.P.MA. Bust of Pope to l.

Rev. SANTA.MARIA.ADVOCATA.C(astilionis). Type as 12.

14. Obv. SANCTUS.PATERNIA. Bust of Pope to l.

Rev. as 11. Here we have another mule with a Fano obverse and an Ancona reverse.

15. Quattrino. Obv. S.SIXTUS.PO.

Rev. SANCTUS.CIMI.(15)90.

16. Obv. Quattrino. Obv. GON(zaga)-R(odolfo). Arms of the Peretti family (Sixtus V).

Rev. St. Peter.

17. Quattrino. Obv. ROD.GON. Arms of Gregory XIII.

Rev. S.PETRUS.D.CAS(tilionis). St. Peter standing.

18. Baiochello. Obv. S.PETRUS.P.C. (Protector Castilionis).

Rev. as 17 but the letters of the inscription are reversed in error.

19. Baiochello. Obv. S.SIXTUS.P.M. Bust of Pope to l. Ex. A.L. (Probably the initials of the engraver).

Rev. The B.V.Mary standing on the crescent moon. ITER. PARA.TUTUM. Imitated from a coin of Fano.

20. Obv. SIXTUS.PA.MA. Bust of Pope to l. Mint-mark cross in circle on neck of papal cope.

Rev. As 19. Copy of Fano coin.

21. Obv. SIXTUS.P.MA. Bust l. Ex. A cross.

Rev. MONE-TA.NO. (in place of the word Montalto — this piece is copied from a coin of that town). Ex. 1590. St. Francis kneeling receiving the stigmata.

22. As 21 but the date is omitted.

23. Obv. S.SIXTUS.P.M. Bust 1.

Rev. SANCT.FRANCISCO. Ex. 1590, etc. as 21.

24. Obv. S.SIXTUS.PA.MA. Bust of Pope to l. Arms on collar of Pope.

Rev. MONE.NO. The Holy Spirit. Imitated from a coin of Montalto.

25. Obv. SANCTUS.PATER etc. as 24. The inscription possibly has some distorted connection with St. Peter who was the patron saint of Castiglione.

Rev. MONET.NO. (reversed) etc. as 23.

26. Obv. SAN.PATERNIA. Bust as of Pope I.

Rev. SAN.FRA-NCISCUS etc. as 23.

27. Obv. SAN.GIMINA. etc. as 26.

Rev. As 24.

28. Obv. SANCTUS.PETRUS. etc. as 27.

Rev. As 21.

29. Obv. MEA.FORT. Arms of Sixtus V. surmounted by crossed keys.

Rev. An olive-wreath. Centre, the Holy Spirit and the words MON.NO.

Numbers 21 to 29 are copied from the copper baiochelli of Montalto. This small city is situated in the province of Ascoli, it was the birthplace of Pope Sixtus V. (1585-90), who opened a mint there in 1586, which was closed on the death of his successor Urban VII (14th to 28th Sept. 1590).

30. Obv. SEDNS.VACAT.VAN.M.C(astillionis) in place of "Sede vacante Fanum". Arms as usual during an interregnum between the death of one Pope and the election of his successor.

Rev. As 19. Copied from a coin of Fano. Struck after the death of Urban VII.

INDIAN RUPEES DATED 1840.

There are three sizes of the silver rupee minted for circulation in British India, bearing the effigy of Queen Victoria, and dated 1840, namely: —

Type 1. Continuous legend on the obverse. The truncation of the neck is plain. Diameter 31 millimetres.

Type 1. Continuous legend on the obverse. S incuse on the truncation of the neck. This is the initial of the surname of Major M. N. Smyth who was Master of the Mint in Calcutta when the coin was struck. Diameter 32 millimetres.

Type 2. Divided legend on the obverse. W. W. on the truncation of the neck. These are the initials of William Wyon the engraver. Diameter 30 millimetres.

I am not aware that two sizes of the rupee dated 1840 with the continuous legend have hitherto been chronicled. The specimen 32 millimetres in diameter is the only one I have seen or heard of. I may add that although the rupees with the continuous legend (Type 1) were coined in the years 1840 to 1849 inclusive, and those with the divided legend (Type 2) were coined in the years 1850 to 1862 inclusive, they all bear the date 1840.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.

June 28. — Mr. Carlyon-Britton, President, in the chair. — Messrs. James Berry and Aquila Dodgson were elected Members.

The President read a paper upon 'The Attribution of the Ancient British Coins inscribed DIAS'. The type referred to was that illustrated in Evans, plate VI, fig. 14, but the late Sir John Evans was unable to offer any explanation of the legend. Mr. Carlyon-Britton exhibited a fresh variety reading DEAS with C above and 10 below, which, when treated in the manner of later coins bearing a triple-lined legend, he read DEASCIO; but as the D was a usual form of the θ, as, for example, on the coins of Antedrigus, he deduced THEASCIO as the complete legend. Referring to our early chronicles, he mentioned the various form in which the name of the father of Cunobeline appears, namely, Tenuantius, Themantius, Theomantius, and Tenancius; and he had therefore no hesitation in attributing the coins bearing these legends to Tasciovanus, or Tasciovans, whose paternity of Cunobeline is algo supported by the inscription on the latter's coins CVNOBELINVS TASCIOVANTIS F(ilius).

Mr. Andrew continued his 'Numismatic History of the Reign of Stephen,' treating the types as given in Hawkins. Of these he believed that Nos. 270, 269, 276, XVIII. and 268, in the order named, were the only regal issues. He quoted passages from Hoveden and the 'Dialogus' as evidence that there were various contemporary coinages current in different districts, issued by the archbishops, bishops, and chief barons. These began in 1139, and were suppressed in 1153. Hawkins 272, 273, 274, 275, 629, and 630 represented ecclesiastical money of this class; whilst 277 was issued by Robert Ferrers, 2nd Earl of Derby, probably about 1142-3. Perhaps the chief interest, however, centred in the distinctive coinage issued from the ecclesiastical mint at York. It probably began under Archbishop William, and then included types 271, 278, 279, and 280, the first bearing a legend in contracted Latin stating that it was issued by "the Church of St. Peter." Mr. Andrew associated 278 with King Stephen's visit to York; and explained 279, which bears the name of Henry, Bishop of Winchester, as being struck by the Archbishop in honour of the Legate, his uncle and patron. The last type, 280, as Mr. Lawrence had previously suggested, bore the name of Robert de Stutville, the leader of the archiepiscopal forces at the Battle of the Standard.

By comparison with the contemporary money issued by Eustace, Stephen's eldest son, as Earl of Boulogne, some of which bore exactly the same designs and ornaments as the York coins, Mr. Andrew urged that it was impossible to doubt that types 282 and 283 were struck by him as Governor of York, and not by Eustace Fitz John, as had recently been suggested. He construed the contracted Latin legend upon the latter type as " (issued) by the edicts of York, " namely, the writ of sequestration of the temporalities of the see issued in 1149. He was now inclined to attribute the two-figure type, 281, to the marriage of Eustace with Constance of France.

In connexion with Mr. Carlyon-Britton's paper Sir Arthur Evans lent for exhibition the coins illustrated in his father's work and referred to above. Other exhibitions included two early Gaulish silver coins reading DIA (sulos), by Mr. Bernard Roth; the variety of Stephen's type 270 struck at Devizes, by Mr. Shirley Fox; a silver medallion of Charles I., artist Jean Varin, previously unknown, by Miss H. Farquhar; a pattern cent of the Confederate States of America, by Mr. J. Sanford Saltus; and a series of modern Italian and French money showing recent improvement in Continental art, by Lieut.-Col. H. M. Morgan. Mr. Hamer presented a proof in copper of a personal medal.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.

June 15. — Sir Henry H. Howorth, President, in the chair. — Messrs. R. Assheton Coates and A. H. Cooper-Prichard were elected Fellows. — The Annual Report of the Council was placed before the meeting, and adopted.

The President presented the silver medal of the Society to Dr. Oliver Codrington for his long and distinguished services to Oriental numismatics and archæology. After Dr. Codrington had replied, the President delivered his annual address, in which he reviewed the progress of numismatic science during the past year.

The result of the ballot for the election of office-bearers for the ensuing year was announced, and the following were declared elected: President, Sir Henry H. Howorth: Vice-Presidents, Sir Arthur J. Evans and Mr. Herbert A. Grueber; Secretaries, Messrs. J. Allan and F. A. Walters; Foreign Secretary, Mr. G. F. Hill; Librarian, Dr. O. Codrington; Treasurer, Mr. Percy H. Webb; Council, Miss Helen Farquhar, Mr. G. C. Brooke, Dr. Barclay V. Head, the Rev. Dr. Headlam, and Messrs. L. M. Hewlett, L. A. Lawrence, J. G. Milne, Max Rosenheim; Bernard Roth, and Henry Symonds.

BRITISH ACADEMY.

June 7. — Dr. A. W. Ward in the chair.

Prof. Percy Gardner, Fellow of the Academy, read a paper on 'The Earliest Coins of Greece Proper'. The first question which arises is whether the earliest coins of Hellas were of electrum. Electrum coins have been attributed to Thrace, Ægina, and Eubœa; but in every case the attribution is improbable, and an Asiatic origin more likely. The tradition ascribing the first issue of coins at Ægina to Pheidon must be considered. The date of Pheidon may be fixed as the eighth century B.C. But this is too early for the issue of coins; nor did Ægina belong to Pheidon. Pheidon regulated the weights and measures of Peloponnese: these are of doubtful, possibly Mycenæan, origin. It was on the standard of Pheidon that the Æginetans first issued silver coins as substitutes for the bars of bronze and iron which had made up the earlier currency of Peloponnesus. These bars were dedicated at Argos, and some survive. The proportions of value were, iron 1, bronze 5, silver 600, so that a silver obol of 16 grains was equivalent to 20 drachms of bronze or a mina of iron. The obol, the drachm, and the talent made up a system proper to Greece; the mina of 100 drachms was interpolated. The origin of the didrachm and the double talent was considered.

The cities of Eubœa issued money in the seventh century on the gold standard of Babylon, which they regulated according to the scheme of Pheidon. Their coins were uniform with those of Athens, and perhaps of Megara, bearing one type only.

The Corinthians began as early as the time of Cypselus the issue of coins, which were often restruck in Italy. They divided the Euboic stater into 3, a fact which gives us valuable data in regard to the spread of Corinthian commerce.

The earliest coins of Athens bore as types the owl and the amphora. They were introduced by Solon. The accounts by Aristotle and by Androtion of Solon's legislation were to be reconciled. Solon's alteration of measures, and cutting down of debts, were both done from democratic motives. Solon adopted the Euboic standard for coin, which was raised to the level later called Attic by Pisistratus, who first struck the tetradrachms with the head of Athena. The result was the foundation of Athenian commerce, and the victory of the Athenian silver coinage, to the weight of which Corinth, Eretria, and other cities were obliged to conform. Prof. Gardner finally considered the wide circulation of Athenian coins and the barbarous copies made of them.

Mr. Reginald Poole, Fellow of the Academy, communicated a paper on the life and work of the late M. Delisle, Corresponding Fellow of the Academy.

SOCIÉTÉ FRANÇAISE DE NUMISMATIQUE.

Séance du 4 mars.

La Société, réunie en assemblée générale, a procédé au renouvellement de son bureau. Ont été élus: président, M. Ad. Blanchet; vice-président, le commandant Babut; secrétaire, M. de Villenoisy; trésorier, M. Bouclier.

M. Sudre prononce l'éloge funèbre de M. Caron, président honoraire de la Société et l'un de ses fondateurs.

M. Dieudonné propose une explication nouvelle de l'émission, sous certains rois, de deux séries de monnaies de types différents; elles étaient destinées au commerce dans les provinces orientales et occidentales de la France.

M. Moricaud rend compte de la troisième vente Strœhlin et présente quelques monnaies en provenant.

M. Béranger fait connaître l'empreinte d'un timbre du musée de Caen qui semble avoir servi à l'émission d'un papier-monnaie privé antérieur aux mandats territoriaux et comparable aux monnerons.

M. Bouclier soumet à la Société diverses monnaies récentes et une médaille inédite de la prise d'Alger.

M. Ad. Blanchet, enfin, présente trois curieux placards monétaires inédits et lit une note sur la crainte superstitieuse qu'inspirait la lettre numérale théta dans la date des monnaies antiques.

REVIEWS.

Mr. William Graham's interesting and well-filled volume, The One Pound Note in the History of Banking in Great Britain (Edinburgh, James Thin), contains a curious chronicle of the early history of banking in Scotland, and its main object is to explain, as the title states, the position of the one-pound note in Great Britain. That it is the second edition, " issued ", as the author tells us, " in response to many requests, " proves the genuine interest taken in the subject. We confine our remarks to the theme to which the book is mainly devoted — the influence which the note issue has had on the establishment and the success of banking north of the Tweed. Mr. Graham explains this at great length, and describes its utility with the devotion of a fervent admirer.

That the one-pound note is very convenient in Scotland and in Scotland and in Ireland is well known, but we cannot agree with Mr. Graham that very small notes would be of use everywhere. Thus the Bank of France had in 1872 a circulation of nearly 4.500.000 l. in notes of 25 francs (1 l.), of nearly 21.500.000 l. in 20 francs notes (16 s.), together with 5 francs notes in value over 4.000.000 l., but in a few years they were virtually all withdrawn. Tradition says that the Bank paid all the small notes presented, whether forged or not. Be this as it may, they have not been continued. Experience appears to show that small notes, when issued at all, are best issued by comparatively small banks, who are constantly exchanging their notes with each other, and can thus keep a sharp eye on fraud. They answer well in Scotland, but it would, we think, be a misfortune to England if they were employed here. The rule of thumb that " the note should not be of the value of the unit of the currency " applies to this, as there is the great risk of the gold circulation of the country — a valuable resource in time of pressure — being dangerously reduced by their use.

We part from Mr. Graham with the feeling that, while he has made a powerful defence for the small-note issue in Scotland, he has not shown sufficient grounds for its use elsewhere. If we may venture to quote a Scotch proverb to a Scotchman, we will conclude with the one which reminds us of the wisdom of " letting sleeping dogs bide ".

CORRESPONDENCE

CONTRIBUTIONS TO NUMISMATICS!

To the Editor " Numismatic Circular".

Dear Sir,

I have been amusing myself by trying to identify the supposed silver coin of Trajan described in such an original manner in your extract from the " Local Press ". It is evidently not even of the Emperor to whom the talented author assigns it, but must be an early denarius of Hadrian, reading IMP.CAESAR TRAIAN. HADRIANVS AVG., " HADRIANVS " having been contorted into " N APPIANVS ", an additional N being added to " TRAIAN " to justify the reading!

The reverse is probably as Cohen 1102, reading P.M.TR.P. COS.III., and showing figure of Rome (not Jupiter) seated. There are denarii with this legend showing Jupiter seated, but not holding a Victory. The " Local Press " is generally very amusing when it attempts to describe coins, and other extracts of the same kind might entertain your readers.

Yours faithfully.

Leopold A. D. Montague, F.R.N.S.

A BARNET SEVENTEENTH CENTURY TOKEN FOUND ON THE ESTATE OF SIR SAMUEL B. BOULTON BART.

A very interesting memento of the Commercial activity of this Country two hundred and fifty years ago has just been unearthed on the estate of Sir Samuel Boulton J. P. at Totteridge in the county of Hertfordshire.

This memento is in the form ot a halfpenny token, in excellent preservation, of which the following is a description.

Obv. IOANE.BVLL.IN.BARNETT = A pair of scales.

Rev. HER.HALFE.PENNY 1667 = I. B.

It belongs to the well known and very interesting 17th Century series which was issued between the years 1649 and 1672. Though illegal, this currency covered a large field of operations and was practically the only medium of exchange in small transactions throughout the Kingdom, the government failing to supply an acceptable substitute. It was only in 1672, when a large issue of copper halfpence and farthings bearing the King's bust thereon for the first time, and backed by Royal authority, was struck, that any real attempt was made to proclaim the tokens, and the series was brought to an end shortly afterwards.

ADVERTISEMENTS

JUST ISSUED.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. PARKES WEBER, M.A., M.D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual—his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action,—as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described. Price Five Shillings Net.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE 1911 SHAKSPERE MEDAL.

This is an important contribution to the medallic portraiture of Shakspere.

It is struck to give perpetuity to a fine contemporary portrait, traditionally ascribed to Shakspere. It belonged for many generations to an old Lancashire family, and on this becoming extinct a few years ago, it passed into the collection of Mr W. Sharp Ogden, who has caused this medal to be prepared.

The obverse is an accurate rendering of the delightfully characteristic portrait. The reverse also has Shakspere's head in profile, laureated by the Muse of poesy; this head is from the monument bust in Stratford-on-Avon Church.

It is a charming example of Mr Frank Bowcher's work.

Messrs Spink & Son supply the medal as follows:

COMMON GREEK COINS

BY THE REV. A. W. HANDS

8vo. — 170 pp — Illustrated. Price : 5/- nett.

"It must not be thought that "Common Greek Coins" is merely a catalogue of ancient Greek money, for it is far more than this. The describing of the coins is utilised to give a cleverly condensed, but most interesting, account of Greek history and mythology, commerce and progress in civilisation. The colonies and conquests of the Hellenes, their foolish feuds and transient friendships all come under survey and comment, and the usually erudite style of Greek numismatists is transformed into a brilliant and most readable essay upon the ancient Greek world. This first volume is provided with a useful index and catalogues of the monograms, initials, symbols, and various mint marks are duly set forth to the various chapters, assisted by numerous engravings of all the more important types."

THE

MODERN COPPER COINS

MUHAMMADANS

BY W. H. VALENTINE.

Price 10/6 net.

This work, is designed to popularise the study of Muhammadan Copper Coins, and is the outcome of a student's endeavour to identify and arrange them. To this end the author has made faithful drawings of all the specimens of this class of coin that he has been able to find. Commencing with Turkey, the reader is taken numismatically through Egypt, Tripoli, Tunis, Algiers, and Morocco, to Nigeria (for which place the Royal Mint has recently struck a new coinage) and from thence back to East Africa and Arabia. Crossing from there to Europe, the tour continues through the Crimea, Georgia, Persia, Afghanistan, Bukhara, and terminates in Chinese Turkistan.

About a thousand coins struck during the last three centuries are illustrated (including many which have not been figured in any previous work) and the Arabic inscriptions carefully transliterated and explained, as shown on the specimen pages.

To assist in the classification of the coins, a geographical arrangement has been adopted, and six coloured maps have been added to enable the reader to locate the various mints.

The interesting field covered by this work has never before been dealt with, and it will be found that by the issue of this volume — compiled with infinite patience by the author — a real and growing need has been met.

The idea adopted by Mr. Valentine of illustrating each coin is a happy one (and indeed in the case of this Oriental series almost a necessity) because by this means the task of identifying each coin is rendered absolutely easy and pleasant, and it is believed the Work will greatly assist in promoting the study and collecting of Muhammadan Coins generally.

Orders for this work should be addressed to the publishers, Spink and Son Ltd.

GREEK COINS.

CAMARINA.

COINS OF THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

The only didrachms assigned to this period bear a helmet on a shield and a palm-tree and pair of greaves. They are rare. One specimen was recently sold in London for £ 152 (Sandeman Sale, June 1911).

The types are not easily interpreted or connected with the history of the city; they were apparently designed by the exiles who returned from Syracuse and founded a new city on the old territory of their forefathers.

Diodorus Siculus, describing the events of 460 B.C., says "a short time after, the Geloans reentered Camarina, and divided the territory among themselves" (lib. XI, 76). Thucydides briefly refers to this event in his general account of Camarina "and having been again depopulated by Gelo, it was settled for the third time by the Geloans" (VI, 5).

Those who had been exiled from Gela and Camarina took advantage of the reaction against the Gelonian dynasty, and finding the citizens favourable to their return, came back, and received the site of the old Camarina on which to found a new city. The site was available because the Syracusans had renounced their claim to the territory.

The fact that of the returning exiles from Syracuse some had originally been citizens of Gela, and others of the old Camarina, made the proposal to give them that city welcome to all. Camarina was then consecrated anew with Dorian rites by the Geloans to be an independent city.

Some of the new settlers must have been rich men, for we find from Pindar that some were able to send chariots to the races in the Peloponnesus, and to pay the poet Pindar for celebrating their victories. Psaumis was one of those successful sportsmen whose victories were won in 452 B.C., only nine years after the resettlement of the city. Pindar, in his fourth Olympian Ode, says: "It (the procession) has come to thee (Zeus) on account of a victory of Psaumis in the mule-chariot, who with his head crowned with the olive of Pisa desires to raise up glory for Camarina".

"I praise him for his ready zeal in the breeding of horses, and for taking pleasure in general hospitality, and also for pursuing the path of peace in love for his city with honest intentions". This fourth Ode was sung in Greece, but the fifth Ode was sung in Camarina before the temple of Pallas.

The Nymph Camarina is addressed as daughter of Ocean, and asked to receive the gift of Psaumis who gave the games for five days; in this ode also the hospitality of Psaumis is mentioned.

The city was probably built chiefly of wood. The art of carpentry is here attributed to the river Hipparis probably because it conveyed the wood of which the common houses were built.

The speed with which the town arose is also praised.

A New Zealand township quickly springing up near Nikau Palms may be not unlike the new city of Camarina amidst the Sicilian palms.

THE PALM TYPE.

Palms known to botanists as "Chamaerops humilis" were and are still abundant in Sicily. Pliny mentions the fact in his Hist. Nat. (XIII, 4), and Cicero in his oration "in Verrem" (Act. II, lib. V, 87) speaks of sailors who were forced by hunger to collect and eat the roots of the wild palm trees (palmarum agrestium) which were plentiful in the greater part of Sicily."

It seems probable that the palm on these coins was chosen as a type for the same reason that the celery leaf was chosen for the type of Selinus. Mr. G. F. Hill in his "Coins of ancient Sicily" (p. 80) says: "Like the somewhat similar types at Himera, these types may be meant to allude to the defeat of the Carthaginians". The coins of Himera here referred to, however, bear no palms, only the helmet and the greaves.

The common symbol of victory was a branch of the palm, not as on this coin, a tree. It is a coincidence of date that in 461 B.C. the Romans first introduced the Greek custom of giving palm-branches to the victors in the games (Livy, X, 47).

The connection of ideas associated with Palms and Carthage is natural from the Greek word for a palm being Φοῖνιξ, and the land of Carthage being called ἡ φοινίκη, and also from the palm appearing on coins of the Carthaginians struck in Sicily; but is is not at all clear that the citizens of the newly built Camarina wished to celebrate a victory won twenty years before. The similarity of the types of the coins of Himera may point to some connection between the cities to which the exiles returned at this time.

DIDRACHMS (TRANSITIONAL PERIOD).

Reverse. Dwarf fan-palm in fruit; on either side a greave: all in circular incuse.

Weight of specimen in Brit. Museum 129.4 grains. A fine specimen is illustrated in the Catalogue of Mess. Sotheby Wilkinson and Hodge of the Coins of J. G. Sandeman Esqr. FSA, 1911. No 24 Plate I. "Fine and very rare."

CATANA.

In the British Museum Catalogue the earliest series of coins issued in Catana are classed under the heading "Period of Archaic Art", but from the style of the types they must have been struck only a few years before the city was taken by Hiero in 476 B.C. and probably after 480 B.C. which is the date of the end of the Archaic Period.

The fact that we have no coins struck in the earliest period is no proof that the citizens had no mint at that time, and from the prevalence of money in the neighbouring cities we may expect to find a few specimens of the now unknown earlier coinage. Catana is situated on the East coast under Mount Etna, and halfway between Syracuse and Naxos, about twenty-five miles from each.

Thucydides thus relates the founding of the city: "Moreover Thucles and the Chalcidians from Naxos set out in the fifth year after the founding of Syracuse, and having expelled the Sicels by arms, resettled Leontini, and after it Catana, the Catanians themselves having chosen Evarchus as their founder" (VI, 3). The dates usually given to these events are Syracuse 734, Catana 729 B.C.

Strabo says: "Catana was founded by people from Naxos, and Tauromenium by the Zanclæans of Hybla". (There is a doubt whether we should read Zanclæans or Sicilians) "but Catana was deprived of its original inhabitants when Hiero the Tyrant of Syracuse (in 476 B.C.) introduced others, and called it by the name of Ætna instead of Catana: It is of this that Pindar says he was the founder when he sings: "Thou understandest what I say, O father, that bearest the same name with the splendid holy sacrifices, thou founder of Ætna":

But on the death of Hiero, the Catanians returned, expelled the new inhabitants, and demolished the mausoleum of the tyrant.

The Ætnæans, compelled to retire, established themselves on a hilly district of Ætna called Innesa, and named the placed Ætna. It is distant from Catana about 80 stadia, they still acknowledged Hiero as their founder".

The story, as told by Diodorus Siculus, runs thus:

"Some time after Hieron expelled from their cities the Naxians and Catanians, and in order to repeople them he brought in five thousand from the Peloponnesus and as many from Syracuse. He changed the name of Catana to Ætna, and distributed to these new inhabitants, in number a thousand, not only the territory of Catana but a large part of the neighbourhood.

He hastened on this enterprise both in order to have the newcomers as auxiliaries ready in case of need, and also that he might receive the honours due to the hero who founded a city of 10,000 inhabitants.

As for the Naxians and Catanians driven out, he caused them to be admitted among the Leontini, who accorded to them the rights of citizenship" (XI, 49). Diodorus thus tells the story of the restoration of Catana to the old inhabitants (Book, XI, c. LXXV) : "Ducetius, chief of the Sicels, angry with the Catanians who had usurped the lands of his compatriots declared war against them. The Syracusans also marched against Catana, they divided the land among themselves, and besieged the colony founded by Hiero the tyrant.

The Catanians resisted, but being beaten in various encounters they were driven from Catana and took possession of a town named formerly Ennesia (Ἴνησσαν) but which is called to-day Ætna. It was thus that the primitive inhabitants of Catana regained after a long interval their own land". This refers to the year 461 B.C. Although we know no details of the history of Catana between this time and the Athenian invasion, we know that it was a period of great prosperity to the city.

THE EARLIEST KNOWN ISSUE.

Coins of the descendants of the original settlers from Naxos, issued between 480 and 476 B.C. They consist of Tetradrachms, Obols and Hemiobols.

The tetradrachms bear the type of the river-god Amenanus. Strabo (p. 240) says "after remaining dry for a number of years it again flows". Ovid also noticed this peculiarity (Met., XV, 279), "Nec non Sicaniis volvens Amenanus arenas nunc fluit; interdum suppressio fontibus aret."

The irregularity probably arises from internal changes in the mount Ætna on the slopes of which the river rises.

TETRADRACHMS*.

I. Obv. The river-god Amenanus under the form of a man-headed bull, with tail hanging down, his right, or off fore leg bent, above, a three-branched spray of a river plant to right, beneath, a river fish to right : border of dots.

Rev. KAT ANE. Nike full-length figure, advancing to left, wearing long chiton with diploïs, and bearing fillet in her outstretched right hand : border of dots.

Weight : 251 7 grains.

II. Obv. Similar, but the bull's tail erect over back. In the field above, a water fowl : beneath, a fish to left : similar border.

Rev. K ATA N A ION.

Similar type of Nike, but she holds a wreath, and wears girdle of fillet, and with her left hand she is raising her skirt.

Weight : 266.8 grains.

III. Obv. Similar type of bull, but with tail lowered : on his back Seilenus kneeling to right on left knee, and stretching forward his left hand over the bull's head : beneath, a pistrix to right : border of dots.

Rev. Similar to No I, but the legend KATA N AION : no border of dots.

Weight : 263.6 grains.

IV. Obv. Normal type of bull.

In exergue an ornament of volutes : border of dots.

Rev. KAT AN A ION. Similar type of Nike holding fillet and olive-wreath : in field to left H : border of dots.

Weight : 267.7 grains.

V. Obv. Man-headed bull standing with fore legs straight; above, Nike flying to right holding fillet over bull's neck.

Rev. Similar figure of Nike to No IV, with the same letter H.

Weight : 263.1 grains.

VI. Obv. Same die as No 5.

Rev. KATANA. Similar type, but Nike holds spray instead of wreath : in front, K.

Weight : 259-3 grains.

OBOLS.

The Obol of the Euboic-Attic System weighs 0.73 grammes or 11.11 grains.

The weights of the three specimens in the British Museum are 10.7, 12.7, and 10.9 grains.

Obv. Head of Seilenus to left with pointed ear : border of dots.

Rev. KAT A NE. Thunderbolt with curled wings : border of dots.

HEMIOBOL.

Weight of specimen in British Museum : 4.2 grains.

Obv. Same as on Obol.

Rev. K, winged thunderbolt.

The head of Seilenus also appeared in the Period of Fine Art, sometimes full-face and sometimes in profile to right, and to left, crowned with ivy.

The same head also appeared on the copper coins of Catana crowned with ivy.

Strabo (lib. X, 466) says they (Satyrs and Seileni) are certain dæmons or ministers of the gods "... they are inspired with an enthusiastic and Bacchic frenzy". Homer does not mention Satyrs or Seileni, but Hesiod (Fragment, 94) speaks of them as "good for nothing and unfit for work".

The elder Satyrs are called Seileni and Pausanias says (they call Seilenus) the eldest of all the Satyrs" (Lib. I, XXIII). Euripides calls him "the father of the Satyrs (Cycl., 13, 82). The name Seilenus is said by Diodorus Siculus (III. LXXI) to have been that of a King of Nyssa who had a tail!

In Pausanias (III, XXV) we learn that Seilenus was brought up in Malea and he quotes Pindar (Fragment, 57, διθυραμβοι) as his authority.

The Satyrs and Seileni are always described as fond of wine and as belonging to the retinue of Dionysus. The inference we naturally draw from the representation of Seilenus on the coins of Catana is that the culture of the vine was of importance to the city. The soil round mount Etna was favourable to the vine, and we have seen that Dionysus was worshipped in the neighbouring city Naxos from which the first settlers came to found the city.

COINS ISSUED BETWEEN 476-461 B.C. IN THE CITY BEARING THE NAME ÆTNA.

These are the coins of the men introduced to Catana by Hieron in 476 from Syracuse and the Peloponnesus, in number a thousand.

No change was made in the types of the Obols, the legend however distinguishes these obols from those of the older Catanians, it is on the Reverse with the winged thunderbolt, in a plain border :

AIT NAI or AI NΛ, or AI TN, or AM TIA or AI TN.

The head of Seilenus is in profile to right with pointed ear and bald forehead or wearing ivy-wreath.

One specimen in Brit. Museum is to the left.

TETRADRACHM.

Obverse. AITNAION. Head of Seilenus to right, bald and bearded. crowned with wreath of ivy wrought in a stiff conventional manner, The features are semi-bestial, the ear pointed and bent forward, below the neck a beetle border of dots.

Reverse. Seated draped figure of Zeus to right holding in his left hand a thunderbolt similar in shape to that found on the litræ : his right hand rests on a branch of a vine. The skin of a beast, either a lion or a panther, is hanging over the seat. In front of the god a pine-tree with an eagle perched on the top to right.

This unique coin is now in the collection bequeathed by Baron Hirsch to the Brussels Museum. The style is surprisingly good for the period to which it must be referred, and the type contains touches of local colour of great interest, as for instance the beetle which an ancient commentator on Aristophanes says was found of great size on Mount Etna, and the eagle on the pine tree.

TETRADRACHMS OF THE RESTORED CATANIANS FROM 460 B.C.

I. Obv. KATANAI O N. Head of Apollo to right, laureated; hair turned up behind.

Rev. A quadriga to right, driven by male charioteer, wearing long chiton, and holding his goad in the right hand, and the reins in both hands; the horses are walking. At first sight the horses look like a pair, and it is only from the slight indication of the legs of the other horses we see four were meant. Border of dots.

* All these are very rare.

II. *Obv. Similar type; hair rolled behind. KATANAIO Σ.
Rev. Similar quadriga; above, Nike flying to right crowning the horses: border of dots.

III. *Obv. KATANAION. Young male head of Apollo (?) to left, laureated, hair short and wavy; behind a laurel leaf with berry.
Rev. Normal type with Nike flying to right.

IV. *Obv. Similar head to No III but to right, and behind the head a leaf.

Rev. Similar to last, but Nike flying to left crowning driver.

THE TYPES.

The choice of the god Apollo as the deity to be represented on the coinage of the restored citizens may perhaps be connected with the three attributes commonly applied to this deity. First he was the god who punishes and destroys the wicked and the overbearing, then he was also the god who affords help and wards off evil, and lastly the god who delights in the foundation of cities, and the establishment of civic constitutions. Moreover he was the god who led the Dorians when they invaded the Peloponnesus. This head of Apollo seems to be one of the earliest found on Sicilian coins. At Naxos Apollo appeared later with Silenus. Apollo's head appeared later on electrum coins of Syracuse, also on coins of Acragas, Agyrium, Centuripæ, Halaesa, Lilybaeum and Tauromenium.

The quadriga was a type full of associations with the wealth and love of horse racing by which the old aristocracy were distinguished.

It may however have been used as a type to commemorate some victory of a citizen who had returned to Catana. Psaumis of Camarina won a prize in 452 B.C.

In 473 B.C. Pindar sang of the Victory of Chromius, of Ætna founded by Hiero.

Pindar seems to have visited Ætna in 472 B.C. when he sang of the victory of Chromius, but none of his odes refer to the victory of a Catanian citizen. However, many victories must have been won which are not recorded by the poets. It seems more likely that a victory in some race is commemorated than that the mint-masters simply copied the type of some older city.

(Including the names of several hitherto unpublished artists.)

One-hundred-and-fifty-fifth article.

SOEST, HENRI VAN (Flem.). Mint-master at Namur, 1709; and again, in conjunction with François Blommaert, from 7. May 1714 to 7. December of that year.

SOLARO, LAZARRO DEL (Ital.). Medallist of the second and third quarters of the seventeenth century; pupil of Gaspare Mola.

SOLARI, GIAMBATTISTA (Ital.). A Genoese Medallist of the first half of the eighteenth century. A Portrait-medal of Columbus, dated 1837, bears this Engraver's signature (Avignone, Medaglie dei Liguri e della Liguria, Genova, 1872, p. 82, n° 136).

SOLARI, PHILIPPE (French). Sculptor of the second half of the nineteenth century, born at Aix (Bouches-du-Rhône); pupil of Jouffroy. By him are the following medallic productions recorded by Chavignerie et Auvray: 1869. Portrait-medallion of a Gentleman; — 1875. Another; —1885. M. P. Solari;—1890. M^lle^ Laure Mansion; — M. Plautier; — 1894. Une Arlésienne, etc.

SOLDAMUS Vide SOLDANI infra.

SOLDANI-BENZI, MASSIMILIANO (Ital.). Sculptor and Medallist, born at Florence in 1658, descended from a noble family (nobil fiorentino discendente per fil dirretto da Benzi da Figline e da Lucolena, famiglia nobilissima), but not however from the famous Florentine house of Soldani, which became extinct with the death of Mgr. Filippo Soldani, bishop of Fiesole, at about this time. Heiss mentions that Masters of the Florentine Zecca, of that name, were in office circa 1340-1390. (Méd. Ren., IX, 266). He died at Montevarchi, near Florence, in 1740.

From his childhood Massimiliano manifested artistic taste, modelling figures in clay which he afterwards coloured. In his autobiography (Soldani's letter to Marmi, 18. Sept. 1718; Mss. Magliabecch., classe XVII, cod. II, inserto 53, Bibl. Nazionale, Florence) he states that he began to study drawing in 1678 under Baldassare Franceschini, but the first of his four medals of the naturalist Francesco Redi is dated 1677. An early attempt at an "Assumption of Mary" in bas-relief drew the attention of Giuseppe Anighi, and under the auspices of Cosmo III., Grand Duke of Tuscany, the youth was sent to Rome to complete his studies.

Soon after his arrival in Rome, he modelled Portrait-medals of his two teachers, the painter Ciro Ferri, and sculptor Ercole Ferrata. The latter introduced him to Queen Christina of Sweden, who was so pleased with his work that she wrote to Cosmo III. requesting him to allow Soldani to undertake a series of medals for her. The Grand Duke gave his consent, and the sculptor was commissioned a series of Portrait-medals of the Queen, of a diameter of 63 mill., and two medals of her friend, Cardinal Azzolino. These medals will be found described below. During his residence in Rome, Soldani further modelled Portrait-medals of Cardinal Flavio Chigi, Francesco Redi, the poet Vincenzo Filicaia, and a medallion without reverse of Cardinal Rospigliosi. Queen Christina intended the artist to execute a series of over one hundred medals which were to form her "Histoire Métallique". She had planned and chosen the subjets, but Cosmo III. recalled Soldani to Florence, whither he returned after a stay of four years in the Eternal City. About that time he produced a fine Bas-relief representing the "Decollation of St. John the Baptist".

Soon after, Soldani was sent to Paris, and modelled there a large medallion of Louis XIV (with R/ legend : MUNDO SIC OTIA FECIT), Hercules resting after slaying the Lernean hydra. Ten months later, in 1686, we find him again in Florence where for the next fifty-four years of his life he was engaged in the execution of numerous medals, bas-reliefs, small figures in gold, silver and bronze, of exquisite workmanship. His last productions are the magnificent candelabras in bronze in the Church of the Annunciation at Florence, and the mausoleums of Marc Antonio Zondadari, and Manoel da Vilhena, grand masters of Malta, which he did in commission for Grand Duke Ferdinand.

Soldani's medals are generally of large size, and always cast. They are well executed and correctly drawn. The artist being essentially a sculptor, he was obliged to have recourse to an Engraver to cut dies for the struck medals. G. B. Guglielmada was Soldani's collaborator in connection with the medals of Queen Christina, many of which are unsigned; some however bear Guglielmada's signature, although the dies were made from Soldani's models. Baron de Bildt describes the following medals of the Swedish Queen by these artists : (a) ℞ NEC · SINIT · ESSE · FEROS. Female figure, personifying the Queen, leading four lions; in ex : S. D. G.; cast specimens are signed : SOLDANVS, or M. SOLDANVS, on obv. and M. S. F. on ℞.; struck pieces have G. F. on obv. in headdress; (b) POSSIS · NIHIL · VRBE . ROMA · VISERE · MAIVS. Roma Victrix seated to left (cast and struck specimens); — (c) HIC AMOR HAEC PATRIA EST. Dea Roma, similar to last (cast and struck specimens); — (d) Four varieties of portraits, illustrated on Pl. XIII of Baron de Bildt's work, occurring with reverses bearing the letters G. D. (Gloria Deo); — FORTIS · ET · FELIX. Lion in constellation of eleven stars, &c.; — NEC FALSO NEC ALIENO. Sun in splendour; — VICTORIA MAXIMA. Victory standing on globe; NE MI BISOGNA NE MI BASTA. Globe. Some of these medals are cast and signed by Soldani; others are struck, and engraved by Guglielmada, and other artists.

By Soldani are also Portrait-medals of Cardinal Azzolino, with two reverse types, cast by Soldani, engraved by Guglielmada; a third, known only from struck pieces bearing the intials P. B. for Peter Paul Borner, appears to be from a model by Soldani.

Further works by Soldani are : Paolo Falconieri, 1679; — Dr John Inglis Lewisham, 1703; signed : M. S. (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{259}{41}$); — Henry Newton, 1709 (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{364}{209}$); — Dr Francesco Redi of Arezzo, 1677, 1684, 1684 and 1685 (signed variously : M. SOLDANVS; M SOLD., or S. M.), etc.

Amongst Soldani's pupils, Antonio Selvi, Bartolomeo Vaggelli, and the two brothers Weber are the best known as Medallists.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Bolzenthal, op. cit. — Medallic Illustrations, &c. — Baron de Bildt, Les Médailles romaines de Christine de Suède, Rome, 1908.

SOLDI-COLBERT, ÉMILE (French). Sculptor, Medallist and Author, a Dane by birth but naturalized a Frenchman, was born at Paris on 29. May 1846, and died in Rome in 1906, at the age of sixty. His real name was SOLDYCK. He was a pupil of Farochon, Lequesne, and Dumont. Grand Prix de Rome in medal-engraving, and a Member of the Société des gens de lettres; Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1878.

Special mention is due to his series of publications on the sacred language, primitive symbolic writing, etc.; he also translated Hans Andersen's fairy tales into French, and wrote books on etymology and archaeology in collaboration with his mother. By him are also : 'Recueil et Mémoires pour l'Histoire et l'Art', and 'La Sculpture égyptienne'. For some time he worked as a bookbinder, and for many years he has exhibited medallions, busts, engravings, etc., at the Salon.

Chavignerie et Auvray give the following list of medallic and glyptic works by this artist : 1869. Fortune and the Child (after La Fontaine's fable); — 1873. Gallia, bronze medallion in high relief; — Actaeon, onyx cameo; — Medal to the memory of the Victims of the Invasion; — Souvenir of Venice, in pietra dura; — 1876. Homage to Beethoven; — Allegorical Medal on the Reconstruction of Paris Buildings; — 1876. To the Victims of the Invasion; — Memorial medal of the 'Mobiles' of Seine-Inférieure; — Duchess Colonna de Castiglione; — M. L. O. M ; — Mlle Bernardina Gismondi, silver medal; — Henriette de Belfort, bronze medal; — Mlle Bergolt, etc.

M. Roger Marx illustrates in Médailleurs contemporains, pl. XXX, a very fine medal by him, representing Charity.

For his colleagues of the Société des gens de lettres Soldi modelled a Jeton de présence which serves also as a Prize medal for the Lauréats of the 'cité Rougemont'. This Plaquette representing on obv. 'Thought animating the Universe' is particularly fine. Other good productions are his Plaquette to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the Invention of Photography, 1889, and that of the Association française des Étudiants de Paris, 1892.

"Soldi", says M. Babelon, "fut à ses débuts, en 1869, grand prix de Rome pour la gravure en médailles et sur pierres fines; ses premiers travaux firent concevoir les plus belles espérances. Lui-même eut l'ambition, un moment, de faire renaître la gravure des gemmes, et son livre, "les Arts méconnus", renferme d'excellents chapitres sur la technique de cet art difficile. Malheureusement, dans les dernières années de sa carrière, Soldi voulut être à la fois érudit et artiste; il s'égara dans les recherches d'archéologie pour lesquelles il n'avait qu'une insuffisante préparation; la publication de gros livres, dans lesquels l'imagination touffue de l'artiste déborde au détriment de la science positive, l'absorba au point de lui faire négliger la pratique des arts pour lesquels il avait une réelle vocation. Ce fut dommage. Soldi était un tempérament d'artiste; la fougue, l'indépendance d'esprit, l'activité fébrile, le souci de l'originalité, le dédain du poncif et de la routine, voilà ce qui le caractérisait. Il meurt après avoir fanatiquement caressé de beaux rêves, et n'ayant réalisé qu'en partie les belles espérances que certaines de ses œuvres avaient fait naître." (Les Salons de 1906, Revue de l'Art, II, 61.)

Bibliography. — Chavignerie et Auvray, op. cit. — Nouveau Larousse illustré. — Revue numismatique, 1904.

SOLEY (Amer.). Engraver of the second and third quarters of the nineteenth century, only known to me from his medal, with bust of Washington, which is described in Martin's Masonic Medals, p. 112, n° CCLXXII.

SOLINGHEM dit PITRE, PIERRE VAN (French). Forger and Die-engraver at the Mint of Vimy, 1655-56. He was appointed on 1. July 1655 to forge and engrave puncheons for the Liards in pure red copper. The King's commissary, Jean de Marceau, decided by order of 10. December 1655, that this Engraver should continue in office.

Bibliography. — Rondot, op. cit., p. 302. — Ibid., Graveurs de Lyon, p. 79.

SOLLIER, PAUL LOUIS EUGÈNE (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Paris; pupil of M. Charles Cordier. By him are several Portrait-medallions which he has exhibited at the Salon from 1869 to 1889, in which latter year he had a portrait of Dr Claverie.

SOLON (Greek). Ancient Gem-engraver, a contemporary of Dioscorides, who probably flourished during the early part of the first century of our era under Augustus. He is only known by his works; some of the subjects he has treated are the same as those of Dioscorides.

Winckelmann, Stosch and others have ascribed various gems to him, and although some critics have since disputed the existence of this Engraver, modern writers have rehabilitated him.

The following 'ancient' gems bear this artist's signature : Diomedes carrying off the Palladium, 19 × 17 mill.; signed : COΛΩN ΕΠΟΙΕΙ. This gem is now lost; impressions were formerly in the Strozzi Cabinet at Rome; a bad modern copy exists at St. Petersburg; another is in Berlin. The original was undoubtedly ancient (Furtwängler, Jahrb., 1888, p. 308); — So-called Bust of Maecenas (formerly described as Solon, and now as Cicero); cornelian, 18 × 15 mill.; signed : COΛΩNOC. Apparently only known now by four modern replicas at Naples, Vienna, Ludovisi-Piombino Coll[n] (Jahrb., pl. XI, 17), and Riccardi-Poniatowski (Stosch 62). The original was in 1570 in the Fulvio Orsini collection; — Head of Medusa; chalcedony, 29 × 25 mill. (in the British Museum); signed : ΣOΛΩNOC. This gem was found in Rome at the beginning of the eighteenth century, on the Caelius, near San Giovanni e Paolo. The signature may have been added by the dealer Sabbatini, who sold it to Leo Strozzi. It passed from the Blacas Collection to the British Museum. The Strozzi Medusa was copied several times; already in 1729 the Costanzi reproduced it for Cardinal Polignac. It is known that in 1730 Strozzi replaced several originals in his collection by reproductions, and it is possible therefore that the Blacas-British Museum gem is one of the latter. Mme Preissler executed a good copy, in a smaller size; also Jouffroy, on an amethyst; and Giovanni Pichler, another, which is of considerable merit.

Diomedes carrying off the Palladium.

Head of Medusa.

Cupid standing; cornelian, 12 × 9 mill.; signed : COΛΩNOC. A suspicious gem, condemned by Furtwängler; — Bust of Bacchante; signed COΛΩN. The original is lost, and only known from a paste in the Berlin Museum. M. Babelon considers the type a copy of a Greek statue of the Vth century B.C. Furtwängler admits the authenticity of the original.

The fictitious signature of Solon occurs on the following modern gems: Emperor leaning on his shield (Raspe); — Head of Faun; chalcedony; — Laureated head of Hercules, front face (Stosch); — Veiled bust of Livia as Ceres; sard (Gori); — Victory Apteros sacrificing a bull; sard fragment (Stosch).

Amongst Poniatowski's gems, signed Solon, Prendeville's Catalogue describes : Apollo killing the serpent Python; oriental cornelian; — Diana, as Hecate, killing a Titan; oriental cornelian; — Echidna stealing the horses of Hercules; oriental cornelian; — Echidna receiving a bow from Hercules; oriental sardonyx; — Hercules extracting the arrow from the centaur Chiron; cornelian; — The Souls of the Guilty drinking the blood of the victim offered by Hercules; oriental cornelian; — Hercules and Omphale; oriental cornelian; — The punishment of Marsyas; oriental sardonyx; — The punishment of Phlegyas; oriental cornelian; — Minerva putting the bridle on Pegasus; amethyst; — Jupiter, Juno, and Vulcan; cornelian; — Menelaus defending the body of Patroclus; cornelian; — Hector engaging to reward the spy Dolon; cornelian; — Ulysses extracting the arrow from the foot of Diomedes; sardonyx; — Æolus, at the solicitation of Juno, letting loose the winds, to destroy the fleet of Aeneas; cornelian; — Venus laying down Ascanius when asleep; cornelian; — Laocoon hurling a spear at the wooden horse of Troy; cornelian; — Æneas meeting Andromache at the cenotaph of Hector; cornelian; — Venus entreating Neptune to favour the voyage of Aeneas after leaving Sicily; sardonyx; — Mezentius bathing his wound in the Tiber; cornelian.

Raspe describes other works signed Solon : Term of Pan and Faun; COVVNOC; — Cupid Pacific; COΛΩNOC; — Mars; COΛΩNOC; — Victory on her knees about to strike a bull with her knife; COMΩ; — Head of Medusa; ΣOΛΩNOC (several varieties, in various stones); — Diomedes carrying off the Palladium; COΛΩNOC; — Another; COΛΩN ЄПOIЄI; — Head of Maecenas (Cicero); ΣOΛΩNOΣ; another, with COVUNOC; — another; COΛΩNOC.

SOLTYCK, MICHAEL (Pol.). Medallist of the eighteenth century, by whom is a fine series of Portrait-medal of Polish celebrities; size : 55 mill. I have one before me of John Zamoyski, Chancellor of the Kingdom, 1598.

SOMMERVAILLE (Brit.). The signature SOMMERVAILLE FEC. occurs on a portrait ($\frac{7}{8}$ in.), taken from a gem, of Benjamin Bell, surgeon, in the enamelled paste of the Tassies, enclosed in a raised octagonal border, and inscribed on the field behind the head.

SOMERWIL, P. (Dutch). Contemporary Die-sinker of Leyden, by whom are Prize medals, etc. amongst which I have seen : Foundation of the Students' Association "Minerva" at Leyden, 1877; — Foundation of the Society of students 'Phoenix' at Delft, 1879, etc.

SONDO, JEAN DE (also DE SONDE or DU SONDO) (French). Goldsmith of Bayonne (..1539-1542), worked as Engraver at the Mint of Bordeaux.

SONN (SOHN, SCHON), BASILIUS VON (Germ.). Forge-master at the Prague Mint (Wiener Num. Zeits., Bd. 27, p. 195); Mint-master at Reichenstein, 1608-1612, and Oels from 1612 to 1614; died 1628.

His son, of the same name, was Mint-master at Blottnitz near Reichenstein, where he died in 1668.

SONNEMAENS, MATTHAEUS (Dutch). Mint-master at Dordrecht, 1679-1714.

SONNENSCHEIN, TOBIAS (Germ.). Mint-master to Count Albrecht v. Waldstein at Jicin, circ. 1630. His privy-mark is a sun in splendour. He contracted to work the Mint at Brünn, 1635-1637.

SONS, GASTON (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Paris; pupil of M. Hiolle. He exhibited Portrait-medallions in bronze of M. Verdier, and of M. Godard, at the Salon of 1889 and 1890.

SONSBEECK, RUDOLF VAN (Dutch). Mint-master at Kampen, 1659-1668; privy-mark : a sun.

SORANZO, MARCO (Ital.). Mint-master at Venice, 1765-1766.

SORANZO, MARIO AURELIO (Ital.). Mint-master at Venice, 1659.

SORANZO, ZACCARIA (Ital.). Mint-master at Cattaro, 1612-1614.

SORBERGER, JOHANN GEORG (Germ.). Medallist of the latter part of the seventeenth century, a native of Gotha; died in 1703. He was in the service of the Ducal family, for whom he executed several medals. Later he became Mint-master at Meiningen.

Among his medallic works I may mention : Medal on the firmness of Charles II, 1683 (?) (Med. Ill., I, $\frac{595}{270}$); — Namur retaken, 1695 (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{130}{380}$); — Medal of the National Association, with bust of William III, 1696 (Med. Ill., II, $\frac{455}{420}$); — Portrait-medal of Frederick I, of Saxe-Gotha, undated (Tenz. 68, 1); — Posthumous Marriage medal of Frederick I (T., 65, II); Memorial medal of the same Duke (T., 67, III), etc.

Christian Wermuth appears to have imitated some of Sorberger's medals.

SORNET, EDMONDE JEAN LOUIS (Fench). Sculptor, born at Paris, 18. January 1802, died in 1876; was a pupil of Bosio, and entered the École des Beaux Arts in 1821; was awarded a medal of the third class in 1839. He is said to have contributed to Durand's Medallic series of celebrated Men.

SOSION $\left(\frac{\Sigma\Omega\Sigma I}{\Omega N}\right)$ (Sicil.). The two earliest Syracusan Coin-engravers whose signatures occur on coin-dies appear to be Eumenes and Sosion. Holm (III, p. 608) shows that ΣΩΣΙΩΝ probably flourished towards the middle of the fifth century B.C. A contemporary, if not a pupil of Eumenes, his types bear a strong analogy to those of the latter engraver, although they exhibit a varying finer execution.

" Das Haar ist bereits nach der sicilischen Mode der Mitte des 5. Jahrhunderts vom Scheitel nach allen Seiten heruntergekämmt und hinten wieder in die Höhe genommen, und dort vermittelst einer Unterlage in zwei Absätzen nach oben gelegt. Vorne sind die Haare gewellt und ebenfalls um eine Unterlage oder eine Binde gewickelt, nach oben gelegt. Der Haarwulst hinten ist entweder frei zu sehen, oder durch ein breites Band, eine sogenannte Sphendone, bedeckt. In diesen beiden Arten der Behandlung des Haarwulstes liegt der Ursprung der Verschiedenheit der Köpfe der Dekadrachmen des Euainetos und des Kimon. Der Kopf des Sosion entspricht vollkommen denen des Eumenes mit hinten freiem Haar. " (Holm, Geschichte Siciliens in Alterthum, III, p. 600).

Syracusan Tetradrachm, by Sosion.

Æ. Tetradrachm (Circ. B.C. 440). Obv. ΣΥΡΑΚΟ ΣΙΟΝ. Head of Arethusa to left, wearing earring and necklace to which is suspended an ornament in form of a ram's head; on the ampyx, across front of head, $\frac{\Sigma O\Sigma I}{\Omega N}$; around, four dolphins.

℞. Quadriga to left, driven by charioteer, holding goad in right hand, reins in both; horses galloping in step; above, Nike flying to right, carrying an untied wreath, and about to crown charioteer; in ex. : two dolphins meeting : border of dots.

Weight of British Museum specimen : 266.8 grs.

The Reverse of this coin is possibly by Eumenes.

The British Museum specimen reads only $\frac{\Sigma\ldots}{\Omega N}$, but that in the Berlin Cabinet bears the full signature ΣΩΣΙΩΝ.

Slight varieties in the headdress are known. Some of these, although unsigned, may be by Sosion (cf. Evans Sale, 1898, pl. IV, n° 92).

SOSOCLES. The authentic signature CѠCOCΛ (which was transcribed CѠCOKΛE by Picart) should be read Σῶσος λε... (Vide SOSOS infra). The inscription ΣΩCIKΛH which occurs on modern gems, and has been used by unscrupulous engravers or dealers of the eighteenth century, is possibly copied from that found on the statue of an Amazon in the Capitol Museum.

SOSOS (Greek). Signature of a Gem-engraver, who is supposed to have flourished in the period following that of Praxiteles. It occurs on a Medusa head, in chalcedony, formerly in Cardinal Ottoboni's collection at Rome, and later in possession of Rondanini, then Carlisle, and now in the British Museum. This gem was known from the beginning of the XVIIth century, when it was published by Stephanoni. It is perfectly genuine, as well as the signature CѠCOΛ which should read Σῶσος λε... Pichler considered it superior to Solon's Medusa.

Prof. Furtwängler remarks :

CѠCOCΛ

" Die Inschrift des Künstlers befindet sich da wo es der freie Raum der Grundfäche verstattete, wiederum horizontal, mit kleinen im Abdrucke rechtsläufigen Buchstaben geschrieben C ѠCOCΛ (beistehend vergrössert). Auch die Schrift stimmt mit derjenigen der vorigen Steine überein; die Kugeln fehlen oder sind kaum bemerklich. Die länger gezogene erste Hasta des letzten Buchstabens errinnert an die Agathopus-Inschrift. Das Sigma ist auffallend gleich dem des Onesas. An der Aechtheit kann nicht der geringste Zweifel sein; die Schrift ist von derjenigen der Fälschungen des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts völlig verschieden. Die Bedenken Köhler's sind nichtig und beruhen auf falscher Deutung der Inschrift, die Brunn zuerstrichtig erklärt hat, indem er bemerkte, man müsse von dem letzten Zeichen absehen, wo sich dann der völlig correcte Name Σῶσος ergäbe. Köhler las Σωσεκλ, indem er annahm, der Schreiber hätte statt griechischem κ lateinisches C gesetzt; er stand damit unter dem Einflusse der von ihm selbst als falsch erkannten Lesung des Stosch, der CѠCOKΛЄ als auf dem Steine stehend gab. Die Vorgänger von Stosch, Canini und Maffei hatten ganz richtig gelesen was da steht, aber es unerklärt gelassen, was Köhler auch in seiner Annahme der Fälschung hätte zweifelhaft machen müssen. — Was aber das Schliefszeichen der Inschrift bedeutet, vermag ich nicht zu sagen. Vielleicht ist der Rand des Steines abgeschliffen und es folgte ursprünglich noch mehr." (Furtwängler, Jahrb., 1888, p. 214.

There is a copy of that gem by Natter, for Hemsterhuis : in the Hague Collection.

The inscription CΩCOKΛ on a sardonyx bust of Junius Brutus proves to be a forgery.

SOSTHENES. Visconti proposed the signature Sosthenes as the correct reading of the inscription on the Medusa head, ascribed to Sosos. Köhler condemned the gem as "a stone never employed by the ancients; its origin too is betrayed by its uncommon harshness and the want of taste in the rendering of the hair; the blunders in the name could not have been made in ancient times." (King, Handbook, p. 270.)

SOSTRATUS (Greek), Gem-engraver of the hellenistic period.

The inscription CΩCTPATOY occurs on various gems, which are not all antique. Perhaps one of the best is an intaglio, depicting "Nike sacrificing a bull" (illustrated), formerly in the Carlisle collection. A replica, of exquisite and microscopic workmanship, on a golden sard, from the Morrison sale was sold by Messrs. Rollin and Feuardent in Paris (May 1905, lot 93). Pichler judged it a work of the sixteenth, and Stephani of the eighteenth century. Furtwängler considered it an eighteenth century production.

Similarly signed is a fragment of a cameo in agate, representing 'Cupid taming two lionesses' (Cardinal Ottoboni, Lord Carlisle, and now Brit. Mus.). The antiquity of the gem is beyond question, but the name is probably an addition.

Another cameo in agate, representing Meleager and Atalanta, bears the signature CΩTPATOY (sic). This gem is in the British Museum collection from the Ottoboni and Carlisle collections. The two heads have been restored, which points to the authenticity of the cameo, but the inscription is probably modern.

King and Babelon mention as a work by Sostratos a cameo, in the Naples Museum, signed CΩCTPATOY, showing a winged female figure (Eos or Nike) in a biga galloping. This cameo once belonged to Lorenzo di' Medici, who had his name engraved on it: LAVR MED. King mentions: "The work allowed antique by Köhler and Stephani, but the inscription pronounced an addition in the taste of the eighteenth century, being scratched in with small fine lines with dots at the ends; and placed over the horses because the proper place for them was already occupied by the name of Lorenzo. It is hard to see how such an addition could have been made, inasmuch as the cameo came into the Farnese Coll. through Margaretta, widow of Alessandro de' Medici, and never subsequently passed through a dealer's hands; hence Stephani's theory cannot be admitted without further proof." Furtwängler considers the inscription as genuine.

None of the other gems, bearing the inscription CΩCTPATOY, are antique. The best known are: Bellerophon watering Pegasos, sard (Raspe). A copy from the bas-relief of the Villa Spada; — Nereid riding upon a sea-serpent. Stephani styles the work insignificant, and King adds that the inscription is evidently from a modern hand: — Nereid on a hippocampus, cameo quoted by Winckelmann; — Venus Anadyomene; "a cameo sold by Casanova for 300 l. to a Dr Matti, "says King". As he had received it from his brother the painter, it was most likely done from a design of his, and the buyer what his name imports, i. e. a madman; — Seated Faun holding fast a Bacchante, OCTPAT above, quoted by Panofka, is altogether modern. Furtwängler however thinks the gem may be old.

"Stephani states that the Devonshire Victory (the gem reproduced above) was the starting-point, whence the forgers commenced with the employment of this name. This gem was in existence before 1723, though not published by Natter until 1754. Stephani thinks its style agrees with that of Natter's earliest works. Brunn however believes it taken from the Farnese gem" (King, Handbook, &c., p. 271).

There is still a good deal of divergence in the opinions of critics as to the authenticity of certain gems which figured in prominent eigteenth century collections, and it is in some cases almost impossible to decide.

SOUFFLOT FILS ET H. ROBERT (French). Editors of medals, whose signature I have noted on a medal of Dr Gregoire Pacheco of Sucre, Bolivia.

SOULA, PAUL (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Toulouse; a pupil of Falguière. At the Salon of 1893 he exhibited a Portrait-medallion in terra cotta.

SOUSA (or SOUZA), ANTONIO NUNES DE (Port.). Born in 1760, died 16. April 1787; was apprenticed Engraver at the Mint of Lisbon, and obtained an official appointment on 29. April 1779.

SOUSA E SILVA, CYPRIANO THOMAS PAES DE (Port.). A pupil of Antonio Mongin, appointed Engraver at the Lisbon Mint in 1744, but abandoned the art of die-sinking on being made Chief-assayer to the Mint.

SOUTON (French). Director of the Mint at Pau, circ. 1750-1779; privy-mark, a hand of justice under the shield. The coins which bear the mint-mark, a cow, were engraved by Duvivier, whose privy-mark is a sheaf beside the date.

SOZZINI (or SOSINI), GIOVANNI BATTISTA (Ital.). Goldsmith, Modeller in wax, Die-cutter and Engraver in crystal and precious stones, who flourished during the first half of the sixteenth century. He is mentioned by Bolzenthal (p. 116) as having prepared dies for coins and medals.

Hans Fuchs von Bimbach, 1556.

SPAGNOLI, JACOPO (Ital.). Papal Mint-master at Ferrara, 1654-1656. The initials I. S, or monogram $ occur on currency of Innocent X, issued at that mint (Vide Cinagli, Monete de' Papi, pp. 232, 234, 239, 240, 241, etc.).

SPALLETTA (Ital.). Contemporary Die-sinker, residing at Rome, by whom I have seen medals commemorating the Visit of William II. to Rome in 1888, of varied types.

SPALTENKEIL, HANS (Austr.). Die-sinker at Kremnitz, circ. 1558, appointed Engraver at the Mint there, 15 December 1562; in 1564 he was in receipt of a yearly salary of 104 fl. with 1 fl. weekly for his keep. Abraham Ayszkher succeeded him on 25. April 1575. He died some time before 1599.

SPANGENBERG, CHRISTIAN PHILIPP (Germ.). Mint-warden at Clausthal in 1716, Master in 1725, and Director from 1729 to 1751, in which year he was deposed. His initials occur on Brunswick and Lüneburg currency of George II. and III. of Great Britain.

The compilers of Medallic Illustrations call Spangenberg a Medallist, but I do not know whether he actually engraved dies. If so the Memorial Thaler, $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{8}$ Thaler struck on the death of George I. 1727, bearing his initials C. P. S., would be his work, Memorial currency issued on the decease of Duke Augustus William, 1731, shows on obv. an S, which also stands for Spangenberg.

Spangenberg was acting as Mint-master at Friedberg in 1747 (E. Lejeune, Die Münzen der reichsunmittelbaren Burg Friedberg i. d. Wetterau).

Several references to Spangenberg's activity as Director of the Clausthal mint occur in Frhr. v. Schrötter, Die hannöverschen Goldgulden, 1748-1756, Zeits. für Numismatik, 1904, p. 167.

NUMISMATICA ROMANA.

TRE NUOVE COMBINAZIONI DI TESTE.

Nel breve periodo di sei mesi, ebbi la fortuna di poter arricchire la già numerosa serie delle monete romane a doppia effigie di tre bronzi offrenti nuove combinazioni non mai incontrate finora, un Gran Bronzo di Filippo Figlio e Trajano Decio e due medaglioni pure di bronzo l'uno colle teste di Trajano Decio e d'Etruscilla, l'altro con quelle di Caro e Magnia Urbica.

Ho illustrato i tre pezzi in tre fascicoli della Rivista Italiana di Numismatica (III e IV del 1910 e II del 1911), credo che un breve cenno riassuntivo possa avere interesse per alcuni fra i lettori della Num. Circular.

I

Gran Bronzo colle effigi di Filippo Figlio e di Trajano Decio.

Obv. IMP C M IVL PHILIPPVS AVG. Busto laureato di Filippo Figlio a destra.

℞. IMP C M Q TRAIANVS DECIVS AVG. Busto laureato di Trajano Decio a destra.

Il Gran Bronzo non fu coniato originariamente quale oggi si trova; ma era un gran bronzo di Filippo juniore, sul rovescio del quale, venne riconiata l'effigie di Trajano Decio.

Come e perchè può essere avvenuta tale riconiazione? Può essa storicamente ammettersi?

La storia non ha nulla in contrario, anzi può confermare la moneta. Filippo padre, come è noto, veniva ucciso alla battaglia di Verona. Appena la notizia giunse a Roma, è probabile che il partito favorevole al figlio Filippo, abbia creduto, per salvagli il trono, di acclamare come Augusto il vecchio Decio, associandogli quale collega il giovane principe. Tale supposizione può dare una sufficiente spiegazione di una coniazione eccezionale e frettolosa, eseguita, appunto per fare più presto a mezzo della riconiazione di monete già in corso. Certamente tale emissione non poteva essere che molto ristretta, e ciò spiega come un solo esemplare sia finora comparso alla luce. — Il Gran Bronzo fu trovato a Roma lo scorso 1910.

II

Medaglione cerchiato di Trajano Decio ed Etruscilla.

Obv. IMP C M Q TRAIANVS DECIVS AVG. Busto radiato e corazzato di Trajano Decio a destra.

℞. HERENNIA ETRVSCILLA AVG. Busto diademato di Etruscilla a destra, circondato dalla luna falcata.

Dei parecchi tipi di monete a più effigi, della famiglia di Trajano Decio, uno solo è conosciuto in doppio esemplare, gli altri sono tutti unici.

Il Museo dell'Eremitaggio a Pietroburgo possiede un medaglione di bronzo, tuttora inedito, colle teste di Decio, Erennio ed Ostiliano; il museo Correr di Venezia un gran bronzo colle medesime teste. Il Museo imperiale di Vienna, un Medaglione di bronzo colla famiglia completa, Decio ed Etruscilla, Erennio ed Ostiliano. E in argento, un medaglioncino o doppio Antoniniano, nella collezione dello scrivente, riproduce il tipo a tre teste, mentre i Musei di Berlino e di Parigi possiedono ciascuno un esemplare del tipo a quattro teste.

Mancava il tipo che dovrebbe essere il più ovvio, dell' Augusto e dell' Augusta ed è quello che ora presento nel bellissimo medaglione cerchiato, ritrovato a Roma verso la fine dello scorso 1910.

III

Medaglione a due metalli di Caro e Magnia Urbica.

Dopo la famiglia di Decio e quella di Gallieno, l'uso delle monete a (effigie) multipla era stato abbandonato e non venne ripreso che dalla famiglia di Caro.

Di tale famiglia erano finora conosciuti, in oro il Medaglione di Carino e Magnia Urbica, trovato a Roma nel 1903 ed ora appartenente al Museo Nazionale Romano, e un altro di Caro e Carino nel Museo imperiale di Vienna.

In bronzo, oltre al Quinario di Carino e Magnia Urbica noto in tre esemplari non si conoscono che tre medaglioni, tutti come quelli d'oro in unico esemplare; di Caro e Carino a Parigi, di Caro e Numeriano a Buda Pest, di Caro, Numeriano e Carino a Zagabria. Ora appare quello di Caro e Magnia Urbica, il più bello come conservazione e il più largo e pesante di tutti.

L'abbinamento di Suocero e Nuora è nuovo in numismatica e il medaglione, certamente coniato nell' occasione del Matrimonio di Carino, ci arreca storicamente 1° la notizia che Magnia Urbica era e divenne moglie di Carino, ancora vivendo Caro; 2° la conferma che Carino venne dal padre associato all' impero non solo come Cesare; ma come Augusto. Urbica difatti porta il titolo d'Augusta.

L'importantissimo medaglione non è di scavo recente; ma ebbi il piacere di scoprirlo in una meschinissima collezione, dove da molti e molti anni giaceva ignorato e dimenticato in mezzo a una congerie di pezzi sconservati e di falsificazioni.

33. Quattrino. Obv. As 31, but with Gonzaga eagle on papal shield, to imitate arms of Gregory XIII.
Rev. As 33. Copy of Ancona coin.
34. Quattrino. Obv. As 33. Gregory XIII.
Rev. SANTUS.PETRUS.C(astilionis). The Saint (without mitre) standing.
35. Quattrino. Obv. RO.GO.etc. as 33. Gregory XIII.
Rev. As 34.
36. Spurious imitation of the quarti of Savoy issued by Charles Emmanuel I. Obv. ROD.GON.MAR.A.S.R.I.; and across the field of the coin (in Gothic letters imitating the famous FERT motto of the House of Savoy) CAST.

FERDINAND I. PRINCE OF CASTIGLIONE. 1616-78.

This prince, while not descending to the depths of infamy reached by his relative Rodolfo, had no objection to increase his mint output (and, therefore, his income) by copying the copper coins of some of his contemporaries.

37. An imitation of a quattrino of Pesaro. Obv. The crowned Gonzaga eagle, without inscription.
Rev. S.NAZARIUS. The Saint standing.
38. Billon. Copied from a Giorgino of Modena. Obv. FER.D.G.CAST.PRINC. Ex. ETC. Bust r.
Rev. PROTECTOR.NOSTER. Mitred Saint seated. Two variants of the above legend are known.
39. Imitated from a small copper coin of the Genoese Republic.
Obv. FERD.D.G.CAST.PRIN. Arms of Genoa — shield with plain cross.
Rev. REGINA.CAELI. Half-length figure of the B. Virgin with Child.
39. A copy of a Tuscan quattrino. Obv. FERDI D.G.S.R.I. CAST.PRI. Crowned arms (quarterings lion, eagle, fasces, and coiled Visconti serpent of Milan—Ferdinand married a Countess Sforza-Visconti).
Rev. S.IOAN.BAPTISTA. St. John standing as on the coins of Florence.
40. Quattrino. Variant of imitation of Florentine coin — 39. Obv. FERDI.D.G.PRIN.CASTI. Arms as 39, but small shield is charged on large one.
Rev. As 39.
41. Copied from the well-known quattrini of Lucca. Obv. FERD.D.G.CAS(tilionis).PRINC. In the field is a large L between the numerals 6-5.
Rev. VULTUS.SANCTUS. The Holy Face crowned.

NOVELLARA.

A town in the province of Reggio d'Emilia, district of Guastalla. Formed into a county in favour of a branch of the Gonzaga family in 1372, a mint was opened in 1533, with the sanction of Charles V. The mint was closed in 1688, and the County of Novellara, owing to the extinction of the ruling family, was merged in Modena in 1728.

The blundered legends of so many of these Gonzaga imitations are due to the ignorance of the artificers employed in their production.

COUNT ALFONSO II. GONZAGA, 1650-88.

1. (Numbers 1 to 5 are copies of quattrini of Lucca). Obv. LAUS.E.PROT.NOVE(llara). L between 6-3.
Rev. SALVS.ET PROTECTIO.NOVE(llara). The Holy Face crowned. Zanetti states that this coin was minted in 1651.
2. Obv. LAUS.E.PROT.NOVE. Field L between 6-1.
Rev. SANCTVS.VVLTVS, etc. as 1.
3. Obv. ET.NOVEL.PROT. Field L between 6-4.
Rev. UNICA SPES E.SALUS, etc, as 1.
4. Obv. E.NOVEL.PROTEC, etc. as 1.
Rev. SPES.E.SALVUNICA, etc. as 1.
5. Obv. As 1, except L between 6-1.
Rev. DEI.ED....S.EL. This blundered legend is seemingly meaningless.

The Holy Face of Lucca, referred to above, is an ancient crucifix carved in cedar wood, and supposed to have been made by Nicodemus. It was brought to Lucca in 780, and was one of the earliest images to attain a European reputation. It will be remembered that the favourite imprecation of William Rufus was "per vultum de Lucca" the "face of Lucca".

IMITATION OF BOLOGNA SESINI.

6. Sesino. Obv. BONA..PROTECTOR.N(ovellara). The papal tiara surmounted by crossed keys.
Rev. SAN.P-ETRUS. The Apostle enthroned holding model of church.
7. Obv. BONUS.PROTECTOR.N(ovellara), etc. as 6.
Rev. SANC-PETRUS, etc. as 6. Sesino.
8. Sesino. Obv. BA.NO-VEL(lara)-CO.ET-1664.
Rev. Bolognese lion rampant with banner to l.

SOLFERINO.

A town in Lombardy, province of Mantua, district of Castiglione delle Stivere. Granted by Venice in the fifteenth century to the Gonzagas of Mantua, in 1586 Cristierno Gonzaga, son of the Marquis of Castiglione, was invested with the fief, and at his death the state passed to his son : —

CARLO, 1640-78.

Who opened a mint and issued money, first with the title of SULFERINI.DOMINUS, and after 1643 with that of SULFERINI.MARCHIO.

1. Quattrino. Obv. S.PETRUS.PONTI.MAX. Bust of St. Peter r.
Rev. S.NICOL.PROT.SOL. St. Nicholas with mitre standing facing.
Copied from Murajole of Bologna.
2. Obv. MARCH—SUL—FARINI—1643.
Rev. Bolognese lion rampant with standard to l.
3. Obv. MARCH.SULFA—RINI.1645.
Rev. As 2.

2 and 3 are imitations of quattrini of Bologna, both there coins ar lighter than their prototypes — their introduction into Bologna was prohibited in decrees of 1645 and 1659.

BOZOLO.

A town in the province of Mantua, erected into a principality by Charles V., and conceded to Giulio Cesare Gonzaga (on the death of Vespasiano Gonzaga Duke or Sabbioneta) in 1593. The former promptly opened a mint at Bozzolo, from which an extensive series of coins was issued, including a few counterfeits.

1. Scudo in imitation of the well-known Brabantine thaler, it is of very base metal and contains but little silver.

Obv. SCIP.G.DUX.SAB.S.R.I.BOZ.PRI.D.LIR.3. Large figure of armed warrior looking over shoulder, holding shield on which is a lion.

Rev. VICIT.LEO.DETRIBU.IUDA.1659. A lion rampant. It willbe noticed that on the obverse are the words DUX.SAB(bioneta), Scipio, however, was merely claimant to that duchy and never obtained actual possession — he was sovereign of Bozzolo 1609-71.

2. Lira (Silver). Imitated from a coin of Genoa. Obv. SCIP. GONZ.DUX.S(abbioneta).ET.B(ozzolo).P. Cross with four stars in angles.

Rev. MO.A.D.S.X.(10 soldi).ET.REGE.NOS. Madonna and Child. Ex. V2V.

3. 3 soldi. Silver, Copied from a coin of Canton Uri in Switzerland. Obv. SUB.PEN—NIS EIUS. Double-headed eagle.

Rev. HAUD.SECUS.ANIMI. Three shields with lilies between.

4. 4 Soldi (Copper). Obv. AD.MONTEM.DUC.NOS. Figure of St. Catherine standing, in her left hand a wheel and in her right the palm of martyrdom.

Rev. IN.ACCESSIBLE.NIHIL. Winged horse. Imitated from a six soldi piece of Correggio. The reverse of this coin should be compared with the 30 soldi piece issued from that mint.

5. Copper proof of double scudo, imitated from Brabant thaler. Obv. SCIP.D.G.DUX.SABL.S.R.I.E.BOZ.PRI.E.C.DA. LIR.5. Bust of the prince to the r., sword in right hand and shield in left.

Rev. NOSTRA.E.ANTIQVA.INSIGNIA. A lion.

SABBIONETA.

A town and castle in the province of Mantua. It was ceded to Gianfrancesco Gonzaga Marquis of Mantua — by the Venetian Doge Francesco Foscari — in 1431, the state eventually passing to a younger branch of the great Gonzaga House. Vespasiano Gonzaga (1540-91), created Duke of Sabbioneta 1577, was the true founder of Sabbioneta. He inherited a castle situated in a thinly populated district, but very soon built a beautiful and strongly fortified city, which during his long reign was a flourishing centre of art, science, and literature. He opened a mint in 1559.

VESPASIANO GONZAGA, 1540-91.

1. Double Grosso. Imitation of Savoy Bianco. Obv. VESPASIAN.C.C.PRIN.DUX.M.CO. Three shields of arms (Gonzaga, Colonna, Aragon). Ex. M—S.

Rev. AVE.SACRA.CRUX.CHRISTI. Cross of St. Maurice. A variety of this coin reads COM. instead of CO. on the obv.

LUIGI CARAFFA, 1638-44.

2. Tallero copied from the Brabant lion thaler. Obv. SCRIPT. D.G.DU.SAB(bioneta).R.S.I.C. (legend much blundered and confused). Large helmeted figure of armed warrior looking over shoulder, holding shield on which is a lion.

Rev. VICIT.LEO.DE.TRIBU.JUDA.1638. A lion rampant to l.

3. Thaler as 2. Obv.MO.NO.ALOY—CARF.DUX.SAB.etc. as 2.

Rev. CONFIDENS.DNO.NON.MOVETUR, etc. as 2.

Numbers 2 and 3 are alike of very base metal.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS &c.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.

July 19. — Mr. Carlyon-Britton, President, in the chair. — Mr. Edward Shepherd was elected a Member.

The President read a paper on 'A Penny of Æthelred, Subregulus of Mercia and Son-in-law of Alfred the Great'. The coin in question was of the small-cross type of Alfred, and of silver, as pennies invariably were in early times. It read — obverse; + ETHLRED RE (for Ethelred Rex), the two R'S being inverted and the Saxon theta used for the TH; reverse, the moneyer's name EDELSTAN in two lines. Æthelred was styled in his charters dux or subregulus, but Æthelweard's chronicle refers to him as "Rex Æthered Myrciorum". This was the first instance of a coin being discovered which could definitely be assigned to this prince, and fortunately, every letter was distinct, the coin itself, which was exhibited, being as fresh as when it left the dies.

A second paper by the same author was upon 'A Penny of Llywelyn, son of Cadwgan, of the Type of the Second Issue of William Rufus'. Its legend was — obverse. + LEWILLEN REX, the contemporary P being used for the W, and the two L'S inverted; reverse, + HRVEOV ON RVTHCO (Saxon theta for the TH), which, Mr. Carlyon-Britton explained, represented the moneyer's name Herveius of a mint Ryth Co. This place he identified with the Ryt Cors or Castell Ryt-y-Gors of the Welsh chronicles; that is, the famous castle of Rhyd-y-Gors, which played so important a part in the Welsh rising of 1094-6, during which period the coin was certainly issued. This was the second occasion on which Mr. Carlyon-Britton had been able to exhibit to the Society a silver penny bearing the name of a Welsh prince and followed by the title REX, as evidence of at least an intermittent regal currency in that kingdom in early times — the first instance being a coin of Howel the Good issued at Chester; but as yet the two remain the only known examples.

Amongst other exhibitions were a silver penny of Athelstan with the title REX SAXSORVM, struck at Derby, and bearing the letter R in the field of the reverse, and a Newark siege shilling of Charles I. on which the royal arms had been punched after its striking, by Mr. Frank E. Burton; three imitations of English half-groats of the time of Edward III. issued at Brussels and Antwerp, by Mr. L. A. Lawrence; and twelve varieties of patterns in nickel for the American cent of 1858, by Mr. H. W. Taffs.

Mr. Andrew exhibited casts of two coins of the Empress Matilda, being silver pennies contemporary with, and purposely resembling, Stephen's second issue (Hawkins, 269), so that they would pass current with his money. The only difference was a star to the right of the portrait and the inscription, which was probably + MATILDIS IMPER, but of which only the title IMPER was visible. They furnished the sole evidence we yet have that Matilda issued a second coinage, for her coins as previously known were all imitations of Stephen's first type. Both pennies were from the Sheldon hoard in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire.

SOCIÉTÉ FRANÇAISE DE NUMISMATIQUE.

Séance du 6 mai.

Communication est faite à la Société d'une découverte de médailles romaines, annoncée par M. de Romiszowski.

MM. de Jonghe et de Witte offrent à la Société un exemplaire de la médaille du Congrès international de Numismatique tenu à Bruxelles en 1910. Sur la proposition de la Société hollandaise des Amis de la Médaille et de la Société américaine de numismatique, elle porte au droit le portrait de M. Babelon, conservateur du Cabinet des médailles, membre de l'Institut, par le graveur belge Devreese et au revers une Minerve par le graveur allemand Bosselt. Le premier a eu recours au tour à réduire, le second à la gravure directe de l'acier.

M. de Jonghe présente une plaque qui semble avoir servi à l'impression d'assignats de cent livres.

M. Bouclier expose une méthode pour distinguer certaines catégories de pièces fausses.

M. Adrien Blanchet communique deux pièces inédites de sa collection, un Victorin et un Tetricus.

M. Bordeaux présente deux affiches officielles relatives l'une à la pièce de 5 décimes de 1793, l'autre au décret du 12 septembre 1810 sur le système décimal.

Séance du 3 juin.

La Société a entendu une communication de M. Bordeaux sur la méthode suivie à la Monnaie pour les prises d'essai. Il y a intérêt à la signaler car les pièces qui ont servi à cet usage ne sortent pas des ateliers.

M. Bouclier revient sur les moyens de reconnaître les refrappes. L'emploi de la virole brisée date de 1829, bien qu'elle fût connue depuis longtemps et fournit une ligne de démarcation sûre.

Le colonel Allotte de la Fuye, rappelant l'interprétation qu'il avait donnée de la légende d'une monnaie de la région mésopotamienne, présente une obole à légende grecque qui vient la confirmer.

REVIEWS.

W. H. Valentine. Modern Copper Coins of the Muhammadan States. With 77 plates and 6 maps. London: Spink & Son Ltd. 1911. 10*s.* 6*d.*

Muhammadan copper coins have not hitherto received the attention which their historical interest deserves; collectors and writers on numismatics, with the notable exception of the late Mr. C. J. Rodgers, have been as scornful of them as was al-Makrizi. It can hardly be denied that they are not so attractive as their intrinsically more valuable contemporaries; they are usually more carelessly struck and in poorer condition, but the chief cause of their neglect has been the want of aids to their study. The object of the present work is to remedy this defect and to encourage the study of Oriental coins by providing a book which will enable a person ignorant of Arabic to obtain all particulars of any specimens he may have. The work contains seventy-seven plates of coins accompanied not only by the transcription, but also by the transliteration and translation of their legends. It is divided into a number of sections, each of which has an historical introduction and a map illustrating the mints. The cost of printing such a work in the ordinary way would have been prohibitive; the example of the Berlin Catalogue of Oriental Coins has therefore been followed and the whole work, text as well as plates, has been lithographed. Thanks to the remarkable neatness with which the author has prepared his manuscript, the result is quite as pleasant to read as a printed book, and there are no printers' errors. The author has spared no pains to collect coins to illustrate his book; besides the British Museum Collection, numerous private collections have been examined and many rare and interesting coins brought to light.

The title " Modern Muhammadan Coins " gives rather a limited idea of the scope of the work, which begins with the coinage of the Othmanli Murad I, and comes down to the present day. Going from west to east, the author describes in convenient sections all copper coins with legends in the Arabic character, that have been struck from Turkey and Morocco to the borders of China, with the exception of India, which it is proposed to treat of in a separate volume. The series of Othmanli coins is particularly fine and will be found of great value, though the author's rigid adherence to his geographical arrangement rather breaks up the series. The coins of the petty dynasts of South Arabia are mostly published for the first time. The author has collected a remarkable series of the autonomous copper coins of Persia : their types are of special interest ; the majority appear to be zodiacal in origin, but some, like the Sword of Ali, are of religious origin, while others, like the bull and stag, may be traced back to Achæmenid times. The Afghan series includes a number of rare coins struck by the Mughal emperors at Kabul. The final section of the work gives a full account of the bilingual and trilingual coins of Chinese Turkestan.

Besides the usual indices the work contains a list of mints, numerous genealogical lists, metrological notes, tables of the Arabic and Georgian alphabets and numerals, and a list of Arabic words occurring on coins with transliteration and translation. The volume is, therefore, much more than a mere catalogue of coins; it forms a most valuable introductory text book to Muhammadan numismatics and should do much to encourage this study. Mr. Valentine has earned the gratitude of all interested in Oriental coins, and we trust the reception of this work will be such as to encourage him to proceed with his proposed volume on similar lines on Indian coins.

PRESENTED TO ..... A TOKEN OF REGARD FROM HIS COMRADES IN ARMS SEPTEMBER 1788. Hall marked. V. F. & V. R. 15 » »

At the outbreak of the American War the regiment was at Boston. It fought at Lexington, and at Bunker's Hill it suffered severely ; and of the three officers and seventy men who went into action with the Grenadier company, only five came out unhurt. For a short time the regiment served as marines on board Earl Howe's fleet ; after which it re-landed and served at the actions of Brooklyn, Brandywine, Freehold Camden, and Guildford, under Howe, Clinton, and Cornwallis down to the surrender at Yorktown, 19th Oct. 1781 ; and was everywhere distinguished " by its gallantry and heavy losses" After Cornwallis's surrender it was " interned " until the peace when it returned and remained in England eleven years. BY THE NON COM. OFFICERS AND PRIVATE SOLDIERS OF THE RECT. IN TESTIMONY OF HIS NOBLE AND MERITORIOUS CONDUCT AT NOGALES 4th JANY. 1809. F. & E. R. 12 » »

Nicknamed the Slashers from its conduct at the passage of the river Brunx 1776.

The reserve reached Nogales on the evening of the 4th after having gained twelve hours start of the enemy by a forced march of thirty-six miles. " Under the most favourable circumstances, the tail of a retreating force exhibits terrible scenes of distress, and on the road near Nogales the followers of the army were dying fast from cold and hunger. The soldiers barefooted, harassed, and weakened by their excesses at Bembibre and Villa Franca, were dropping to the rear by hundreds, while broken carts, dead animals, and the piteous spectacle of women and children, struggling or falling exhausted in the snow, completed a picture of war, which, like Janus, has a double face. The first battalion went to Malta 1805 ; and its flank companies were employed under Sir James Craig in Naples, and afterwards in Sicily.

The battalion subsequently proceeded to Sicily, and served in the expedition to the Bay of Naples, in 1809 (which captured Ischia and Procida); and in the defence of Sicily against Murat in 1810. The reformed second battalion had meanwhile, joined Sir Arthur Wellesley's army at Lisbon (June 1809), and subsequently fought at Busaco, at the siege of Badajos, at Albuhera — where although not 400 strong, it much distinguished itself — and elsewhere.

In August, 1811 the first battalion arrived from Sicily, and took over the other remaining effectives of the second battalion, which went home and was not again employed abroad. The first battalion fought at Vittoria ; in various actions in the Pyrenees ; was particularly distinguished at Garris ; Nivelle, Nive, Orthes, Bayonne, and Toulouse. After its return from Canada it formed part of the Army of occupation in France until the final withdrawal of the British troops.

the staff sergeants and sergeants that the howls arise, many of whom would with pride wear this coveted decoration, and who had cherished hopes of getting it, seeing that it was so liberally issued to our Colonials. No doubt there are many others who would like to voice this subject, and perhaps thus cause the hearts of those who are dealing with the issue to open, as it appears that "the backbone of the British Army" has been overlooked this time.

A BRONZE MEDAL FOR THE LATE VOLUNTEERS.

SIR, — Please allow me space to put forward a suggestion that the late Volunteers who had served for fours years or more should be given a bronze medal with a red, white and blue ribbon, as a mark of their patriotism. Thus encouragement might be given to the younger generation to follow their elders. The cost would be insignificant compared with the amount of good that might result.

VARIA

TO THE EDITOR OF 'THE TIMES'.

Sir, — Touching Agadir the following may or may not be of interest. Agadir is identically the same name as Cadiz. The proof is to be found in the oldest silver and bronze coins struck by the Carthaginians established in Cadiz.

The description as given by Heiss in his "Ancient Coins of Spain" is: — On the obverse, a head of the Tyrian Herakles — the national hero — with a lion's head and skin over his head and shoulders.

On the reverse, one or two fish, either tunny or dolphins, and the name of the town in Punic characters. This consists of four letters as in Hebrew—

א = A. ג = G. ד = D. ר = R.

This reads A G D R.

The first letter is the article, the three following represent G D R or G A D I R. We would not know the meaning of the word Gadir if the elder Pliny had not, by a rare piece of good fortune, explained it as signifying "enclosure". Gadir he writes "ita lingua punica saepem significante".

This word has been spelled Gadeira by the Greeks, Gades by the Romans, Gadiss by the Arabs, and Cadiz by the Spanish.

Thus the name Agadir is identically similar to the name on the Punic coins of Cadiz, and the meaning is "enclosure".

We also thus incidentally discover that Agadir and Cadiz were contemporary Phœnician foundations.

Yours faithfully,

C. BLACKER.

ADVERTISEMENTS

JUST ISSUED.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. PARKES WEBER, M.A., M.D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual — his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action, — as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described. Price Five Shillings Net.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE 1911 SHAKSPERE MEDAL.

This is an important contribution to the medallic portraiture of Shakspere.

It is struck to give perpetuity to a fine contemporary portrait, traditionally ascribed to Shakspere. It belonged for many generations to an old Lancashire family, and on this becoming extinct a few years ago, it passed into the collection of Mr W. Sharp Ogden, who has caused this medal to be prepared.

The obverse is an accurate rendering of the delightfully characteristic portrait. The reverse also has Shakspere's head in profile, laureated by the Muse of poesy; this head is from the monument bust in Stratford-on-Avon Church.

It is a charming example of Mr Frank Bowcher's work.

Messrs Spink & Son supply the medal as follows:

Silver proof 12/6 in box
Bronze — 5/6 —
Leather cases 1/—extra.

GELA.

DURING THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

In 466 B.C. the citizens, who had been exiled from Gela by Hieron, returned when Thrasybulus the brother of Gelon retired to spend his days in peace at Locri. After this influx of men Gela became populous enough to send out colonists to Camarina, and the city shared in the general prosperity of the Sicilian cities, freed from the bad government of the Tyrants. The appearance of symbols on the coins which look like the badges of magistrates is one of the signs of the times. Although the coins of Gela during this period did not change as much as those of many other cities, they shew a gradual improvement in style throughout the period both in regard to the human head on the bull and the horses in the quadriga.

COINS OF THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

These coins shew a marked improvement in the artistic execution of the dies.

No change was made in regard to the types; we still see the man-headed bull on the Obverse, and the quadriga and flying Nike on the Reverse, but the distinguishing mark of this period is the introduction of symbols or ornaments which appear sometimes on the Obverse at others on the Reverse. The first letter on the inscriptions, the gamma, is found in all three forms C, ‹ and Γ whereas on the coins of the earlier period it is generally found in the rounded form C although both the others are sometimes found.

The decorative devices may not be symbols of the magistrates; the olive leaf may have had reference to some victory, others may have been mere decorations in connection with the type.

Tetradrachms.

I. Obverse. CEΛΑΣ in field above bull.

Reverse. A quadriga to right driven by male figure wearing the usual long chiton, he holds the goad in his right hand, and the reins in both. The horses are walking. Nike flies above crowning the horses, holding wreath and fillet. In the exergue a device consisting of a honey-suckle conventional ornament between two volutes : border of dots.

II. Obv. Similar type, beneath which a tunnyfish to right, and spray of olive.

Rev. Similar to no I.

III. Obv. Similar type : beneath which a spray of olive.

Rev. Similar, above, a wreath of olive-leaves.

IV. Obv. CEΛΑΣ. Similar type : beneath, a swan to left.

Rev. Same die as last. Quadriga to right.

V. Obv. Similar to no IV, but without legend.

Rev. Quadriga to left; above an olive-wreath.

VI. Obv. Similar type ; beneath a crane to right.

Rev. Similar type, but to right, and a wreath.

VII. Obv. Similar type, but legend retrograde ΣΑΛΕƎ over the bull.

Rev. Similar type, quadriga to left with Nike flying to right.

IX. Obv. Same as n° VIII.

Rev. Similar type, quadriga to right, with Nike to right. In exergue a crane to right : plain border.

X. Obv. CEΛA in a straight line above fore-part of man-headed bull to right.

Rev. Quadriga, walking horses to right, in exergue a palmette. 258 grains. A very rare variety.

No 37 of Cat. Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge, 26 April 1907.

Didrachm.

XI. Obv. CEΛAΣ. Man-headed bull to right.

Rev. Horseman in conical helmet cantering to right. Weight : 128 grains.

OBOLS.

XII. Obv. ‹EΛAΣ. Fore-part of man-headed bull swimming to right.

Rev. Horseman to left, bearded, helmeted, holding in right hand the reins, and in the left a spear and round shield; the horse is prancing : plain border.

HIMERA FROM 480-450 B. C.

The great victory over the Carthaginians at Himera in 480 B.C. left Theron in undisputed possession of that city as well as of Agrigentum, and he appointed his son Thrasydaeus to be the ruler of Himera. The misrule of this young man led the leading citizens to apply for help at Syracuse, but Gelon referred the matter to Theron who came to Himera and punished some with death and others with exile (Diodorus XI, 48). Theron introduced a large number of Dorian Greeks to fill up the places of those slain and exiled. Diodorus must be wrong when he says this new colony " lasted fifty-eight years, till its destruction by the Carthaginians ", for that would make the date of the arrival of the Dorians 466 B.C., and we know Theron died in 472 B.C. Six years after his death, in 466 B.C., the Himerians sent a force to assist the Syracusans to throw off the yoke of Thrasybulus, and soon after the exiles returned to Himera and the reign of Tyrants was ended. The old Æginetic Coinage was abolished and money of the Attic weight introduced.

The coinage, which from its style is called Transitional from the Archaic to the Fine Art, was that issued from 466 to about 450 B.C. This was a period of prosperity for Himera, and the artists continued to improve in style and delicacy of treatment throughout that period.

Before the artists were publicly recognized, by being allowed to put their names on their dies, they must have been winning the esteem of their fellow citizens, and art was evidently valued highly by the rulers.

The date 440 B.C. is that usually given to the early works of Eumenes, the first artist whose name appeared on the coins of Syracuse, but the period of fine art may be considered to have begun before the names of the artists were thus recorded, and the middle of the century may be regarded as the end of the Transitional Period.

THE TYPES.

The type of the Obverse was not changed in 408 but the crab, the parasema, or town badge, of Theron's city, Acragas was placed on the Reverse of the coins issued during the rule of Thrasydaeus, his son.

THE ASTRAGALOS.

This type was used in Euboea before 480 B.C. (confer p. 309 Head's Hist. Num.).

The knuckle-bone or astragalos Dr Head says may refer to the custom of consulting oracles by the throwing of ἀστράγαλοι (Schol ad Pindar Pyth, IV, 337).

Pindar Schole art. Pyth IV 337.

εἰώθασι διᾶ κλήρων μαντεύεσθαι οἷον ἐὰν βάλλοντος μου τὸ ὀστ ἀναβῇ ἀποτελεσθήσεται τόδε.

ἐὰν δὲ μή ὐυκ ἀποτελεσθήσεται, και ἐν τοις ἱεροῖς ἀστραγαλοι κεῖνται οἷς διαμαντευουται βάλλοντες δί αὐτῶν.

Cf. Pausanias VII, 25.6.

In the life of Tiberius by Suetonius (XIV) we read an example of this divination by knuckle-bones. "Later in going to Illyria he consulted, near to Padua, the oracle of Geryon who told him to throw golden knuckle-bones into the fountain of Aponia in order to learn what he desired to know, he obeyed and threw the highest number, and one may still see, to this day, the knuckle bones at the bottom of the water."

Something like divination appears in the game with knuckle bones played by the suitors for the hand of Penelope described by Athenaeus (I, 29).

For the use of the knuckle bone as a symbol on weights, confer the chapter on Gela in the Archaic period.

Confer G. Hirschfeld, Berliner Monatsberichte, 1875, ref. in note p. 828 Marquardt and Mommsen Handbuch der Römischen Altherthümer. In the periodical "Hermes", X, 1876, § 193 is an article by Kaibel "Ein Würfelorakel" on an Attalian inscription which gives amusing details of the meaning or significance of the various throws.

THE NYMPH.

When the reign of the Tyrants ended and a new government arose the old type of the cock disappeared, and naturally with it the crab as emblem of the tyranny of Acragas.

The new type was a figure of the nymph of the spring or fountain which had been the attraction of the earliest settlers.

The Nymph of Himera was one of those who were regarded as having the power of restoring sick persons to health; she is the subject of Pindar's twelfth Olympian ode, "I beseech thee, daughter of Zeus, the friend of freedom, continue to protect the widely ruling Himera, thou saviour goddess Fortune (σώτειρα Τύχα). Confer the notes of the misread legend IATON. The ode was in honour of Ergoteles of Himera who won a foot race in 472 B.C., and had recently settled in Himera. Pindar ends the ode with the words "you exalt the hot baths of the Nymphs, dwelling in lands that you can now call your own."

On a bronze coin of the fine art Period the nymph is represented with the slight horns above her forehead often seen on the heads of river deities.

The healing power of Nymphs is also recorded by Pausanias who relates that "if a man prays in a proper manner to the Nymphs (of a cavern in Samicas) then vows a certain sacrifice, and afterwards wipes the diseased parts of his body, he will leave his disgraceful malady in the water, and quit the river healthy, and with his skin uniformly clean" (V, ad fin). Water nymphs were worshipped along with Dionysus as giving life and health to mortals.

In the fifty-second Orphic hymn Dionysus is described as "leader of the choir whose dancing feet phrenetic furies fire, when the triennial band thou dost inspire."

These dancers were nymphs, seileni and satyrs. Horace sang "the light dances of the nymphs and satyrs distinguish me from the crowd" (Carm., I, 1, 31). And again he connects the nymphs with satyrs: "I saw Bacchus (believe it posterity) dictating strains among the remote rocks, and the nymphs learning them, and the ears of the goat-footed satyrs all attentive" (Carm., II, XIX, 1-3).

It seems curious and is perhaps a sign of antiquity that the sacrifices offered to Nymphs usually consisted of goats, lambs, milk and oil, but never of wine. Theocritus makes a shepherd refer to the dappled goat-skin given to a friend when he sacrificed the she-goat to the nymphs; (Idyl, V) and again in the same Idyl — "And I will set a great bowl of milk for the nymphs, and another will I offer of sweet olive oil." — At the end of the Idyl the lamb won as the prize of song was sacrificed to the nymphs. That wine was not offered we read in the note of Servius (Virgil, Georg. IV, 380), "Nymphis libari vino Pontifices negant."

The Seileni were the connecting link between Dionysus and the Nymphs; the principal object honoured by the type of these coins Seilenus occupied a more important position on the coins of Catana, confer the tetradrachm of that city illustrated on Plate IV, 13 of G. F. Hill's, Coins of ancient Sicily, in which the head of Seilenus forms the Obverse type. Strabo connects both Seileni, Satyrs and Nymphs with the cult of Dionysus (lib. X, 3, 10).

There is an interesting passage in Athenaeus (VI, 56) concerning the nymphs which shews their connection with Dionysiac rites.

"And Timaeus, in the twenty-second book of his Histories, says that Democles the flatterer of the younger Dionysius, as it was customary in Sicily to make a sacrifice from house to house in honour of the nymphs, and for men to spend the night around their statues when quite drunk, and to dance around the goddesses. — Democles neglecting the nymphs, and saying there was no use in attending to lifeless deities, went and danced before Dionysius."

The earlier period of simple faith in the nymphs may be illustrated from Homer, Odyssey, XIII, 356 where we find the prayer of Odysseus to the Nymphs, and again in XVII, 208, where we read of Odysseus and the swineherd coming to "the altar of the nymphs whereat all wayfarers made offering".

THE HORNED HEAD TYPE.

Mr. G. F. Hill has suggested a very interesting explanation of this type on p. 128 of his work "Coins of ancient Sicily".

A bronze coin of Himera bears the inscription [K]IMERA, and this spelling of the name suggests that the aspirate was very harsh. The aspirate expressed by K is known in inscriptions Cf. N. Z., 1886, Pl. VI, 7. Imhoof-Blumer in the Molthein Collection — he puts K in brackets (compare n° 50 Æ B.M.C.)

Some slight colour is lent to the notion that the type of the litra was a variety of the Chimaera of which monster the Sicilian artist was quite capable of creating a local form. The Greeks connected the Chimaera with volcanic subterranean agencies such as were seen in the hot spring of Thermæ. The original volcano from which the name χιμαιρα is derived is said to be that near Phaselis in Lycia mentioned by Pliny (N. H., ub. II, 106).

THE BOY RIDING A GOAT.

On Billon coins of Saloninus and Valerianus we see a similar type which is regarded as a representation of the infant Jupiter on the goat Amalthea.

A myth of this nature wholly depending on poetic imagination was told by different writers in many forms. The goat was not always called Amalthea: for instance, Ovid says in Book five of the Fasti: "The naiad Amalthea noble on the Cretan Ida is said to have concealed Jupiter in the woods. To her belonged a beautiful goat, the dam of two kids, with horns towering, and bending over her back, and with an udder such as by right the nurse of Jove ought to have."

Whether the nymph or the goat belonging to her was called Amalthea by the Himerians we cannot tell, but the type of the coin seems to point to a knowledge on their part of a myth concerning Zeus and a goat. Moreover the local nymph was called by Pindar a daughter of Zeus.

ON THE MISREAD INSCRIPTION IATON.

This inscription published in various numismatic works is found on nine coins, three of which belong to the Archaic Period, and the rest to that after 472 B.C.

These six coins are all didrachms of one type viz. Obv. the naked horseman; Reverse, the Nymph sacrificing at an altar.

On the Obverse is the name of the town, on the Reverse the misread inscription.

1. Of these coins one is in the British Museum (p. 79, n° 35, Catal.),
2. One in the royal Cabinet at Munich,
3. One in the National Museum at Naples,
4. } Two in the Collection of Herr Löbbecke (now Berlin
5. } Museum).
6. One in the Hunter Collection, and this is the only coin well enough preserved to enable one to read the legend with confidence.

It bears not IATON but ꟻETOƧ. All the above coins n°s 1, 2, 3 and 6 are from one die, n°s 4 and 5 from another die.

The other three coins bearing this misread inscription consist of

1. N° 21 of the B. M. Catalogue in which however the compiler omitted to notice that there was an inscription in front of the cock's breast which is so faint that only the letter O is at all clearly legible.

2. In the museum at Termini, the modern town that lies near the site of the ancient Himera, is an Æginetic Obol having a cock on the Obverse and an incuse square on the Reverse. On this coin also the letter O is the only one clearly legible.

3. This is in the British Museum, and is n° 23 in the B. M. Catalogue where it is thus described : Obverse IAƧON Cock to left, border of dots. It is also an Æginetic drachm. It is noticeable that the engraver who illustrated the coin made the legend IATOM. Mr. G. Macdonald suggests the legend may be ⊥Λ a mark of value and TOƧ i. e. shortened form of ΣOTEP retrograde.

The description of these coins is taken from the valuable paper in the Numismatic Chronicle for 1898 (p. 185 seq.) by Mr. G. Macdonald. The paper gives the various attempts which have been made to explain the form IAƧON, but these are not the points which the student desires to know first and they may be seen in the journal above mentioned.

COINS OF THE PERIOD 481-467 B.C.

Didrachms.

I. Obv. HIMERA in a perpendicular line on left of the type, a cock standing to left.
Rev. A crab.
Normal weight : 134 grains.

Drachm (Normal weight : 67.28 grains).

II. Obv. A cock to left : border of dots.
Rev. A / HIMER, a crab, or AR / HIME.
III. Obv. A cock to left : border of dots.
Rev. HIME R AION. Astragalos.

Hexas (sic. in B. M. Catal.).

IV. Obv. Astragolos.
Rev. ●● : mark of value.
Weight of specimen in B. Mus.: 1.2 grains.
Size .15.
In the table of Sicilian weights on p. 224 of Mr. G. F. Hill's, "Greek and Roman Coins" the ἑξάς is given as weighing, .145 grammes = 2.238 grains and the smallest coin the ὑγκία = .072 grammes = 1.11 grains. 1.11 ÷ 2.238 grains.

PERIOD OF TRANSITION 466-450 B.C.

Tetradrachm (Normal weight: 268 grs.).

I. Obv. The nymph Himera, wearing sleeved chiton and peplos of which the ends fall over her right arm, standing facing with her head turned to the left: she holds in her right hand a patera over an altar with conical top, her left hand is extended open. To right of her figure a Seilenus, to right, bends backwards in a trough, and receives on his chest a jet of water from a fountain in the shape of a lion's head.
II. Obv. Similar type differing in that the lion's head is raised on steps, and above the arm of the nymph is a symbol, a wheel of four spokes.
Rev. Similar to n° I.
III. Obv. Similar type differing in that the altar is garlanded, and the Seilenus is facing bending sideways to receive the water on his left shoulder : symbol above the arm of nymph a barley corn.
Rev. Inscription retrograde. Similar type.
IV. Obv. Similar type differing in that the figure of Seilenus is to right : symbol above the arm of the nymph, a barley corn.
In exergue a river-fish to right.
Rev. Similar type.

Didrachm (Normal weight : 134 grs).

V. Obv. [I]ATON?, in exergue. Similar type of Nymph, but in place of the Seilenus and fountain, a caduceus bound with fillet. Symbol, a barley corn over right arm of the Nymph.
The legend IATON is said by Mr. G. Macdonald to be a misreading for SOTER read backwards. The Masculine form may have even been used of the Nymph of the healing fountain.
Rev. И OI AꟻƎMI. A naked youth seated sideways on a horse galloping to left, whose mane he grasps with his right hand, his left hand holds a whip and rests on the horse's flank.

Triobolon. (Normal weight : 31.99 grs.).

Rev. N[IKA]. Nike, wearing sleeved chiton, and peplos of which the ends fall over her right arm, flying to left, grasping in her right hand an aplustre bound with long fillet, and holding up her dress with her left hand.
VII. Obv. HIMEPION retrograde. Similar type but to left, the buccinum in his right hand and the caduceus in his left.
Rev. N I / A ⋊. Similar to n° VI.

Litra.

VIII. Obv. Head of a bearded man to left with goat's horn underneath and joined, a lion's paw and head skin, behind a curled wing : border of dots.
Rev. HIMEPAION. A naked youth seated on a he-goat running to left. He holds the horn of the goat with his left hand and has the right arm raised to strike the goat.
One specimen in the B. Mus. weighs 12.5, another 13.5, and another 11.9. The weight of the litra was 13.43 probably therefore these may be Litræ.

Obol.

IX. Obv. Bearded male head to left with pointed ear, wearing crested Athenian helmet : border of dots.
Rev. IMEPION. A pair of greaves.
X. Obv. A bearded head to right (Kronos?) : border of dots.
Rev. HIME. Corinthian helmet without crest to right.
XI. Obv. Similar head, but wearing taenia : same border.
Rev. AREꟻEMI. Similar helmet with volute in upper part.

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

B.C.500 — A.D.1900.

(Including the names of several hitherto unpublished artists.)

One-hundred-and-fifty-sixth article.

SPENCE, WILLIAM (Brit.). Mint-warden at Edinburgh, 1690-1699.

SPENCER, WILLIAM W. (Amer.). Die-sinker and Engraver, recently deceased (1911), was in business in Cincinatti. He was born in Cork, Ireland, on December 30, 1839, and came to Cincinnati in 1849. After working in other lines he took a position with John Stanton in 1857 to learn the die-sinking and engraving business, and continued to work for him until Mr. Stanton went out of business in 1866, when he (Stanton) sold it out to Janus Murdoch Jr, and William W. Spencer, who succeeded him under the name of Murdoch and Spencer. This firm continued for about five years, when they dissolved partnership, each one continuing in the same line of business. Mr. Spencer was with Mr. Stanton during the 'war token' period of 1861-4, during which time he assisted in putting forth the innumerable examples of these little reminders of the "late unpleasantness". It is well known to collectors how frequently the mint-mark of "Murdoch and Spencer" is found on issues of all kinds during 1864, and continued until stopped by the United States government in 1867 (Reproduced from 'The Numismatist', July 1911, p. 138).

SPENCER, LORD CHARLES (Brit.). Master of the Royal Mint, London, anni 45-46 of George III.

SPENS, CHARLES (II) (French). ... 1739-1749. Mint-engraver at Amiens.

SPERADEUS Vide SPERANDIO infra.

SPERANDIO OF MANTUA (Ital.) One of the most productive and clever Medallists of the Quattrocento, was born at Mantua about 1425, but as says Fabriczy, "the circumstances of his life are only fragmentarily known." Heiss states that there were artists of the name of Sperandio both at Mantua and Ferrara, and that they distinguished themselves as painters, goldsmiths, sculptors and architects. Fabriczy's account of the Medallist's career resumes all that is known at present, but fresh documents may turn up which will throw new light on the subject.

Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan. (reduced).

"Sperandio", says Fabriczy, "removed from Mantua in 1437 with his father the goldsmith Bartolomeo — a member of the Roman family of the Savelli — to Ferrara, where he fell under the influence of Pisano, Pasti, and Marescotti. About 1450 he appears at Mantua after 1460 at Milan, where he produced his first medal of Duke Francesco Sforza, a somewhat dry, spiritless work, the reverse of which is a direct copy of the Malatesta temple on one of Pasti's medals. From 1463 to 1477 he dwelt at Ferrara, employed by the Este more as a sculptor than a medallist; only three of the twenty medals which he produced there being dedicated to the reigning family. Among the rest we may mention as conspicuous that of Jacopo Troth, minister and envoy of Ercole I. (the reverse offers an appalling example of Sperandio's tasteless allegories); further, that of the ducal orator Antonio Sarzanella, with a reverse which is but little better (Prudence seated on a throne composed of two dogs); and especially that of Niccolo da Coreggio (1450-1508.)

Giovanni II. Bentivoglio.

The last was the son-in-law of Bartolomeo Colleoni, a no less celebrated military hero; he was, moreover, one of the earliest dramatic poets of Italy, and so accomplished a courtier that the highly cultured Marchioness Isabella Gonzaga was able to describe him as "più atilato et de rime et cortesie erudito cavagliere et barone che si retrovasse in Italia". Here for once the reverse shows a pleasing realism, and is a skilful circular composition; and its interpretation as an illustration of the biblical inscription round it (Ps. LXXXV, 13) is unconstrained.

"After a passing sojourn at Faenza we find Sperandio in 1478 at Bologna, which he did not leave again until 1495. Here he produced important works of sculpture (the Tomb of Alexander V., busts of Bentivoglio, Sanuti, Barbazza, decorations of the Church of La Santa); and the fact that from 1486-1488 he was obliged to depend for support on the public alms-box seems the more inexplicable. One of the earliest of the fifteen medals which he produced in Bologna (before 1482) is that of Federigo Montefeltre, Duke of Urbino, the model of an englightened ruler, inspired with the noblest and highest ideals. This medal it was which chiefly betrayed Goethe into his exaggerated panegyric on the master. It is, indeed, one of Federigo Montefeltro, Duke of Urbino.

Sperandio's greatest achievements; unfortunately the equestrian figure on the reverse is badly proportioned and unsuccessfully adapted to the circular field. The portrait of the world-renowned Professor of Law, Andrea Barbazza (died 1480), is worthy of the master, although in the hand, half amputated by the truncation of the bust and hanging in the armhole of the gown, we notice the naturalistic degeneration of composition in relief. Irreprochable, however, is the portrait of the powerful adherent of the Bentivoglio, Count Carlo Grati; true, with the limitations already specified as regards the design of the reverse.

"Sperandio returned to his native Mantua an aged man in 1495, and on the occasion of the festival for the victory over Charles VIII. at Fornovo (July 6, 1495), in spite of his seventy years, produced three of his best medals, representing the leaders of the alliance against France: the Doge Agostino Barbarigo, the Marquis Gianfrancesco Gonzaga, and Giovanni Bentivoglio II., the last of whom stayed in Mantua on account of the Victory". (Fabriczy, Italian Medals, pp. 89-92).

"Sperandio", says Fabriczy, "is the most productive of the Quattrocento medallists; we possess forty-five pieces signed by him, which bring before us a motley series of the celebrities of his time: scholars and poets, physicians and astrologers, military heroes and diplomatists, professors and senators, monks, bishops and cardinals, princes and tyrants. In the circles of the dilettanti his name is — so to speak — a collective designation : and the esteem in which his words are held has been beyond all question ever since the Weimar connoisseurs proclaimed their enthusiastic admiration, extolling far above the works of Pisano" his artistic skill in proportion and form as well as in the pictorial taste shown in the composition of the reverses. The more intimate knowledge of the art of the Quattrocento and the more acutely critical eye, with which we now regard it, do not indeed justify Goethe's verdict. Though some of his portraits are unusually life-like, and, in the rarely found good casts, are wrought with great artistic skill, still it would appear in general that to numerous commissions had betrayed him into hasty work and led to the mechanical exploitation of his talent. It can scarcely, therefore, be a matter for surprise if the greater number of his portraits display the same character, and that we fail to perceive any advance in the artistic development of their creator. Still less do the reverses approach those of Pisano. Instead of the magnificent designs inspired with life and monumental grandeur, Sperandio, gives us almost invariably abstruse or coarse allegories veiled in a pseudo-antique style, only in the rarest cases do we meet with realistic scenes taken from military life, such as (among others) in the Correggio, Bentivoglio, and Grati medals. See, too, with what lack of understanding and what clumsiness he combines Pisano's medals of Novello Malatesta and Gianfrancesco Gonzaga to produce the Grati medal; and in the Bentivoglio medal with what effrontery he reproduces in the contrary sense Pisano's medal of Lodovico Gonzaga! And if, not without reason, we throw the responsibility for the choice of his allegories on the taste of the time, more especially of the scholars, poets, and professors depicted, still the execution, for which the artist is alone responsible, is almost equally unpleasant, the drawing almost invariably devoid of spirit and delicacy, the modelling superficial (except where corrected by chasing, which is, however, usually dispensed with), the relief strong and rough, without finer transitions and, therefore, ineffective. Hence, on closer examination we restore to the earlier master his overwhelming right of priority and assign Sperandio a place in the series of medallists of the fifteenth century, not only after Pisano, but also after lesser masters, such as Pasti, Constantius, and Marescotti" (pp. 87-89).

Mr. G. F. Hill, in his recent work on Pisanello, adds the following comment on Sperandio (p. 232): "The fall in his position in the hierarchy of medallists cannot be due merely to the swing of the pendulum, which diverts the public taste now to the archaic, now to the classical, now to the decadent period. Our reasons for declining to place him beside Pisanello are based on his breach of certain fundamental principles of good art. He is often pretentious and vulgar, to a degree only surpassed by the Florentine Francesco da Sangallo in his medals; his work is careless, not only in sheer erroneous drawing but also in roughness of execution. Good castings are very rare, and there can be little doubt that, amid the pressure of the commissions that poured in upon him, he rarely took the trouble to chase his casts himself."

"Sperandio", writes M. de Foville in a remarkable monograph (Le Musée, 1909) "fut le plus fécond des médailleurs du XV^e^ siècle : c'est un titre de gloire. Mais quand bien même les trois quarts de son œuvre eussent disparu, son nom aurait mérité de survivre et son talent d'être étudié : non pas qu'il ait été un délicat, ni même un très grand artiste. Mais son don d'improvisation, parfois fougueuse, le réalisme naïf de sa vision et en même temps la naturelle subtilité de son imagination esthétique, sa personnalité sans distinction mais si vivante, — et caractéristique même dans le plagiat, — cet ensemble de qualités actives lui donnent une physionomie très distincte. D'ailleurs, en même temps que personnel, il est très représentatif : l'esprit du XV^e^ siècle, où se mêlent si curieusement l'individualisme réaliste et le symbolisme le plus quintessencié, se reflète visiblement en lui. Il est de son temps par sa vie, par le tour de son esprit, par ses dons multiples et par l'extraordinaire variété de son œuvre. C'était du reste un pauvre hère : parfois favori des princes, il en fut souvent le serviteur obscur et oublié; malgré son esprit pompeux, il avait des humilités d'ouvrier pauvre. Son œuvre même, en dépit de certains airs de bravoure, trahit sa modeste origine, une méthode de travail hâtive et parfois sans conscience, et une bonhomie naturelle, dont il ne se départit pas sans tomber aussitôt dans une affectation qui nous fait sourire. Tel qu'il est, il nous intéresse toujours, — même quand il ne réussit pas à nous émouvoir. — parce que, là même où son talent s'appesantit, il lui reste toujours la faconde et la vie : par là encore il est bien de sa race. S'il paraît fort plébeien à côté de Pisanello, il pourrait être le père de tous ces Italiens imaginatifs et improvisateurs qui ont peuplé leur pays d'architectures baroques et de statues gesticulantes. Mais son siècle lui a donné une originalité plus franche : il appartient au quattrocento et c'est une grâce secrète qui supplée à cent autres vertus. Cela seul le rendrait attachant s'il ne l'était déjà pas tant par lui-même.

" Fils d'orfèvre, il fut orfèvre, et de plus architecte, sculpteur, médailleur, fondeur, ingénieur militaire, etc.! Mais il n'a survécu de lui que de rares sculptures et une cinquantaine de médailles. C'est donc comme médailleur qu'il nous est surtout connu : aussi, après avoir dit ce que nous savons de sa vie, et mentionné les bas-reliefs et les bustes qu'on lui attribue avec certitude, c'est à ses médailles que je m'attarderai plus spécialement. "

Dr Regling in his Catalogue of the Lanna Collection sold at Berlin, May 1911, describes the following works by Sperandio : Andrea Bentivoglio; — Giovanni Bentivoglio (realized 15.300 Marks); — Lodovico Brognolo; — Lodovico Carbone; — Sigismondo d'Este; — Francesco Gonzaga; — Galeazzo Marescotti (realized 12.300 Marks); — Federigo del Montefeltro (1550 Marks); — Bartolommeo della Rovere (12400 Marks); — Antonio Sarzanella; — Francesco Sforza, — which realized very high prices.

Mr. Hill has published recently (Burlington Magazine, June 1911, p. 138) a new medal by Sperandio, that of Giustiniano Cavitelli of Cremona, in the British Museum (illustrated); size : 86 mill.

SPERANZA, FILIPPO (Ital.). Medallist and Chief-engraver at the Mint of Rome, born at San Martino al Cimino in 1848, died at Rome on 7. December 1903. He went as a boy to Rome, and devoted himself to die-sinking, in which he was instructed by Paolo Mercuri. He was admitted at the Papal Mint, where he became acquainted with Zaccagnini, Bianchi, the Bavarian engraver Voigt, the Roman Moscetti, and other eminent artists. His first signed medal appears to be that conferred in 1867 by Pio IX. for services during the epidemics of 1866. In the same year his signature for the first time appears also on coins; viz. 2½ Lire, with bust of Pio IX. In 1869 Speranza engraved the official annual medal, showing on Rℒ. Christ asleep in the boat amongst his terrified apostles in tempestuous sea, accompanied by the motto : EXVRGE DOMINE ET IVDICA CAVSAM TVAM. This medal is one of his best. Soon after, on the Pope being deprived of his temporal power, the Papal Mint was transformed into a Royal Mint, and became the only currency-issuing Mint of the new kingdom of Italy. Speranza retained his appointment of Chief-engraver under Umberto I. and Vittorio Emmanuel III. until his death. In 1878 he was preparing dies for a new issue of 5 Lire pieces of Vittorio Emmanuele II., to replace the type by Ferraris, when the founder of United Italy died at the Quirinal Palace. Bianchi remained in office as Medallist to the Pontifical See at the Vatican Mint.

Comm. A Comandini sums up in the following words his appreciation of Speranza's merit, and they seem to me to give an accurate estimate of the artist and of the man : " Speranza fu un continuatore diligente e coscienzioso di un indirizzo artistico che oramai era confinato nei limiti delle espressioni ufficiali; l'arte non osava penetrare ancora nelle officine governative; il giovine regno faceva medaglie con un testa convenzionale del sovrano nel diritto, e poche parole secondo i casi e le circostanze, nel rovescio; i conii artistici costano e il bilancio dello Stato non permetteva larghezze, che, diciamolo pure, lo stesso indirizzo della pubblica opinione, fino a pochi anni addietro, non avrebbe, non che comprese, consentite. Così le inclinazioni artistiche dello Speranza non poterono estrinsecarsi; uscirono dalla zecca sotto i regni di Umberto I et di Vittorio Emmanuele III le discusse monete che tutti conosciamo; mentre le medaglie annuali pontificie, rimaste allo studio d'incisione del Bianchi in Vaticano, continuavano ad eccellere col loro puro classicismo.

" Nell' evoluzione del gusto pubblico anche Speranza si sarebbe certamente esplicato con nuove manifestazioni del suo bulino, ma la morte lo ha colpito improvisamente, a soli 55 anni.

" Era un lavoratore infaticabile; franco, semplice, buono; riceveva nel proprio studio avendo in testa, spesso, un berretto di carta, da vero operaio; ma la sera non mancava mai al Caffè di Roma, al tavolino rotondo, in mezzo alla prima sala, ad una partita di chiacchiere con vecchi amici, cominciata, io credo, ai bei tempi di Pio IX.

" L'opera sua fu, più che altro, l'espressione dei gusti ufficiali del suo tempo — epoca di transizione fra il tramonto del regime pontificio e la instaurazione in Roma del Governo Nazionale (pel quale Speranza ebbe sempre, fin da Giovane, sincerissime aspirazioni) ". (A. Comandini, Filipo Speranza, Riv. ital. di num., 1904, p. 477).

I can only enumerate a few of Speranza's productions, as many, I have no doubt, have escaped my notice :

Coins. Papal States : Pius IX. Æ. 2½ Lire 1867, signed F. SPERANZA; — Kingdom of Italy : Vittorio Emanuele II, Æ. Pattern Scudo 1878; — Umberto I, Æ. 100, 20, 10 and 5 Lire; Æ. 5, 2, and 1 Lire, 50 Centesimi; Nickel 20 Centesimi; — Æ. 10, 5 and 2 Centesimi, of various dates, 1878-1900; — Vittorio Emanuele III., Æ. 20 Lire 1903 (illustrated); Æ. 5 Lire 1903 (only a limited number issued for public currency); 2 and 1 Lire; 50 Centesimi; Æ. 10 and 5 Centesimi, of various dates, between 1900 and 1908. —

Victor Emmanuel III., 20 Lire 1903.

Eritria : Umberto I, Æ. 5, 2 and 1 Lire; 50 Centesimi, of various dates from 1890 to 1900. — San Marino : Æ. 5, 2 and 1 Lire, and 50 Centesimi 1898.

Among Speranza's medallic productions, I may mention : Pius IX, annual medal 1869, Rℒ. Christ and his apostles in boat, &c.; — Memorial medal of Victor Emmanuel II., 1878. — Accession of Umberto I., 1878; — Medal of Merit, with bust of Umberto I.; — Visit of King Umberto and Queen Margherita to Sicily, 1881; — Industrial Exhibition at Turin, 1885; — Medal of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, 1890; — Medal of the Rome Rifle Club, 1890; — Presentation medal to Odoardo Chiossone; — Third Geographical Congress, with bust of Nicolo and Antonio Zeno; — Lud. Ant. Muratori, historian; — Mgr. Luigi dei Conti Pila Carocci, 1890 (Priestly Jubilee); — Presentation medal to Lieut-general Enrico Cosenz, 1890; — Vincenzo Bellini, 1876 (2 var.); — Giuseppe Verdi, 1889; — Another, of 1901; — Francesco Borghesi; — Duchess of Galliera.

Two Lire piece of Eritrea, 1890.

SOME RARE AND UNPUBLISHED CHINESE COINS.

by H. A. Ramsden. F. R. N. S. etc.

In the search for Chinese coins, where so many imitations abound, it is difficult to come across a rare specimen in genuine condition.

For the delectation of collectors, ever since this pursuit was in vogue in the Middle Kingdom, —and we have records of collections being in existence before the Sixth Century A.D., the annals of the Sui Dynasty (581-618) containing references to various such, — imitations have been made and foisted on the inexperienced collector. The earlier "facsimiles", so different from the modern and so-called "representative" specimens, have today acquired a certain numismatic value on account of their age and fidelity of reproduction and readily find a place in the student's cabinet. They require an expert in this particular and difficult branch to differentiate them from the genuine originals and a special study is necessary in order to be able to distinguish and separate the various issues and correctly assign to them their respective dates of production.

In the study of Sino-numismatics, on which subject so many and varied treatises have appeared, it is a rare occurrence to come across an unpublished specimen. Native authors have included in their works no few coins which they had never seen either in the original or in reproduction. The illustrations in such cases are mainly founded on meagre verbal description, if not entirely derived from the fertile imagination of the artist. In consequence, coins which have never been in existence are often found in the pages of Chinese numismatic books.

Under the above circumstances, it will be easily understood that to pick up a rare and unpublished specimen in genuine condition is indeed a matter for congratulation.

Nevertheless, such coins are now and then found by the ardent collector and prized accordingly. The awakening of that vast and ancient country, with its consequent greater liberty of social and scientific intercourse, together with the extension of the railway system and general improvement of other means of communication, — not only on account of the digging of the earth and turning over of the soil, which it necessarily entails, and levelling of ancient hills or mounds, but also on account of the increased facilities of transportation, — are among the principal factors which help us to explain and account why coins turn up today with greater frequency than formerly. Notwithstanding that the supply has increased, and which at any moment may become exhausted, it still remains less than the demand. All new finds are quickly and eagerly absorbed by the numerous and appreciative collectors found all over China and Japan, scarcely leaving a residue sufficient for foreign requirements.

This state of affairs has greatly tended to facilitate the solving of various intricate and involved numismatic problems which have exercised the minds of advanced Sino-numismatists for some time past. The increased number of genuine specimens at their disposal now permit of deeper investigation and more extended scientific research. We are now in a position to be able to base our conclusions on the evidence supplied by the coins themselves with a greater degree of confidence than formerly. This is an advantage of no small importance, since, historical and other data being wanting altogether in many instances, we are left entirely dependent on numismatic evidence, which was denied to former students.

It is consequently under this plea that I have been tempted to record the result of recent experiences and research in the practical side of coin collecting in China.

Only by dealing with those coins forming part of my own comprehensive collection, can I be sure of describing bona fide and genuine specimens. The accuracy of reproduction, faithful copies of the originals in my own cabinet, and, where necessary, additional information, will, I hope, serve of some useful purpose and help to advance the higher knowledge of Chinese ancient numismatics.

I. THE COINS OF TCH'UI.

Although there are many treatises on the numismatics of China, not more than eight make mention of this little known ancient currency.

The interpretation given to the inscription on these coins is shared by the majority, all agreeing that it represents the character "Tch'ui", (垂) but there is great divergence in assigning the probable date of issue.

Both the Chin Ho (金索) and the Ku Chin Lu (古今錄) attribute this issue to the Emperor Shao Hao (B.C. 2597) while the Chuan Pu Chien Chi (泉布統誌) brings it still nearer, assigning it to the time of the Emperor Ch'eng T'ang (B.C. 1766).

The Ki Kin So Kien Lu (吉金所見錄) places it at about B.C. 827, while the trustworthy Ku Chuan Hui (古泉匯) does not go any farther back than B.C. 719. Both of these assumptions are probably nearest to the correct date and are today so accepted by Sino-numismatists.

That very recent and voluminous work the Ku Chin Chien Lueh (古今錢略) is non committal, putting down the date and place of issue as uncertain.

Of the foreign works on the subject, Lacouperie is the only author that I have found who makes mention of this money, but it is certain that he never set eyes on an original specimen. The illustration in the "Catalogue of Chinese Coins" was no doubt derived from the Ku Chuan Hui, as the reproduction in this work was evidently copied from a defective specimen, the character of which was indistinct, the drawing consequently resulting inaccurate as regards the inscription.

Lacouperie adds that Tch'ui is now Fuh Shan (福山) hien (lat. 37° 33′, long. 121° 35′) in E. Shan Tung.

At the present time, some 20 pieces are known to be in the hands of collectors in China, while in Japan, half that number could perhaps be found, exclusive of my lot. As far as I am aware, only four specimens of this coin are to be found outside of the Far East, all of them, I believe, in America.

My own cabinet contains some 24 different varieties, but for the purposes of this article, I have considered it sufficient to illustrate ten examples, which will be enough to point out the main differences existing in the inscription and shape.

These coins possess certain marked and prominent characteristics which are not to be found in any other issue of the ancient Chinese money. They are so pronounced and instructive, that I have considered it of special intereet to lay stress on the various points.

1. The patina is the same in all the pieces I have so far seen, notwithstanding that they were found in different localities and at separate times. The metal, even in the raised inscription (as is the case in most other ancient coins), is not discernable and it would be difficult to ascertain its composition. An almost uniform green corrosion covers the entire surface of the coin, which has lost all metallic sound.

2. Both the shape and size, with but slight variations, is the same in all cases, as will be seen by the illustrations accompanying this article and which are actual size. The head may sometimes be found with a slightly different angle, as in fig. 7, and even almost round, as in fig. 10, while in some cases, like fig. 6, the neck may be somewhat thicker than the generality. I may remark that most coins of the early Chinese period are known to vary greatly both in size and shape, this being perhaps the only instance where a certain regularity is maintained throughout.

3. The character composing the insription, notwithstanding its primitive style, varies but little. Large (figs. 1 to 4) and small sizes (figs. 5 to 8) are to be met with, while those out of centre (figs. 9 and 10) are more rare. In fact, the manner of writing the inscription, specially when compared with those of the other ancient coins, where perhaps no two are ever alike, is almost monotonous, since the different angles of the strokes, which constitute the principal differences, can hardly be considered as producing important varieties.

4. There is but little difference in their weight, those most corroded being the heaviest. The 24 in my collection give the following results:—

1 of 10.5 grammes	1 of 9.6 grammes	2 of 9.1 grammes
1 of 10.2 —	2 of 9.5 —	3 of 9. —
3 of 10. —	3 of 9.3 —	2 of 8.9 —
1 of 9.7 —	3 of 9.2 —	1 of 8.7 —
	and	1 of 8· —

The above figures giving a mathematical average of 9.5 grammes, with a mean of 9.3 grammes, in either case making little difference, as the individual weights do not vary much from each other. I know of no other series of ancient coins of this country where the weights are so uniformly near to each other as in the present case.

The Reverses are marked with the usual lines (fig. 11) found on most of the ancient Chinese Pu Coins, a survival of the shape of the primitive spades and hoes, from which they are derived.

Special marks are found on some Reverses, in various positions between the lines, but they are exceedingly rare. Fig. 12 shows the first of a series, the highest number of which has been found to be "six". These numerals were no doubt added to differentiate the various issues.

The circumstances of their being numbered, as well as the fact that a comparatively large lot are today in existence, which have been found at different places and separate times, conclusively point to their having been originally issued in no small quantities.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS &c.

We are informed that the Circular, which we print below, is being sent to the Secretaries of the principal Numismatic Societies in Europe and America, and believe its contents will be of interest to our readers.

Eds. Numismatic Circular.

Yokohama Numismatic Society.

Yokohama, 5th Aug. 1911.

Sir,

I beg to inform you that at the monthly meeting held on the 1st inst., the following motion was unanimously adopted: —

"That a standing Committee be appointed of not less than five persons, the President and Secretary being included ex oficio, to be of assistance to members of the Society residing outside of Yokohama and arrange for exhibitions of Far Eastern coins and afford facilities for viewing private collections during their stay in this city. That the foregoing invitation should also be extended to members of the principal numismatic societies in Europe and America visiting this country".

In transmitting the above for your information and in order to better carry out its purpose, may I request that nembers of your Society who wish to avail themselves of the above invitation, be so kind as to advise before hand the time of their intended stay in this city.

I beg to remain, Sir,
Yours faithfully,
Signed: Hon'y. Sec'y,

REVIEWS.

Catalogue of the Coins of the Vandals, Ostrogoths and Lombards and of the Empires of Thessalonica, Nicaea and Trebizond in the British Museum. By Warwick Wroth. With an Introduction and 43 Plates. Royal 8 vo. xciv, 344 pp. London, 1911.

A most interesting and important contribution to numismatic science is the volume just issued by the Trustees of the British Museum which is intended to supplement the Catalogue of Imperial Byzantine Coins in the British Museum, published in 1908. The series described by Mr. Wroth in the present work comprise the coins of the Vandals and Ostrogoths, the Lombard Kingdom and Lombard Duchy of Beneventum, those of the so-called Empires of Thessalonica, Nicaea, and Trebizond, and the monetary productions of the despots of Epirus and of the Duchy of Neopatras.

An elaborate Introduction supplies all the desired historical data in connection with the different coinages, which are dealt with at length in the erudite author's competent manner.

The National Collection is very rich in these series, thanks especially to the numerous presentations of the late Count J. F. W. de Salis, whose classification and arrangement have been still in part preserved by Mr. Wroth.

In view of the great difficulties involved in the cataloguing of many of the coins, which are barbarous in type and fabric, and offer little or no iconographic or epigraphic clue for identification, one cannot refrain from expressing admiration for the critical sagacity and numismatic acumen the author has again displayed in this volume.

With the aid of Mr. Wroth's book it will now be possible to classify without much trouble any of the coins belonging to the series he has described and without having to refer to the numerous monographs and larger works in English, French, German, Italian, and Russian which hitherto had to be consulted on the subject.

The coins of the Vandals come first for consideration. Their earliest issues date from about the first half of the fifth century A.D.; they end with those of Gelimer, the last king, whom Belisarius led in triumph through Constantinople in 534. The coinage of Gaiseric (428-477) is only conjectural, which is to be regretted in view of the great interest attached to the founder of the Vandal kingdom, who after storming Rome, carried away captive the Empress Eudoxia, and returned to Africa laden with spoils, including the sacred vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem brought by Titus. Intimately connected with the coinage of the Vandals are various types of small bronze coins which are ascribed to Moorish tribes. Some of these coins bear inscriptions which permit their attribution to Masuna, who styled himself 'Rex Maurorum et Romanorum'. The Vandal currency was chiefly minted at Carthage. The old Carthaginian type of a horse's head was revived on some of their bronze currency.

Friedländer, Keary, Sabatier, and other scholars have studied the coinage of the Ostrogoths, and only little fresh information has come to light on this subject since their publications. The Ostrogothic rulers held sway over Italy from about 486 to 553, and coined money at the mints of Ravenna, Rome, Milan and Ticinum (Pavia). Mr. Wroth gives in frontispice an illustration (enlarged) of the unique Medallion in gold, equivalent in weight to three solidi of Theodoric, from the collection of Comm. F. Gnecchi of Milan. Of Amalasuntha, the talented daughter of Theodoric, who twice ruled as regent, and was put to death by her husband Theodahad, no coins bearing her name have unfortunately been found. Theia, the last king, who perished in 553 in the battle of Mons Lactarius, coined gold tremisses and silver half and quarter siliquae from the mint of Ticinum.

Only fourteen years after the overthrow of the Ostrogoths, in 568, the Lombard invaded Italy, and under Alboin the conqueror, 'Lord of Italy', mastered the Northern part of the peninsula. Their domination extended over a period of two centuries until Charlemagne, in 774, made their last king, Desiderius, a prisoner. The coinage of the early rulers is very difficult to assign. Mr. Wroth has ascribed conjecturally some types to the periods of Alboin and Cleph; Authari and Agilulf; Adalwald, Ariwald and Rothari; Rodwald, Aripert I; Peretarit and Godepert, Grimwald; Peretarit I. From Cuninepert (688-700) the Lombard currency assumes well-marked characteristics.

The Coinage of the Duchy and Principality of Beneventum has made recently the subject of an important monograph by M. Arthur Sambon in Le Musée, 1908. Mr. Wroth has adopted in the main the classification proposed by M. Sambon, although he rejects some of his attributions. The portraiture on Beneventan coins, as in fact on most of the coins described in this Catalogue, is very disappointing. One type of head of barbarous fabric " does duty for each successive prince ". Beneventum was captured in 891 by the Greeks, and finally fell under the rule of Atenolf, Lord of Capua (900-910).

The Empire of Thessalonica was founded by Theodore Angelus Comnenus Duca, despot of Epirus (1207-1222) and did not last 25 years (1246), when it was incorporated by John I. Vatatzes with his own Empire of Nicaea. The only coins apparently struck by the Emperors of Thessalonica were in silver and bronze. But the numismatic study of this Empire, says Mr. Wroth, is still in an unsatisfactory condition, and so is that of the Empire of Nicaea, which came into existence after the Frankish conquest of Constantinople in 1204, under Theodore I. Lascaris (1204-1222) and was merged in the restored Byzantine Empire under Michael VIII. Palaeologus (1260-61).

There are no coins of the Despots of Epirus in the British Museum Collection; but of the Duchy of Neopatras, Mr. Wroth describes two bronze Numismata of John I. (1271-1296).

The coinage of the Empire of Trebizond was practically unknown to collectors until 1827, although the currency is abundant enough. Baron de Marchant was the first to describe some Aspers of the Emperors of Trebizond. Sabatier in 1862 published a number of typical specimens, but recently a Russian numismatist, M. O. Retowski has issued a most valuable contribution to the study of this series (Die Münzen der Komnenen von Trapezunt, Moscow, 1910). The Empire was founded by Alexius I Comnenus in 1204, of whom however no coins have been as yet identified, and neither of his successor Andronicus I. It is suggested that the Trebizond coinage did not come into existence till John I. (1235-1238). Under Manuel I's long reign (1238-1263), the Empire was very prosperous, and his coins are plentiful. So are those of John II. (1280-1297), who was deposed circ. A.D. 1285 by his sister Theodora. Her usurpation of the throne did not last long, but has left a witness to it in the issue of an asper bearing her name and figure; she is the only Trebizond empress who issued coins. Under David II., after many vicissitudes, the Empire was finally handed over to Mohammad in 1461. The Trebizond Emperors did not apparently strike gold; their coinage consisted of silver Aspers and Half Aspers, and Bronze Numismata. The R/. type almost invariably relates to St. Eugenius, the patron saint of the city. It is most probable that the currency was minted in the capital, although Cherson in the Crimea may also have been a mint of the Empire of Trebizond.

From the above notes some idea of the interest and importance of this latest of British Museum Catalogues will be gathered, and Mr. Wroth has earned anew the gratitude of his fellow-numismatists and of the world of science for this most important work on a series hitherto very incompletely known.

Chinese Paper Money. By H. A. Ramsden, F.R.N.S. Published by Jun Kobayagawa and Co, Yokohama (Japan), 1911. 8°. 37 pp., with illustrations.

This is a further volume of the series of "Manuals of Far Eastern Numismatics" from the pen of that active numismatist, Mr. H. A. Ramsden, under whose auspices, the Yokohama Numismatic Society, of which he is President, has been founded. We take this opportunity of welcoming in the ranks of elder societies our new sister, wishing her long life and prosperity, to the furtherance of science.

Mr. Ramsden is the author of several valuable booklets on "Modern Chinese Copper Coins", Corean Coin Charms and Amulets", "Kwan Ei Tsu Ho Coins", etc., and he is doing a very useful work in vulgarising the study of far eastern numismatics, which are so little known, owing no doubt to the linguistic difficulties connected with the deciphering and attribution of the coins.

Little or nothing seems to be known in this part of the world about the issues of old Chinese Paper Money. The only collection known to us in England was that of the late Dr Bushell, who was at one time Director of the Hong Kong Mint.

The Chinese have always been reputed to be the first to issue Banknotes. Mr. Ramsdem tells us that "the first government notes of which the issue is authentically recorded, were of the Emperor Hsien Tung (A.D. 806-821), the fourteenth ruler of the T'ang Dynasty." No specimens of this first issue are known to exist.

The author divides the Notes into ten classes: Tang Notes, Posterior Chou Notes, Sung Notes, Southern Sung Notes, Hsia Notes, Western Liao Notes, Kin Notes, Yuan Notes, Ming Notes, and Ching Notes, and he describes and illustrates the particularities of each series. After the accession of Tung Chih (1762) the issue of Notes was left entirely into private hands, banks and money changers, but in our own times some of the provincial governments have resumed the issue of government Notes.

On three Plates Mr. Ramsden illustrates a Ming Note (1368-99), a Hsien Feng Note (1851-62) and a Private Bank Note of the present time.

We warmly recommend to any one interested this well-written and valuable little manual, and have no doubt it will have a ready sale, as it opens up a new field of research.

CATALOGUE

COINS and MEDALS for SALE

Special attention is directed to the fact that every coin or medal catalogued in the following lists is guaranteed to be absolutely genuine (except when expressly stated in the description to be otherwise) and if not approved of can be returned, when the full amount paid will be refunded.

Collectors will also kindly note that every care is taken when compiling the catalogues not to overrate the condition of the pieces but to faithfully represent them according to their merits.

All orders should be sent to Spink & Son Ltd., 17 and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.

GREEK COINS.

LEONTINI.

In a fertile territory about eight miles from the sea coast, near a lake still known as the Lago di Lentini, some settlers from Naxos founded Leontini five or six years after the foundation of their mother-city.

The name given to the new city was properly that of the people. Polybius speaks of it as ἡ τῶν λεοντίνων πόλις, the city of the Leontini. Ptolemy is the only author who gives the city a name formed in the usual manner λεόντιον (III, IV, 13).

The founding of the city is thus related by Thucydides: "Moreover Thucles and the Chalcidians from Naxos set out in the fifth year after the founding of Syracuse, and having expelled the Sicels by arms, resettled Leontini, and after it Catana".

Strabo mentions the fact that the Leontini themselves founded another colony which they called Euboea, but as it was destroyed by Gelo it cannot have had a long duration (VI, 272).

The government of the first settlers in Leontini was an oligarchy until the year 608 B.C., when Panaeteus became Tyrant. He is mentioned among other tyrants in Aristoteles' πολιτικων (V, 10.12, p. 151,165 Ed. Bekker). Leontini was an independent city until it fell under the yoke of Hippocrates of Gela about 498 B.C. Herodotus merely mentions Leontini with the other cities which fell before Gelon, then the officer under Hippocrates (VII, 154). The types of the earliest coins known to us issued from Leontini are evidently copied from those of Syracuse and appear from their style to have been minted soon after 480 B.C. No coins of the preceding Archaic Period have been found.

THE TYPE WITH THE FEMALE HEAD.

This coin is evidence of the close connection of Leontini with Syracuse.

The head of the nymph, or of the goddess Artemis, is copied from the Syracusan coins, and the only difference is in the barleycorns which surround the head instead of dolphins. The victorious quadriga on the obverse is also a copy of the same coinage; the lion in the exergue also is a copy of that on the coinage called Demareteia.

For the ideas connected with these types confer the chapter on the Archaic coins of Syracuse. The style of this series is similar to that of the Demareteia coinage, and we may conclude that they belong to the same period, about 480-478 B.C.

The quadriga on the Reverse, or properly in this case the Obverse, was copied from the coins of Syracuse, and when this type became common to several cities it ceased to be distinctive of the Syracusan money, and gradually the head which had been originally a secondary device became the primary, and the inscription was placed around the head as belonging not to the type but to the city on the whole coin.

This type of the victorious quadriga was common to Catana, Syracuse, Gela, Himera, Leontini and Panormus and, on the later fine art period, also to Camarina, Agrigentum and Segesta.

The type of the naked horseman on the drachms is common to Syracuse, Leontini and Gela, and is evidence of the close connection of these cities.

If we regard Mr. Macdonald's idea as right that in the case of Leontini the symbol of the lion became gradually the main type, we must place as the earliest of the coins those with a symbol in the exergue of the Reverse. Moreover Adolf Holm notices the influence of Syracusan types, not only in the quadriga, but in the female head surrounded by ears of barley instead of dolphins. Again, on all the early types of the quadriga the horses are walking, and therefore we can hardly follow the B. Mus. Catalogue in placing first a coin bearing horses galloping.

THE APOLLO TYPE.

The style of these coins is that of the coinage issued between 481 and 475 B.C.

If the female head was regarded as that of Artemis it is not surprising that her brother Apollo should share with her the honour of being represented on the coinage. The worship of Apollo at thar date in Sicily has been referred to in the chapter on the types of the archaic Syracusan coins.

He was the helper of those who founded cities or restored them. The leaves around his head are those of the tree sacred to this deity, the laurel.

The lion under his head is probably the badge of the city, and not a repetition of the lion on the Obverse copied from the Demareteia coinage.

The coins bearing a head of Apollo minted somewhat later than this early type were similar to those issued in Catana, and probably afford some evidence of a monetary convention between the two cities. The style of these heads is so similar that it is probable the same artist was employed by both cities.

TYPE OF THE LION'S HEAD.

Mr. G. Macdonald has given this coin as an example of the "types parlants" and has compared it with such as the goat type of Ægira, the fox type at Alopeconnessus (ἀλωπηξ), the anchor type at Ancyra, the cray fish type at Astacus (αστακος), the horn of plenty at Copia, the two handled vessel at Cypsela (κυψέλη), and many other types of a similar nature might be mentioned. "It is noticeable that the lion is used as a symbol on some of the oldest tetradrachms of Leontini. Its use as a symbol seems in this case to be the prelude rather than the sequel to its use as the full type, for a lion's head occupies the Reverse of the tetradrachms at least from the time of Hieron until the city lost its independence.". On p. 133 of "Coin types" the same writer notices the similar fact that at Caulonia we have also an example of a παράσημον that developed out of a mere symbol into an independent type, a process which would be the reverse of the ordinary one.

The notes of Adolf Holm on this type on p. 582 of his Geschichte Siciliens (Vol. III) are most interesting and suggestive, but there is one assertion which is out of harmony with all that seems to have been published concerning the worship of Apollo, viz. that the lion is a symbol of Apollo the sun god, the African deity. This idea is mentioned and rejected in the chapter on the Demareteia coinage.

A. Holm notices that the lion has taken the place of the fourth laurel leaf on the type bearing Apollo's head. This type he regards as later than that with the head of a Nymph or Goddess. The lion is regarded as the original 'type parlant' of the Leontini.

The interesting and valuable idea put forward by A. Holm is found in the following words: "Evidently Gelon took the lion from Leontini but gave it a new and deeper meaning; it is no longer (on the Demareteia) the lion of Leontini but a symbol of the victory over the African enemy given by Apollo, who on that occasion was the enemy of Africa."

"The connection between the cities Syracuse and Leontini is illustrated on these coins, for from their types we see that as the Leontini honoured the Syracusans by adopting the type of their Nymph or Goddess, so the Syracusans honoured the Leontini by adopting the symbol of the lion as part of their type."

We must suppose that the Leontini gave very considerable assistance to Gelon when he marched to Himera in 480 B.C. to meet the Carthaginians, but it is difficult to find any other evidence for this than that afforded by the coin types.

The adoption of the lion's head as the principal type, and as the παράσημα of their city, probably took place when the Leontini began to grow more independent of the support of Syracuse, and therefore the coins with this type are here regarded as later in date than those with the heads of divinities.

EARLY TRANSITIONAL COINS.

TETRADRACHMS.

1. Obv. ИО ИIT ИО ƎΛ.
Female head to right, wearing necklace and earring; hair falling over back of neck and turned up behind and bound with a wreath; around the head and outside the inscription, four barley corns.
Rev. Quadriga to right driven by charioteer, who holds reins in his left and whip in his right hand; the horses walking; above, Nike flying to right and crowning the horses.
In the exergue, a lion: border of dots.
II. Obv. ⅃EONTI NO N.
Head of Apollo to right laureated, hair cut short over his forehead and in formal curls over his temple, and plaited behind, leaving a long tress falling behind his ear; around, three laurel-leaves; beneath, a lion running to right.
A specimen is illustrated on Plate VII (no 690) of the Martinetti et Nervegna sale, by G. Sangiorgi, 1907.
Rev. A quadriga to right driven by young male charioteer, his right arm and shoulder bare, he holds a branch in his right hand and the reins in his left; above, Nike flying to left crowning him; in exergue, a lion running to right: border of dots.
III. Obv. ONITNOƎΛ or ΛEONTINON. A lion's head to right, with open mouth; around four barley corns.
Rev. A quadriga to right driven by male charioteer, wearing long chiton, holding goad in his right hand, and the reins in both; horses walking; above, Nike flying to right crowning horses: border of dots.
IV. Similar types but no inscription on Obverse and ΛEONTINON in exergue.
V. Similar but the inscription on Obverse and between the lion's head and the barley-corns.
VI. Obv. Similar type, the inscription retrograde.
Rev. Similar type but the horses galloping, Nike crowning the horses: border of dots. The specimens in the British Museum vary in weight between 270 grains and 259.5. The normal weight should be 268 grains or 17.4 grammes.
The lion's head is on the concave and therefore on the true Reverse of the coin, but that side is usually called the Obv.

DIDRACHM.

VII. Obv. ΛEONTINON.
Lion's head to right with open mouth; around four barley-corns.
Rev. Naked horseman to right, holding whip and reins; horse walking: border of dots.
VIII. Obv. Similar: plain border.
Rev. Similar type but the horse cantering. Two specimens in the B. Mus. have the legend retrograde.

DRACHM.

Normal weight 67.28.

IX. Obv. Same as no VII.
Rev. Naked horseman to right, holding reins in left hand, and with his right hand resting on his hip: the horse trotting: border of dots.

TRIHEMIOBOLION.

Normal weight: 1.09 grammes; 16.82 grains.

X. Obv. Lion's scalp facing: border of dots.
Rev. ΛE / ON. Barley-corn: plain border.
The legend on some specimens ΛE ON, on others ƎΛ / ON XI. Obv. Lion's head to right, mouth open: border of dots.
Rev. ИО ƎΛ barley-corn: plain border.

SMALL SILVER COINS WITH MARKS OF VALUE.

Hemilitron (sic) in B. M. Catalogue.

The weight of the specimen in B. M. is 5.8 grains. In the list of Sicilian weights in Mr. G. F. Hill's book on Greek and Roman Coins p. 224, this weight ·364 grammes or 5.05 grains is called the ἡμιωβέλιον.
XII. Obv. Lion's head to right, mouth open: border of dots.
Rev. ΛE ○○ / ○○ a barley-corn on either side.

PENTONKION.

In Mr. G. F. Hill's list of weights the πεντόνκιον is under the Native System and the weight is .362 grammes or 5.55 grains.
The weight of the specimen in the B. Mus. is only 4. grains.
XIII. Obv. Similar to No XII.
Rev. ○○ / ○ / ○○.

HEXAS.

XIV. Obv. Similar to No XII.
Rev. oo. Weight in grammes .145 gram.; weight of specimen in B. Mus. 1.4 grains.

PERIOD OF TRANSITION.

All these fourteen coins hitherto described are classed in the British Museum Catalogue as belonging to the Archaic Period, but they are here given in the Transitional Period because they were issued after 480 B.C. They might be said to belong to the early part of the Transitional Period. The coins that follow were issued after 466 to 450 B.C.

TETRADRACHMS.

1. Obv. Head of Apollo to right wearing laurel-wreath of two rows of leaves, hair cut short at front and tied in bunch behind with cord: border of dots.
Rev. ⅃EONTINON; between head and barley-corn a lion's head to right with mouth open; around, four barley-corns:
II. Obv. Similar but the wreath has three rows of leaves.
Rev. Similar to No 1.
III. Obv. Similar but the head turned to left.
Rev. Similar but the head turned to left. There is considerable variety in the way in which the letters of the legend are divided.

DRACHMS.

Normal weight: 67.28 grains.

IV. Obv. Similar to No II.
Rev. ⅃EON. Lion's head to left, mouth open above, in front and beneath a barley-corn: plain border.

OBOLS.

Weight: .173 grammes or 11.grains.

V. Obv. ⅃EON. Lion's head to left with open mouth: border of dots.
Rev. River-god naked to left, holding in his right hand a patera over an altar, and in his left a laurel-branch: behind, a barley-corn.
Some specimens in the B. Mus. weigh 12.8 and 11.1; perhaps these are light specimens of the λίτρα which should weigh .87 grammes or 13.43 grains, but they bear similar types.
VI. Obv. Head of Apollo to right wearing wreath with two rows of leaves, hair cut short in front in formal locks over temple, and plaited behind, with long tress falling behind ear: border of dots.
Rev. ⅃EON. Barley-corn: plain border. Weight of specimen in B. Mus.: 10.6 grains.
VII. Obv. Head of Apollo to right diademed, hair falling in tresses over his temple, and rolled behind: border of dots.
Rev. Similar to last. Weight of specimen in B. Mus.: 12.3 grains.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

B.C. 500 — A.D. 1900.

(Including the names of several hitherto unpublished artists.)

SPI. The inscription ΣΠΙ occurs on a fine Hemidrachm of Arcadia of the fifth century B.C. It may however represent a magistrate's name only. (Photiades Pacha Collection, n° 1183.)

SPICER-SIMSON, THEODORE (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Le Havre (France) in 1871, of English parents. He began his studies in Paris 1890, going through the Ecole des Beaux Arts for four years, as a pupil of Professors A. Millet, Thomas, and especially J. Dampt.

Theodore Spicer-Simson.
Portrait-medal by the artist.

He first exhibited at the Old Salon, Paris, the Royal Academy, and the New Gallery in 1896. In 1901 and following years he exhibited at the New Salon, or Société Nationale des Beaux-Arts, of which he was elected an Associate in that year. In 1904 he was invited to participate in the Prague, and the Liverpool Autumn Exhibition. Since, he has exhibited his works at Frankfort-on-Main, Gotha, Munich, Brunswick, Brussels, Magdeburg, Weimar, Cassel, Leipzig, Dresden, The Hague, Bremen, Hamburg, Stuttgart, New-York, etc.

The museums of Dresden, Leipzig, Frankfort, Munich, etc., have bought several medallions of M^r^ Spicer-Simson, and Prof. Pick of Gotha was one of the first to add specimens of his works several years ago to the Ducal collection at Gotha.

The Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington, London, the Art Gallery, Birmingham, the Dublin Museum, and other public and private collections in Great Britain have on exhibition medals by this talented artist.

Mr. Spicer-Simson distinguished himself at the Numismatic Congress, Brussels, 1910, where one day he had the honour to preside over the "Section de la Médaille". Both at the Brussels Salon and at the New-York Medallic Exhibition he had very good exhibits of his principal medallic works. The medallions of G. F. Watts, Louise Strong Hammond, and George Meredith are illustrated in the New York Catalogue. At Brussels he won the gold Medal (Diplôme de Première classe), the highest award given.

The following is a fairly representative list of Mr. Spicer-Simson's medallic work: 1908: 1903-4. Geoffrey Spicer-Simson R.N.; — Noel Spicer-Simson, R.A. (Prague Museum); — Noelie Spicer-Simson, the artist's sister (illustrated; specimens in South Kensington Museum, Dresden, Leipzig, Prague); — Mildred Spicer-Simson (Dresden, Frankfort); — Margaret Spicer-Simson, the artist's wife (illustrated; Dresden, Leipzig, Frankfort, Munich); — J. van Winkle; — Mrs. Mac Cameron; — Emile Sedeyn; — Alexander Buel Trowbridge; — Penelope King (Leipzig); — George F. Watts R.A. (illustrated; Dublin, Gotha, Dresden, Leipzig); — Ernest Bengough Ricketts; — Charles Bach; — Louise W. Newman; — F. S. Newell; — Edward Newell; — Alfred Simson (Leipzig, Dresden); — Herman Simson; — Henri Frantz (South Kensington, Leipzig); — Alice Arbuthnot Simson; — Princess Alexander Meschersky; — Otto Hentig, State minister at Gotha; —

Noelie Spicer-Simson, 1904.

Mrs. Margaret Spicer-Simson, 1906.

General Horace Porter, American ambassador at Paris; — 1905. Barrett Wendell; — Mildred Schmidt (Leipzig, Frankfort); — John Philp Wood (Gotha); — Gilbert Colgate; — Vice-Admiral Sir Wilmot H. Fawkes K.C.V.O.; — Sir Patrick Playfair C.I.E.; — Lawrence Halsey; — Madame C. A. Corrie; — Ph. Carroll, U. S. M. A.; — Waldron Faulkner (Dresden); — 1906. Medal commemorating the 'Entente cordiale' (Gotha, Dresden); — Bernard Monod; — Charles Peabody (Dresden); — Alice Peabody; — Ella Mielziner (illustrated; Dresden, Leipzig); — Elizabeth Strong Hammond (illustrated); — Louise Strong Hammond (illustrated; Dresden, Leipzig); — Wilhelm von Scharfenberg; — Behrend Pick, numismatist, and Keeper of coins, Ducal Library, Gotha; — Anna B. Bliss (Mrs. William Bliss); — H. R. H. Victoria Adelheid

Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (2 var.), etc. The largest of these medallions measures (outside) 5 ¼ inches. ; — 1907. H.M.S. Good Hope (Rx. of Adm. Sir Wilmot Fawkes medal); — Mary Scovill Baxter; — Theodore Spicer-Simson, self-portrait (illustrated); — Fritz Rechberg; — George Gissen; — Max Rosenheim, F.S.A., London, the well-known collector of Renaissance medals; died, 5. September 1911 (illustrated); — Margaret Anglin; — Eva Mudocci and Bella Edwards (illustrated); — Hilda Louise Spicer-Simson; — Child, front view; — Alice Arbuthnot Simson, etc.

During a prolonged stay in the United States, in the present year (1911) Mr. Spicer Simson has added several Portrait-medallions to his already important gallery: Mrs. Jules Bache; — Helen Huntington (Mrs. Archer M. Huntington; illustrated); — Worthington Ford, Secretary of the Massachusetts Historical Society; — Bryon Burroughs; — Philip Sawyer; — Charles Leavitt jun^{r}; — F. Walter Laurence; — Ada Newell (Mrs. Ed. T. Newell); — Dollie Whiley Bell Hilles (Mrs. Charles Dewey Hilles); — William Howart Taft, President of the U. S.; — Herbert Faulkner; — Elizabeth Robinson (Mrs Ed. Robinson, wife of the Director of the Metropolitan Museum, New York); — Emma and Stowell Rounds (two children together); — Seal of the New York Women's League for Animals.

Eva Mudocci and Bella Edwards.
(Plaquette, reduced).

The artist's portrait-medallion of George Meredith was acquired for the National Gallery, London.

A good notice of the artist will be found in Mr. Bauman L. Belden's 'Catalogue of the International Medallic Exhibition at New York', March 1910. Special articles on his work have appeared in the French art magazines, L'Art décoratif, and Art et Décoration, September 1903; also in the Studio, February 1903, May 1904, and September 1905, and in Putnam's Magazine for March 1897, etc.

The work of Spicer-Simson, the Medallist, is remarkable in various respects. He is a master in handling the material, and he has succeeded in imitating to a high degree of perfection the style of the great Italian portraitists of the fifteenth century, whose chief characteristics are boldness of design, conceived in the spirit of the antique, and simple modelling, with neglect of superfluous detail.

Among his earlier works one of the most successful is the Portrait-medallion of the famous British artist, George Frederick Watts R.A., which was modelled from life in April 1904, barely three months before his death.

The Watts medallion, executed in the style of the early Renaissance school, is a bold piece of work, which reminds one of a portrait by Pastorino. The likeness is highly realistic and dignified, and might have been designed by Watts himself. The lofty forehead, the eyes in their deep sockets, the strong Roman nose, every feature expressive of keenness of mind, denote the great artist who holds such a high place in the estimation of his countrymen.

The artist writes: "The relief of the face in the "Louise Hammond" medallion was modelled purposely very low to give extremely delicate tones and shadows to the feature, which seems to me to be a means of expressing through art some of those mysterious and evanescent qualities of charm that certain young girls possess.

"If we examine the well known medallion by Pisano of 'Don Inigo de Davalos', of about the same relief as my 'Louise Hammond' we feel the same charm with an added quality of strength expressed through the high relief of the wonderful headdress and mantle. Because of the variety and strong character of the dresses and particularly the headdresses that were worn during the Renaissance, Pisano, like other artists of his time, had greater opportunities than the modern men to make something decorative as well as full of character.

"In the 'Don Inigo' it was possible to make the face seem so subtle by giving relief and boldness of touch to the headdress and as it touched the mantle to make that also in higher relief. In the 'Louise Hammond' medallion, the head and dress being quite separate it would not be possible to do this without destroying the harmony of the whole, and in this case I would not have wished to make the relief higher, for part of the character of the person as well as the work was the simplicity in both. All the same I have made the hair relatively a little more in relief than the face to add some slight impression of strength.

"In the 'Ella Mielziner' medallion, the long veil high in relief gives strength and simplicity to a complicated subject. The pyramidical lines of the whole subject are arrested at a certain point by the parasol, centralising the interest and preventing these lines from wandering down out of the frame (in this case the outline of the medal). As with this parasol so the straight line of the hat governs the composition in the 'Don Inigo' medal. One has but to compare the position of the first and last letters of the inscription to see that they are parallel with the line of the hat."

Many of Mr. Spicer-Simson's later medallions might be similarly studied in detail to show the principles which guided their elaboration.

Elizabeth S. Hammond.

The Elizabeth S. Hammond is one of the smallest and lowest relief medals the artist has ever made.

Mr. Spicer-Simson is always vigorous, without being insensitive to the charms of detailed definition. He has a remarkable faculty for catching the right moment and the right pose, which, coupled with a reserve in treatment and an absence of anything pertaining to mannerism makes his portraits still more interesting on closer observation.

Mr. Spicer-Simson is and will become more and more a leader amongst medallists in this country and America. He possesses in an exceptionally right proportion the qualities by which the independent artist is distinguished. His work bears the stamp of a dominating personality. The various sides of his art have been developed together; his skill of craftsmanship is guided by his aesthetic sentiment, based on the study of the art of the great masters of history. He is true to himself, and holds among our modern masters a place which but few artists can claim to share.

SPIEGEL, HANS HEINRICH (Germ.). Mint-master at Königsee, circ. 1620.

SPIEL, GREGORIUS (Swiss). Mint-engraver at Basle, circ. 1513-1533. He was succeeded in 1533 by Jörg Schweiger. Dr Julius Cahn (Die Baseler Stempelschneider familie Schweiger im XVI. Jahrhundert, Rev. suisse de num., 1898, p. 274 sqq.) refers to Spiel, and states that he is the first Engraver (Ysengraber) whose name is known, of the "Rappen Münzbund", but that it is uncertain in which city he was working. The dies he engraved were for subsidiary currency, not over the size of the Plappart, except a few Dicken of the 1499 'Gothic' type, nor did he coin the quite small species, as the Rappen and Stäbler. It is not impossible however that the fine Goldgulden, which Basle alone struck outside the confederacy, were also productions of this Engraver.

By him are certainly Plapparts, with the B. Virgin and Child, Double Vierer, and Vierer (Vide Corraggioni, pl. XXVII, 10, 19 and 20).

SPIESS, JOHANN VON HARTENFELS (Austr.). Mint-master at Kuttenberg, 1599-1603; privy-mark, a goat's head in shield.

SPILLMANN, CHRISTOPH (Austr.). Contractor, in conjunction with Zwirner, of the Brünn Mint, early part of the seventeenth century.

SPINELLI, ANDREA (Ital.). Medallist and Mint-engraver at Venice, who flourished during the second and third quarters of the sixteenth century; he was a native of Parma, and died 24. May 1572. On 29. July 1535 he was appointed Assistant-engraver at the Zecca, and on the decease of the Chief-engraver, Pietro Benintendi, in 1540, he succeeded him in virtue of an order of the 24. May of that year. In May 1543 he started business, in partnership with his son, as a Bookseller and Dealer in engravings. His shop was situated in the San Giuliano district. Vincenzo Lazari ascribes to him the plates of coins of the famous Placard of 20. November 1554, showing the Venetian and foreign currency which had been withdrawn from currency.

It is thought that Giacomo Spinelli died some time before his father, who instituted his other son, Marcantonio, his successor.

By Andrea Spinelli are the following medals: Andrea Gritti, 77th doge of Venice, † 1538; signed: AND. SPIN. F.; dated on obv. MDXXIII, and on ℞. wearing a cap, without inscription or reverse (Museo del Castello, Milan).

This portrait of Antony of Burgundy is Niccolo's earliest known medallion. The medals of Cardinal Giovanni de' Medici (later, Pope Leo X.), Francesco Lancillotto, and others were executed in the last years of his life, close before 1514. In intimate relation to the Burgundian medal stands that of Giovanni Gaddi, which Bode considers to be probably one of the earliest Florentine productions of the Master (circ. 1470-1475). About 1485-1486 he made a prolonged stay in Rome, when he modelled two Portrait-medals of Pope Innocent VIII., one of which is dated 1486, and others of Papal secretaries, protonotaries, relatives of the Pontiff, etc., as : Antonio Geraldini ; — Giovanni Mendoza ; — Teodorina Usamari-

Cibo, the Pope's daughter ; — Peretta Usamari, daughter of Teodorina ; — Silvestro d'Uziari, bishop of Chioggia (dated 1485) ; — Cardinal Giangiacomo Sclafenati ; — Filippo Sclafenati, brother of Giangiacomo ; — Fabritio Marliani, bishop of Piacenza ; — John Kendal, and Guillaume Caoursin, Knights of the Order of Rhodes, etc. To the eighties belong also quite a number of Florentine productions of Niccolo. Many of them portray members of the powerful Medici house, from Lorenzo and Giuliano to Cardinal Giovanni, and younger scions of the family, including Diamante de' Medici, and another female portrait which may only be identified as belonging to the same series by the inscriptions SEMPER and GLOVIS. The Lorenzo de' Medici medal (illustr. Vol. II, p. 94) "gives the compressed, ugly features of the great statesman and patron of art, a heritage of his family, with a fidelity that borders on brutality" [1]. On the Rℒ. is Florentia holding a lily, seated under an olive-tree, the symbol of peace. "The artist always readily employed for the reverses of his medals the devices on the ancient coins and gems, the originals of which were in possession of the Medici — a striking proof of the immediate influence which their is adorned with a helmet (illust., Vol. IV, p. 6). Two unique pieces, in the Berlin Cabinet, represent Giuliano and Giovanni, the brother and son of Lorenzo. The latter has already been mentioned as one of the artist's latest works. In the same group, we find portraits of members of the foremost Florentine families, which stood close to the Medici : Giovanni Tornabuoni ; — Lorenzo Tornabuoni and Giovanna Albizzi ; — Lorenzo Tornabuoni ; — Giovanna Albizzi (one illustr., Vol. II, p. 95); — Lodovica Tornabuoni, daughter of Giovanni Tornabuoni ; — Filippo Strozzi ; —

Nonina Strozzi, one of the medal claimed for the " Médailleur à l'Espérance ", which Bode identifies as Fiorentino ; — Giovanni Gaddi ; — Bernardo Salviati ; — Leonora Altoviti ; — Maria de Morelli ; — Roberto Nasi ; — and other members of the Sassetta, Federighi, etc., families. In the rank of the savants and artists of Lorenzo's court, Niccolo portrayed many, as Marsilio Ficino ; — Angelo Poliziano, the intimate friend of Lorenzo and the tutor of his sons ; — Francesco Filarete, architect ; — Lorenzo Cigliamocchi, goldsmith (illustrated) ; — Francesco Lancillotto, painter, etc.

Alessandro Vecchietti.

Some medals were modelled at Florence by Niccolo during occasional visits there of the portrayed personages, thus : Johann Greudner, bishop of Brixen (two varieties, one dated 1502) ; — Antonio Pizzamini, a Venetian ; — Prospero Fra Alberto Belli, of Perugia ; — Alfonso d'Este (a youthful portrait, dated 1493) ; — Ercole d'Este, father of Alfonso (probably of the same date) ; — Catarina Riario-Sforza (modelled before 1488, during the life-time of Count Girolamo Riario, her consort ; illustrated) ; — Another, of later date, showing the heroine's portrait in widow's weeds (illustr., Vol. I, p. 385) ; — her son, Ottaviano Riario ; Rℒ. the youthful Count on horseback. The last three medals have been attributed in error to Cennini. It is also interesting to note that the reverses of the two last pieces are reproduced almost exactly on medals of Jean du Mas and Antoine de Gimel, two of the French King Charles VIII.'s counsellors. This leads us to the vexed question of the authorship of the medals of that sovereign and members of his entourage, which had hitherto been thought to be the work of a medallist of Lyons, Nicolas de Florence († 1499), whose only authenticated production is a commemorative medal, of peculiar workmanship and in low relief, of the Visit to Lyons of Charles VIII. and Anne of Brittany. The Portrait-pieces above referred to are of Italian fabric and absolutely in the style of Niccolo Spinelli, and Bode's suggestion that they may have been modelled by our artist during the stay at Florence, after the capture of the city by the French, of Charles VIII. and his suite in 1495 is to my mind the correct solution of the problem. These medals comprise two of Charles VIII. and those of Jean du Mas, seigneur de Lisle ; — Jean Matharon de Salignac ; — Béraud Stuart, seigneur d'Aubigny ; — Gilbert Bourbon, comte de Montpensier ; — and Antoine de Gimel.

To Lorenzo de' Medici's inspiration we owe the medals of some of the famous Florentines ; the poets Dante, Boccaccio and Petrarch ; the latinist Coluccio Salutati ; the warriors Neri Capponi and Niccolo Uzzano ; the secretary of state Marsuppini, and the ecclesiastics Gualberto, and Archbishop B. Antonino. We meet also with medallic portraits of individual members of foreign houses who filled important offices under or were in friendly relation with the Medici ; so the Orsini through Lorenzo's consort, the Bentivoglio, through Ercole Bentivoglio, who was appointed in 1486 commander of the Florentine troops, the Mirandola owing to the friendship of Lorenzo with the scholar Pico, etc.

To Niccolo Fiorentino Prof. Bode ascribes also several medals of Savonarola, hitherto given, on Vasari's evidence, to one of the two sons of Giovanni della Robbia (q. v.).

Prof. Bode, in Florentine Sculptors, p. 176, makes the following reference to Spinelli : " The die-cutter Niccolò Spinelli at the court of Charles the Bold ; the medallist Niccolò Sforzore Spinelli, who was in the service of Charles VIII. of France and lived for a time in Lyons, where he is supposed to have died in 1499 ; and the artist of the same name whose signature is on the medals of Lorenzo de'Medici and of several other Florentine nobles, and who died in 1514, are made out to have been two, if not three, different persons. His immense oeuvre comprising three times the number of that of Sperandio, accounted the most prolific medallist of the Quattrocento, is then distributed over a series of fabulous artists who are dubbed, in accordance with the reverse of the respective medals, the artist of the " Eagle ", or " Hope ", or the " Fortuna ", to whom might be added with quite as much sense " the Graces " or " the Constantia " and so on. All these medals have the same strongly marked, broad traits in the reverses, which the artist kept very simple on character and was fond of borrowing from other designs, especially the antique, because he knew that imagination and drawing were his weak points. But to do complete justice to this artist (who, though unequal and often careless, is worthy as a portrait-modeller to stand beside Antonio Pisano), would necessitate arduous researches in the archives of the period as to the personages he portrayed, his relation to other artists of his day, and the attitude of Florentine art towards the contemporary art of the Netherlands — all questions which have scarcely been touched upon to the present ".

Lorenzo de' Medici.

Niccolo Fiorentino drew mostly from the antique for his reverse types ; Athenion's cameo representing Gigantomachos in quadriga served him for the reverse of his medal of Alfonso d'Este, whilst on the medal of Antonio Geraldini is a reproduction of a reverse type of a sestertius of Balbinus. As a rule the artist's reverse types show a connection with the portraits figured on the obverses ; thus, Nemesis on the medal of Giuliano de' Medici ; Florentia on that of Lorenzo ; Hercules (in the style of Pollaiuolo) on that of the army leader, Ercole Bentivoglio ; Victory on those of Charles VIII., and Catarina Riario-Sforza ; Chastity and Love on that of the youthful Rucellai, etc. Fortune occurs on medals of the period of Savonarola, also on one, dated 1503, of Niccolò Tranqueri, and another, anonymous, showing a bearded man. Spes is found as reverse type on nineteen medals covering a period of thirty years. The three Graces, copied from the well-known cameo, form the reverse type of at least five medals.

Bode remarks : " The single figures recurring frequently without the slightest change on the reverse of his medals are, however, as lacking in imagination as they are careless, even unskilled, in drawing. This applies to the figures of Hope, Love, Fortune, Nemesis, Wisdom, Mercury, as well as to those of the Rulers mounted or on foot, and to the Coats of Arms, Emblems, etc. They all have exactly the same character — wooden or awkwardly moving figures with large extremities, rude features, straggling hair and long ungraceful parallel folds in the fluttering pseudo-classical drapery. Animals are still more superficially characterised and executed, trees or flowers merely indicated. Unless he copies, the artist studiously avoids larger compositions; he cannot even place

(Rx. of medal of Ercole Bentivoglio).

a few figures side by side with any success, as witness the reverses of the medals of Carlo Federighi and Antonio Pizzamani with the three wooden allegorical female figures in a row. And all his features are monotonously alike. The 'Spes', which, though the feeblest, occurs the most frequently, the 'Caritas', the 'Sapientia' (on an admirable unnamed female medal in the Simon Collection, on a Boccaccio medal and on the large Uzzano), and the 'Fides' of the Fra Alberto Belli medal are almost identical; the 'Nemesis' on the reverse of the Giuliano de' Medici medal, and the 'Minerva' on the Fra Benedetto Fiezzi and that of Ercole d'Este (Heiss, The Justice, Peace and Abundance.

(Rx. of medal of Innocent VIII).

Medals of the House of Este, Plate VII.3), and the 'Victoria' on the medals of Catarina Riario and of Charles VIII of France, are similar in pose, drapery, and treatment. Now it is true that of the five signed medals by Niccolo Spinelli three have reverses copied faithfully from antique cameos, the reverse of the fourth is almost entirely covered by an inscription, while the fifth alone bears a design of his own invention, consisting of a 'Florentia' seated under a laurel-tree offering flowers: a figure extraordinarily poor in design and rough in execution, and doubly conspicuous as the reverse of the medal of Lorenzo the Magnificent. In design and treatment this figure is typical of the majority of the medals under discussion, and the same hand is discernible at the first glance. It may also be briefly noted that all the inscriptions bear the same character as regards the form of the lettering and the adaptation to the space.

"Of course, among these hundred and thirty portraits are as many points of divergence to be noted as in the reverses, indeed more, for whereas the artist usually repeats himself in the compositions of the reverses, each portrait offers fresh points of interest, displays anew a masterly insight into character, and an astounding strength of technique in giving each individuality its best plastic expression. Again, certain divergencies are the result of the fact that on occasion the artist did not work from the original sitter, but from some other copy, or even from his own imagination; in the latter case, as is evident from most of his restored medals, his obverses are as rough and sketchy as his reverses".

Prof. Bode points out that the medals, which have been grouped by French authorities under the headings of "Maître de l'Aigle", "à l'Espérance", "à la Fortune", etc. according to the reverse types recurring on them, are really all by the same hand. The portraits show the same peculiar characteristics of Niccolo Spinelli's handiwork; conception and treatment, style and art, differ but very little; even the inscriptions, lettering, arrangement of the legends, all indicate the same master. It is most improbable that there should have been at Florence, at the same time, about half a dozen medallists, all working in the same manner. Much more reasonable is the suggestion that Niccolo Fiorentino, the friend of the Medici, should have been entrusted with the modelling of portraits of the celebrities of the period; as Bode remarks: "The mere fact that the majority of these medals represent the most eminent personages and members of the first families of Florence, or men in close relations with them, irrespective of faction, during a period of nearly forty years, is one proof more that they are the work of one artist, and that one — Niccolò Fiorentino. For, then as now, any one requiring a work of the kind would assuredly address himself to the artist most in vogue. But that there should have been half a dozen equally celebrated medallists working in Florence at the same time is as improbable as that they should have all the same style or that there should be no record of a single one but Niccolò".

"When the French entered Florence he modelled Charles VIII. and the great nobles who accompanied him, among them the banished Lorenzino de' Medici, who had returned with the French army. When Savonarola set up his spiritual government in Florence, Niccolo executed one medal after another of the popular friar, whose most enthusiastic partisans were to be found among the artists; and the majority of the medals produced between 1496 and 1498 are portraits of followers of the great Frate. However, after his excommunication when popular favour turned against him, Niccolò had not the slightest compunction in celebrating one of his judges, the old Vicar-General of the Dominicans, Gioacchino della Torre, in a medal dated 1498, the reverse of which shows the dagger and cap, the insignia of his office as executioner".

BENEDETTO PISTRUCCI.

The subjoined interesting letter is reprinted from "The Evening Mail" (London) newspaper for Wednesday, July 25th 1838 : —

Sir, — I had hoped that the letter which I addressed to you on the 19th of March last, and which was inserted in your paper of the 21st of April, had put a stop to the anonymous attacks directed against Mr. Pistrucci, Her Majesty's chief medallist at the Royal Mint, and that we should hear no more of the pretended rivalry between him and the chief engraver, who, in an unlucky moment for the character of England and her arts, was thrust into that place which had been for several years occupied by Mr. Pistrucci, and in which having found the coins issued from the English Mint the worst productions of modern times, he left them the best, and all but fit to take their places amongst the most beautiful coins of Greece. But, alas! for the cause of truth, honesty, and taste, I find they are still at their old work; and I should really fear, from the activity they show, that some momentary injury might be done to Mr. Pistrucci's character as an artist, if the simplicity of his enemies, which is nearly as prominent as their animosity, did not betray that the whole and sole purport of all this burst of indignation against what they call the worst coronation medal ever executed, is to urge the Master of the Mint to turn Mr. Pistrucci out of his office, to raise the salary of the chief engraver to what it was when that office was held by Mr. Pistrucci, and to appoint another of the family, or one of the dependents of the chief engraver, to Mr. Pistrucci's place. That this is their object is as clear as noonday; but it is not likely that they will succeed. I have already in my former letter said as much as the forms of society will allow to show the honourable principles on which the Master of the Mint gave his preference to Mr. Pistrucci; and I shall only add, that what the two have done since has only tended to convince every impartial man that his appreciation of their respective merits was the right one.

For the uninquiring public, however, it may not be superfluous to add, that the denunciations against Mr. Pistrucci, shameless as they are nameless, have been continued with more or less activity, but always with the same intensity, from the first day in which he had any connexion with the Mint, namely, in 1816, now 22 years ago, when he was called upon to lay aside his own art of a modeller and sculptor of cameos, in order to practise that of engraving in steel, that he might correct the blunders of the engraver at the Mint, a relation of the present engraver. Hinc primæ lacrymæ. They were renewed when he executed his beautiful crown-pieces and sovereigns with the George and dragon, the coining of which required more attention and skill than the clumsy things which preceded and which succeeded them; again when, in 1820, he declined to degrade himself, as an artist, by copying Sir Thomas Lawrence's portrait of His Majesty George IV. for the coronation medal of that period; the same when he gave a like refusal to copy the bust made by Sir Francis Chantrey for a medal, which it was intended that he should execute on the occasion of the royal visit to Ireland, and he was equally determined not to do an act which he deemed dishonourable to himself — namely, that of affixing his own unstained name to the work of another, for the coronation medal of his late Majesty. He is not in the habit of decking himself out in false colours; he acknowledges no one as his master or teacher in his art, and he has recourse to no meretricious contrivances to set off what may be good, or to conceal what is bad. These acts, however, made many of our inferior artists, already jealous of his success, his bitter enemies, the seeds of this feeling having been sown when his model for the Waterloo medal was ordered to be executed, the one by Flaxman, which had been proposed and recommended by the Royal Academy, having been rejected in favour of that designed by Mr. Pistrucci.

This hostility did, however, in part succeed; Mr. Pistrucci did not receive a single commission to execute either a medal or a cameo for nine or ten years; all the patronage of the public went to the "talented Englishmen", and a pretty set of things they have got for their money, not one of them worth more than the metal on which they are impressed. In the mean time Mr. Pistrucci was not idle; having no employment, thanks to English liberality, in either of the arts in which he had shown his eminence, and having in vain offered to give gratuitous instruction in both to young artists properly qualified to receive it, he determined to try whether he could not become a sculptor also in marble. His colossal busts of the Duke of Wellington and of the Prince Pozzo di Borgo, besides several works in this material, placed him at once at the top also of this branch of the art, and, oddly enough, it did not diminish, but rather increased, the jealousy of him amongst a new set of rivals. He invented also various improvements in machinery of different descriptions, and he constructed a coining press (superior to any of those employed at our Mint, much more economical, and capable of being transported on the backs of mules to the mouths of the mines on the Mexican plateau) on a totally new principle, and after the undertaking had been offered to many of our best operating engineers, and declined by them.

At the accession of Her Most Gracious Majesty a brighter dawn opened upon his prospects for employment in one at least of the arts for which he had been induced, 20 years ago, by the most earnest entreaties and flattering promises, to enter the Mint. Since that event Mr. Pistrucci has executed, by a new and most ingenious process of his own invention, which he immediately communicated to the public and showed to professional men, one of the duchy of Lancaster seals, which is equally admirable as a work of art as for the novel, surprising, and expeditious manner in which it was produced, and which has called forth the praise of our principal chymists and manufacturers. All this, it will be said, has nothing at all to do with the coronation medal of Queen Victoria. It is, however, most pertinent to the abuse heaped upon Mr. Pistrucci on the occasion, and every impartial reader of this letter will at once feel that it gives him the key to the animus which has dictated that abuse: for if Mr. Pistrucci had been an ordinary artist, or an Englishman, or an aspirant to the honours of the Royal Academy, or had he copied any one of the thousand and one miscalled portraits of the Queen which meet our faces in the shop windows, no one would have said a word more upon the subject than they did on the coronation medal of William IV., which fell still-born, and dropped at once into oblivion.

Upon this subject I shall not take the trouble to answer the criticisms so eloquently bestowed upon the coronation medal by Mr. Pistrucci as a work of art. Those who find fault with the likeness of the Queen, or the taste, classical purity, and character of the head, have only themselves to pity. It may be the fault of their own malconformation, their own defective organs, or their prejudices may be to blame, or they may have formed their judgment upon wrong principles. But, fortunately for Mr. Pistrucci, and in anticipation of this combination against him, the head had been seen, approved, admired, and sanctioned by those the best capable of judging long before the medal came out, and those are little likely now to be perverted by newspaper squibs or anonymous puffs; and the public, when the first bombardment has subsided, will perceive that these new lights were only flashes in the pan, and the noise but the discharge of waste paper.

As to the reverse, which as a composition is equally perfect with the obverse of the medal, the subject of which was given to the artist, and which had been approved and sanctioned by the Government and by those they had called in to assist them in their judgment, it is clear to all the world that the last finishing touches of the artist are still wanting to bring out the figures as delicately and as highly as those on the reverse of the coronation medal of George IV., which, though warmly animadverted upon at the time, is now adduced as a model of perfection. This has been admitted by Mr. Pistrucci himself to the Master of Mint, and was stated and accounted for by the latter in his place in the House of Commons. But common honesty — to say nothing of a regard for the art, and a desire to know the truth — might have induced those who noticed this defect to inquire into the cause of it. Had they done so, they might have learned that it was mainly owing to the following circumstances: —

1. That it had been generally expected that the coronation would not have taken place before the month of August.

2. That when the day was fixed, and the order given to execute the medal, there was just the period of two months and twenty days in which it was to be done. (N.B. The engraver has taken a whole year to bring out some of the common coins of the realm.)

3. That Mr. Pistrucci has no assistance whatever in his department.

4. That the whole labour of executing the medal was borne by Mr. Pistrucci alone, with the exception of the lettering, and some of the minor accessories, which were executed by Mr. Merlin, a Frenchman, the assistant engraver.

5. That in order to secure expedition, and to prevent accidents in breaking his dies, he took upon himself the whole and sole direction of the annealing and stamping of the dies, the custody of the metal provided for the gold and silver medals, the workmen to whom it was delivered, and in general the responsibility of the work from beginning to end.

6. That, contrary to all former practice, it was found expedient that the coining of the money of the realm should go on in the Mint, concurrently with the striking of the medals, which put Mr. Pistrucci to very great inconvenience, and necessarily occasioned great delays; and some of those prepared for the day of the coronation, inadvertently struck on too hard a metal, were unavoidably imperfect on the edge.

7. That at the moment when these operations were most urgent an accident occurred in Mr. Pistrucci's apartments, by which the Mint narrowly escaped being burnt down, the fire, which had been occasioned by the unwarrantable interference of one of the workmen, being extinguished entirely by Mr. Pistrucci's activity and personal exertions.

8. And finally, that after the head of Her Majesty for the obverse of the medal was quite finished, Mr. Pistrucci was visited for a fortnight or more by a most untoward calamity — namely, the almost total privation of his sight, brought on by over-fatigue, watchfulness, and anxiety; which obliged him to suspend his work for the time, and (whilst the completion of the medal could not be delayed) he was thus unable to bring the minute work on the figures of the reverse to that state of high finish which is distinguishable in all His other works, though even in its present state he would cheerfully accept, now that his sight is recovered, the challenge of any other artist to produce another of equal labour in thrice the time which was allowed to him from the commencement of the work.

I think I have now said enough to set this question at rest; and as I have not dealt in general assumptions, but in facts which cannot be disputed, I am proud to affix my name in reply to all the past, present, and future anonymous scribblers who withhold theirs.

The earliest Coins of Greece Proper. By Percy Gardner. From the Proceedings of the British Academy, Vol. V. 8vo, 40 pp. + 1 Pl. Price Two Shillings and Sixpence net.

Prof. Percy Gardner has published in brochure form his recent contribution to the 'Proceedings of the British Academy' on "The Earliest Coins of Greece Proper".

The subject, which is an important one, offers a large field for discussion; the author has skilfully handled it, and his conclusions are the result of a vast amount of research and great erudition.

The first question as to whether the earliest coins of Greece proper were of electrum is disposed of by the fact that such electrum coins, as have been attributed to Thrace, Aegina, and Euboea, are most probably of Asiatic origin.

Tradition ascribing to Pheidon, king of Argos, the credit of having been the first to strike coins in Aegina is proved to be incorrect. Pheidon regulated the weights and measures of the Peloponnese, and the first coins struck at a considerably later period, as substitutes for the bars of bronze and iron constituting the earlier currency, were issued on the standard of Pheidon. According to Prof. Gardner the proportions of value were probably, iron 1, bronze 5, silver 600, a silver obol of 16 grains being probably equivalent to 20 drachms of bronze or a mina of iron. Interesting notes follow on the currency system proper to Greece.

The cities of Chalcis, Eretria, and Cyme in Euboea issued money in the seventh century on the gold standard of Babylon, a standard which was known to the Greeks, as the Euboic standard. But instead of dividing the Babylonic weight for their stater into thirds, sixths and twelfths, they adopted the Pheidonian system of division into halves and twelfths, drachms and obols. The earliest Euboean type corresponds with those of Athens, and possibly Megara.

Cypselus (B.C. 657-625) was the first to issue coins at Corinth. The Euboic stater was divided into three. Some of the Greek colonies of Chalcidice and South Italy which used a drachm of 43 to 45 grains show the influence of Corinthian commerce on their own trade.

Solon introduced the earliest coinage at Athens, with the types of the owl or the amphora, on the Euboic standard. Peisistratus, who first struck the tetradrachms with the head of Athena, raised this standard to the level called Attic. The adoption of this standard was "the beginning and foundation of Attic commercial supremacy". The wide circulation of the Athenian tetradrachms is attested by the abundance of the barbarous imitations. Corinth, Eretria, and other cities were obliged to conform to the weight of the Athenian coin. "None of the triumphs of the Athenian tetradrachms was greater than that which they won when the powerful tyrants of Sicily, Gelon and Hieron and Theron accepted their lead and initiated the splendid coinage of Sicily".

An interesting chapter deals with the reforms of Solon, the alteration of measures, and cutting down of debts, and shows that the texts of Androtion and Aristotle on this question are easily reconcilable.

Prof. Gardner's monograph is a masterly contribution to our knowledge of the early conditions of coinage in Greece, and will be read and studied by a wide circle of archaeologists.

A Handbook of British and Foreign Orders, War Medals, and Decorations awarded to the Army and Navy, chiefly described from those in the Collection of A. A. Payne (Sheffield, Northend).

For those who have eyes to see, the medals of the British Navy and Army have a place and a meaning in the history of the last hundred and twenty years. But campaigns and victories are apt to be forgotten in a generation which has never seen war within its gates; and few persons to-day care to know by the medals, ribbons, and clasps on a veteran's breast what his service has been. Georgian England was leisurely indeed in its appreciation of merit; for it was not till 1847, when the granddaughter of George III. had reigned for ten years, that medals (the Military General Service Medal, 1793-1814, and the Naval General Service Medal, 1793-1840) were struck for distribution to officers and men who had taken part in the Napoleonic wars by land and sea. An India Medal (1799-1826) of the same type followed in 1851. In the case of the Navy, the clasps denoted each of the several engagements (about 200) deemed worthy of commemoration, of which more than 50 were boat actions. "Boat Service" tells in two words the tale of many a daring and successful enterprise against foes and forts believed to be unconquerable. Five clasps seem to have been the largest number borne on any of the naval medals issued; but two soldier-survivors of the Peninsular War actually established their claim to fifteen clasps, having fought in almost every engagement of note from "Roleia" (a century-old misspelling, which a recent Army Order has at last corrected to Roliça) to Toulouse.

It was a twelve-clasped Peninsular medal which suggested the present book; and Mr. Payne has undoubtedly found it a labour of love. A study of its pages reveals much more than the mere instinct of the collector; and we can well understand how catalogue-notes grew, with the development of interest in such a subject, into a bulky volume. Trouble has been taken, by ample cross-references and otherwise, to make a useful work; and though the arrangement is not perfect, and there are many minor inaccuracies (e. g., in regard to Latin and German inscriptions), the value of the whole is as indisputable as its interest.

After giving lists of officers (about 500) whose decorations are in his collection, the author proceeds to describe in detail the insignia of the British orders and decorations and the war medals and clasps; and at a later stage he gives a sufficient account of the principal foreign orders and decorations bestowed on British officers. The enumeration of the medal-clasps, whether granted for the several engagements of a single campaign, or for successive expeditions in a particular sphere (as in the case of the Africa General Service Medal and the India Medals), is a most careful piece of work, valuable to any student of British military operations. The medals given by the East India Company, which represent a considerable and important series of operations in the first half of the nineteenth century, have their proper place in the present record.

Another interesting feature is the tabulation of groups of medals which show the services of individuals in different fields. From such a list (for the names are set out in the order of regiments) it is possible to see at a glance where each corps has been chiefly engaged, and in the case of the Indian Army to separate the faithful and the mutineers of 1857.

The work is concluded with biographical notes of the officers whose medals are in the author's possession. His collection, containing about 2,500 war medals, ought eventually to be acquired for the Museum of the Royal United Service Institution; and his efforts in forming and describing it deserve the praise of every right-minded Englishman.

We have but one adverse criticism to make upon his book—the lack of proper illustrations. Mere photographs of be-medalled warriors, however interesting from a personal point of view, are of no practical assistance. In such a work coloured illustrations, numerous and accurate, are indispensable; for by their means decorations, medals, and ribbons can be more readily distinguished, and remembered far more effectually, than by many pages of careful description. Videri quam legi.

Sir: —

In China last month I came across the coin figured overleaf. I was fortunate enough to procure two specimens, one having been sent to my friend Mr. Howland Wood, of Brookline, Mass., U.S.A., the other remaining in my possession.

This is the first time that I have seen a coin of this description. Neither do I remember it having been illustrated in any work dealing with Far Eastern numismatics. Mr. Valentine's recent treatise on the "Muhammadan Coins", I believe, makes no mention of a similar coin.

The piece in question appears to have been in circulation for some length of time, the inscription on one of the sides being so worn down as to be almost illegible. The alloy of the metal is more bronze than brass, but not of such a red copper as is found in most issues for series of the Extreme Orient; this together with the locality where it was picked up, inclines me to believe that it may possibly belong to some country on the borders of the Chinese Empire.

As I am unable to read the inscription, which may be Arabic, I am at a loss to correctly place it. Perhaps some kind reader of the "Numismatic Circular" is in a position and would be willing to help me out of this difficulty?

OBITUARY

WARWICK WILLIAM WROTH.

By the sudden death on 26th September last of Warwick William Wroth, Assistant Keeper of the Department of Coins in the British Museum, at the comparatively early age of 53, the study of numismatics loses one of its most distinguished representatives in this country.

Mr. Wroth joined the staff of the British Museum in 1878, and speedily made a reputation in archæological circles by his contributions to periodicals, such as the Journal of Hellenic Studies and The Numismatic Chronicle, on Greek numismatics and allied archæological subjects. To the great series of Catalogues of Greek coins issued by his Department he contributed from 1886 to 1903 six volumes, chiefly concerned with Asia Minor; latterly he had turned to a different period, and the three volumes from his hand representing the Byzantine Emperors and the Vandals, Ostrogoths, and Lombards (the last reviewed in the October Numismatic Circular) have brought comparative order into a peculiarly difficult area of the field of numismatics.

But Mr. Warwick Wroth was not merely a numismatist; his knowledge of English literature, particularly of his favourite eighteenth century, and of London antiquities, was wide and sympathetic, and his well-known work (in collaboration with his brother Mr. A. E. Wroth) on 'London Pleasure Gardens of the Eighteenth Century', with its supplement on Cremorne, showed that he possessed the art of writing pleasantly on such subjects, without any diminution of accuracy and scholarship.

MAX ROSENHEIM

A remarkable personality has passed from among us by the death of Mr. Max Rosenheim. To those who knew him, this will not sound exaggerated, but rather a statement of the obvious. Of a surety it would be hardly possible to find in the ranks of the cognoscenti of our day a single man who combined in himself so many of the qualities that make him of value to his contemporaries. Precise knowledge, energy, untiring industry, eminent good-fellowship, wide generosity, all these were Rosenheim's, and they made him the best and most genial of companions in a sympathetic gathering. In addition, he was the soul of hospitality and an ideal host, and never showed to greater advantage than at his own table and in the inevitable discussion over the many treasures he had amassed in his modest Hampstead dwelling. That he should have enjoyed these qualities in so distinguished a degree is the more notable, inasmuch as the taste for collecting works of art took active shape with him only in his mature years, when the receptivity and enthusiasm of youth were well passed. But in all his pursuits he combined both of these youthful characteristics with the caution and breadth of view that evidenced his maturity. The results were no less remarkable than the character that led to them; his collections in the limited field which he had selected were perhaps better known than the collector himself, and no exhibition of cinquecento medals, of German art, of ornamental engravings, or of ex-libris, could be complete without a substantial contribution from Max Rosenheim. His knowledge of these arts was constantly drawn upon by the organizers of such exhibitions, especially at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, where he was a valued member of the general committee. At the Society of Antiquaries also his presence was constantly felt, and as a member of the executive committee he was often able to deliver a prompt and authoritative opinion on the relics shown. These pursuits gave him the keenest pleasure, debarred as he was from active exercise owing to the loss of a leg in a lift accident about twelve years ago, and his outdoor life of late years has practically been spent in his carriage. This carriage, attended by his sturdy and devoted manservant and his favourite dog, was familiar to all habitués of the British Museum, where he spent the main portion of some years in the arrangement of the collection of Continental ex-libris formed by his old friend, Sir Wollaston Franks. But the chief debt that England owes to Rosenheim lies in the share that he had in the formation of the society now so well known as the National Art-Collections Fund. The first tentative effort, under the title of "The Friends of the British Museum", was designed to provide the additional funds for purchases which had ceased at the death of Sir A. Wollaston Franks in 1897. Rosenheim and Sir Thomas Gibson-Carmichael, G.C.I.E., the present Governor of Madras, were the principal contributors, but even in its modest beginnings the scheme was intended ultimately to take a wider scope. After some years of useful work it widened, and the "Friends of the British Museum" sank both themselves and their contributions in the larger fund, with the most fruitful results. Another plan devised by Rosenheim for providing funds for the purchase of works of art was of considerable ingenuity, though condemned as impracticable by the powers at the Treasury. This was to raise money by the creation of a special receipt stamp to be used in the sale of works of art, one colour for the productions of living artists, another for ancient productions, while the value of the stamps should be a percentage of the sum paid for the object sold, say one per cent, for modern works and twice as much for ancient. Rosenheim was not alone in thinking that the sale of these stamps, without which, of course, no receipt would be valid, would raise a considerable sum to be applied to the purchase of objects for our museums and galleries. A further requirement was that the sum thus produced by the sale of modern paintings should be applied to the purchase of the works of living artists, while the produce of the "Old Masters" should be used for ancient works of art. The merits of such a scheme are obvious — great benefit to the nation, while those who paid the tax would scarcely be conscious of its existence. It may well be that we shall yet see it in operation.

Meanwhile the world is poorer by the loss of such a man as Max Rosenheim, while the smaller world of his intimate friends will long feel the gap his death has made in their circle.

FINDS

An important find of coins and ornaments, which in the opinion of the Director of the Copenhagen Museum date from the end of the tenth century and beginning of the eleventh, has been made at the village of Terslev in South Seeland. About 500 coins (of which the greater part bear Arabic inscriptions, while a few are Anglo-Saxon) were discovered, as well as some bars of silver, a

DISCOVERIES OF ANCIENT COINS.

A find of gold coins was made by two workmen on Monday, Sept. 4st at the Roman excavations at Corstopitum, the old Roman city near Corbridge, Northumberland.

This season the excavations have been conducted in a new field to the west of the excavations made in former years. The coins were in a small bronze jar, and as Mr. Forster, the director of the works, was not present at the time, the foreman took charge of the coins. When an examination was made it was found that there were 159 gold and two bronze coins in a very good state of preservation. They ranged from the period of Nero to that of Marcus Aurelius. The largest number were of the Emperor Trajan, 51 in number.

The ancient coins found at Blackhills, Corsock, Kirkcudbrightshire, some time ago have been submitted to an expert on behalf of the Crown. A number have been retained for the National Museum of Antiquities, and the Crown propose to reward the finders for those kept, handing them back the remainder.

All the coins are silver pennies, with the exception of a silver halfpenny and a silver farthing. The pennies include Scottish (long cross) coins of the reigns of Alexander III., John Baliol, and Robert the Bruce. The Irish pennies belong to the reigns of Edward I. and II., and had been minted at Dublin and Waterford. English pennies of the same reigns were minted in London, Durham, Canterbury, Berwick, Bristol, York, and elsewhere. There are also a number of foreign "sterlings". The halfpenny is of the reign of Edward I. and was minted at Berwick, while the farthing, minted in London, is supposed to belong to the same reign or that of Edward II.

ROMAN GOLD TREASURE AT CORBRIDGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

Sir,—Three years ago, in September, 1908, we found a hoard of 48 Roman gold coins wrapped up in a piece of lead foil and (as could hardly be doubted) intentionally concealed in a building at a date not far from the end of the Roman occupation—somewhere about A.D. 385-390. This morning we have made an even more striking and more extensive find. This is a packet of no less than 159 gold coins, ranging from Nero (represented by ten coins) to Marcus Aurelius (four coins), and contained in a small brass receptacle, which was lying in the soil near the surface and seemed rather to have been dropped or lost by some one in a hurry than intentionally buried as a hoard. The date of the loss is somewhere near A.D. 161. Then, as we know, there had been unrest in Northern Britain for some years, and it is quite possible that Corstopitum may then have been pillaged or that some less misfortune may have befallen it. In any case, the packet constitutes the largest find of Roman gold coins yet recorded from Northern Britain and probably the largest found anywhere in Britain, save the great Cleeve Prior hoard, found (but never properly recorded) nearly 100 years ago. A curious feature was the presence of two worn copper coins—perhaps of Hadrian and Trajan—which seem to have formed a cover or top to the rouleaux of gold. A detailed catalogue is being prepared by Mr. H. H. E. Craster, of All Souls, who has catalogued all our numerous coin finds for us with unfailing energy and skill and has thereby (as numismatists know) added greatly to the value of our annual reports.

In other respects the history of the Corbridge excavations this year has been uneventful. Could we have exchanged a few sensations with the outer world both sides might have been gainers. However, such dull periods are inevitable in any undertaking which embraces the complete excavation of an extensive site, and one find may perhaps merit a word at the conclusion of this letter. This is the tombstone of a soldier, by birth a Palmyrene—a recruit, therefore, from the furthest end of the Roman Empire, by name (the first two letters are lost) " . . rathes," aged 68. Strangely enough, another Palmyrene at the Roman fort of South Shields married a British wife and buried her there with a gravestone of almost Oriental luxury. His name was Barates. It is hard to doubt that the two men are the same—that is, that on our slab we must supply "Ba" before "rathes". The man retired from service and at 68 died in Corstopitum. But his heirs or his burial club gave him a plainer monument than that which he had set up for his wife.

We are yours faithfully

COINS and MEDALS for SALE

Special attention is directed to the fact that every coin or medal catalogued in the following lists is guaranteed to be absolutely genuine (except when expressly stated in the description to be otherwise) and if not approved of can be returned, when the full amount paid will be refunded.

Collectors will also kindly note that every care is taken when compiling the catalogues not to overrate the condition of the pieces but to faithfully represent them according to their merits.

All orders should be sent to Spink & Son Ltd., 17 and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.

⁂ The Holland Regiment or Buffs (as the surviving representative corps was called) returned to England in May 1665, and shortly afterwards took rank as the third regiment of the British Line. It was in Portugal in 1808-9 and joined Sir Arthur Wellesley's army, signalised itself at the passage of the Douro, fought at Talavera, Albuhera, and in the subsequent campaigns in Spain and the South of France down to the peace of 1814. It was then shipped from Bordeaux to America, and served on the frontier of Canada during the American War.

 Raised by one of James II's courtiers in 1685. The first battalion went to Hanover in 1805; to Copenhagen in 1807; to Nova Scotia in 1808; to the West Indies in 1809, where it took part in the capture of Martinique; afterwards it returned to North America, and was present in nearly all the engagements on the Canadian frontier during the Niver can war of 1812-1814. During the winter of 1813-14 six companies of the 2nd battalion performed a memorable march, in snow shoes, through the backwoods, from New Brunswick to Quebec. The Regiment served in the Ionian Islands from 1819-1825.

 The Republicans of France, after subduing the Royalists in La Vendée turned their attention in 1796 to the possible invasion of England. This however, upon mature deliberation, was found to require more capital than France had at her disposal, and an expedition was planned on a smaller scale to invade Ireland. In the summer of that year several members of the Executive Committee of the Society of United Irishmen held a conference in Paris, which resulted in the French Government sending a fleet of 44 sail, including 17-line-of-battle ships, with a considerable army on board, to the coast of Ireland. This ill-fated fleet met with a succession of disasters from first to last. When off the coast of Ireland a dense fog set in and when that cleared away a gale of wind commenced, which scattered the ships, several being wrecked, and others driven out to sea. A few ships entered Bantry Bay, but these were obliged to return, making no attempt to land. The garrison of Bantry had made every preparation in their power to defend their post against the French, and although they were not called upon to act on this occasion, the Friendly Association of Ireland had a medal struck for distribution amongst the garrison as a reward for their loyalty and energy. The Officers of the Galway Militia, who formed part of the garrison, received the medal in silver. — Vide Tancred.

 When the rupture took place with France in 1756, England formed alliances with several chiefs of the American Indians, who were presented with these medals, which they wore with great ostentation.

With the Indians the feathers of the swan and the wild-goose, and the wings of those birds, are emblems of peace, and each person at a negotiation takes in turn three deliberate whiffs of a pipe adorned with such feathers or wings before the business is commenced. The Sun, its appearance and its course, are very frequent subjects of solemn reference and appeal in their discussions.

TREASURE TROVE.

The Coroner for the district has ordered an inquest regarding the finding some few days ago of several hundreds of coins bearing the effigy of Richard II. at Palmer's Green. The coins, which were unearthed by some builders' workmen, were in a good state of preservation.

NEW SILVER COINAGE FOR COLOMBIA.

An American Consular report states that an English firm in Bogota has entered into a contract with the Republic of Colombia, on behalf of a British house, for the making of silver coins of a value of 10 and 20 pesos each (10 and 20 Dollars American gold). The total output of the new coins is not to exceed $ 250,000 American gold in value. The contract specifies that the coins are to be 90 per cent. pure silver and 10 per cent alloy. The Colombian Government agrees to pay to the contractors £20,000 at the signing of the contract, £5,000 two months later, £5,000 three months later, the remaining £20,000 to be paid in quantities of not less than £4,000 in each instalment within the year after the contract is signed.

A RARE COIN.

The Norwich Castle Museum has obtained a fine example of a silver penny through Mr. C. Dack, of Peterborough. The coin was issued at Norwich for King John between 1205 and 1216. The coin is about the size of a sixpence. Mr. H. A. Grueber, Keeper of the Coins and Medals in the British Museum, says the coin was struck by King John in his father's name, and that it is a rare specimen. M. J. C. Tingey, the Hon. City Archivist, records that in all probability the Norwich Mint was suspended in 1232.

JUST ISSUED.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. Parkes Weber, M. A., M. D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual — his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action, — as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described. Price Five Shillings Net.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE 1911 SHAKSPERE MEDAL.

This is an important contribution to the medallic portraiture of Shakspere, and is struck to give perpetuity to a very fine contemporary portrait of the Poet.

The original, a painting in oil, traditionally known as " The Shakspere portrait ", belonged for many generations to an old Lancashire family; on this becoming extinct a few years ago, the portrait passed into the collection of Mr W. Sharp Ogden, who has caused this medal to be prepared.

The obverse is an accurate rendering of the delightfully characteristic portrait, the reverse has also Shakspere's head in profile, laureated by the Muse of Poesy. This head is from the effigy in Stratford-on-Avon Church.

It is a charming example of Mr Frank Bowcher's work.

Messrs Spink & Son Ltd. supply the medal as follows:

BY THE REV. A. W. HANDS

8vo. — 170 pp. — Illustrated. Price : 5/- nett.

" It must not be thought that " Common Greek Coins " is merely a catalogue of ancient Greek money, for it is far more than this. The describing of the coins is utilised to give a cleverly condensed, but most interesting, account of Greek history and mythology, commerce and progress in civilisation. The colonies and conquests of the Hellenes, their foolish feuds and transient friendships all come under survey and comment, and the usually erudite style of Greek numismatists is transformed into a brilliant and most readable essay upon the ancient Greek world. This first volume is provided with a useful index and catalogues of the monograms, initials, symbols, and various mint marks are duly set forth to the various chapters, assisted by numerous engravings of all the more important types."

GREEK COINS.

MESSANA.

At the end of the 'Archaic Period' of the coinage in the year 480 B.C. Anaxilaus, tyrant of Zancle, sent to the Carthaginians for aid against Theron, who was advancing against Terillus of Himera, the father of the wife of Anaxilas. His reign, however, lasted only four years longer. From the death of Anaxilas in 476 B.C. Rhegium and Messana were under the rule of Micythus as guardian of his sons. Hieron of Syracuse invited these young men to his court, and advised them to demand the resignation of their guardian. In 467 B.C. Micythus voluntarily retired to Tegea in the Peloponnesus, and lived there for the rest of his life. One of these sons of Anaxilas was named Cleophron or Leophron, and he it was who ruled in Messana, which was under the rule of these sons of Anaxilas until 466 B.C., when so many of the Sicilian cities cast off the yoke of the tyrants, and instituted a more democratic government.

In Grote's History of Greece (Part. II, chap. LVII) we read: "After a period of severe commotion, an accommodation was concluded, whereby the adherents of the expelled dynasty were planted partly in the territory of Messene, partly in the reestablished city of Camarina in the eastern portion of the southern coast, bordering on Syracuse".

The constant changes of residence begun by the despots involved such a mixture of races and of religious institutions that a feeling of instability arose in the Greek cities, such as to make us wonder at the success of the popular government in restoring peace and prosperity.

THE MULE CAR TYPE. 480-466 B.C.

Sicily was especially famed for its mule-cars. Pindar refers to them in his ὑπορχήματα "Σικελίας δ' ὄχημα ἁβροβάλεον μαστεύει" (The Sicilian curiously wrought mule-car is sought). Pindar says Hiero had given the mules, with which he had won the race, to his charioteer, one Straton, and he begs Hieron to give Straton the car also; comparing the charioteer to a Scythian with horses only, and no chariot in which to live. The Hyporcheme was a merry mimetic dance, originally performed in honour of Apollo. The car was generally called ἁπήνη, and this word was applied to the car to which only two mules were attached.

Pindar's word ὀχήμα is from a verb to carry, to bear, and so it is similar to the Latin vehiculum from "vehi". The word was used to distinguish the car from the war chariot ἅρμα. As all the great games were religious festivities this type may be regarded as having a religious significance, and thus both the hare and the mule-car were in harmony with the custom of placing religious types on the coins.

THE HARE.

Aristotle, quoted by J. Pollux, says that Anaxilas introduced hares into Sicily, and the type was first issued in Rhegium, and then afterwards into Messana. Dr Head in his Hist. Num., p. 93, says: "Such a motive, is however, quite insufficient to account either for the adoption, or for the long continuance (at Messene) of the hare as a coin type. Greek coin-types, at this early period, were always chosen, or rather sprang naturally, from the popular or state religion. The hare is here the emblem of the Messenian god Pan, as is proved beyond all doubt by the rare tetradrachm of Messene on which Pan is seen caressing one of these animals. A local tradition as to the introduction of hares into Sicily by the tyrant of Rhegium may very likely have been current in Aristotle's time. If so it was true only of the coins, which would naturally be called "hares" (confer the colts of Corinth &c.).

THREE COINS WHICH ILLUSTRATE THE HISTORY OF THIS PERIOD.

When the sons of Anaxilas were deposed in Messana the citizens appear to have sought the aid and alliance of the Locrians in Magna Graecia, as being enemies of Rhegium and its rulers. This friendship of the two cities Messana and Locri lasted for many years, as we may see from the account given by Thucydides (V, 5) of a body of Locrians who had been in Messana.

The earliest evidence of this alliance is a coin found in a hoard buried near Messana bearing on Obv. a hare running to right, above its hind quarters ΛO, beneath ΜΕΣΣΑΝΙΟΝ. Reverse, Biga of mules walking to right, male charioteer holding reins and goad; in the exergue a laurel-leaf and berry. It is figured on Plate VIII, fig. 4, Num. Chron., 1896. The A is characteristic of the period immediately succeeding the deposition of the Tyrants. The form N instead of Ν is a later form and Sir A. J. Evans considers the coin was issued not many years anterior to 450 B.C.

The coin is also interesting as being the earliest known coin of the city of Locri, which appears not to have instituted a mint until nearly a hundred years after this date.

Adolf Holm (Vol. III, p. 590, Geschichte Siciliens) notices that the Locrians represented the Dorian interests, and they were generally allied to Syracuse. In Messana were two parties, the Ionian allied to Rhegium, and the Dorian to Syracuse and Locri.

The coin illustrated in the Num. Chronicle was formerly in the Boyle Collection. Dr Ettore Gabrici mentions another examples in the collection of Dr J. P. Six and Herr A. Löbbecke.

Perhaps the most important of these three historical coins is the unique tetradrachm in the Hirsch Collection at Brussels bearing a figure of Poseidon on the Obverse, and a dolphin with a scallop shell beneath, on the Reverse, with the inscription ΔΑΝΚΛΑΙΟΝ.

It is illustrated on plate IV, fig. 8 of Mr G. F. Hill's "Coins of ancient Sicily", and also on Plate V, fig. 12 of Mr. G. Macdonald's "Coin types", also on plate VIII, fig. 7 of the Num. Chron., 1896, where it is admirably described by Sir A. J. Evans in pp. 109 seq.

The coin is a witness to the rise into power of a party of the old Zanclaeans, which no historians have mentioned.

The figure of Poseidon as the earth shaker who had rent asunder the land and made the straits on which the city was founded is most appropriate to the coinage of Messana. Very similar figures may be seen on the coins of Poseidonia.

There is a general resemblance in the style of the figure with that on the coins of Caulonia issued about 450 B.C., but more striking is the resemblance of the altar on this coin of Messana with that on a coin of Caulonia, illustrated on Plate VIII, fig. 8 of Num. Chron., 1896. From the presence on that coin of a bird fluttering its wings it is thought the date must be about 430 B.C., at which time such birds are found on the coins of Thurium.

The form of the letter D on the coin of Messana might, if taken by itself, imply a much earlier date, but this form of letter is known to have been used in the field of a coin of this city about this time or only a little earlier (Num. Chron., 1894, p. 215).

Moreover the ancient form of the letter may have been purposely used by the men who were trying to revive the ancient name of their city.

The history of Messana is a blank so far as ancient histories are concerned, at any rate between the years 461 and 427 B.C. when the first Athenian expedition set forth, but this ancient coin is a witness to an event unrecorded by any writers. Sir A. J. Evans notices a passage in Strabo which confirms the fact, illustrated by the coin, of a revival of the name of the Zanclaeans. It occurs in Lib. VI, 2, 3 where we read Catana is a foundation of the Naxeans, Tauromenium of the Zancleans in Hybla. Diodorus Sic (XVI, 7) refers to this refoundation of Tauromenium in the middle of the fourth century.

There is a third coin which illustrates the connection of the citizens of Messana with the cities of Magna Graecia. It is a coin of Croton illustrated on Plate IV, fig. 9 of G. F. Hill's "Coins of ancient Sicily"; No. 4). B. M. Catalogue.

On the Obverse is the normal type of Croton, the Apolline tripod and ΩΡΟ on the right side and a drinking cup on the left; on the Reverse is a similar type with ΔΑ on the left and an incuse altar on the right. The Zanclean party we see sought help from Croton just as the older Messenian faction had sought aid from Locri.

THE SYMBOL OF THE TWO DOLPHINS.

The symbol of two dolphins meeting is found not only on coins of Messana but also on those of Syracuse.

It has been interpreted as signifying the meeting in friendly alliance of the two cities, and Sir A. J. Evans has considered the alliance made in 425 B.C. in face of the danger from Athens as the particular event signified.

The style of some of the coins bearing this symbol is evidently older than that date and we must therefore either regard the dolphins as signifying an earlier alliance or try to find some other meaning for the symbol.

PERIOD OF TRANSITION 476-450 B.C.

On the death of Anaxilas no change was made in the types of the coinage — the hare running on the Obverse, and the mule car on the Reverse continued in use throughout this period. But the letter S in the inscription was changed from S or Ƨ to Σ.

TETRADRACHMS.

I. Obv. ΜΕΣΣΑΝΙΟΝ. A hare running to right; beneath, a spray of olive to right: border of dots.

Rev. Biga of mules to right, driven by seated male charioteer who holds reins in both hands; the mules are walking; above, Nike to right crowning mules; in the exergue, an olive-leaf to right: border of dots.

The olive-leaf is probably not a symbol of a magistrate, but of the crown of olives won by the victor.

II. Obv. Similar but above, bucranium.

Rev. Similar but the mules standing. The bucranium looks like a magistrate's symbol and therefore the coin dates from after 461 B.C.

AFTER 461 B.C.

III. Obv. Similar type and legend, but beneath the hare a dolphin to right: border of dots.

Rev. Biga of mules to right driven by female charioteer, perhaps the nymph of the city, Messana, standing erect in chariot with her chlamys flying, she holds reins in both hands and the goad; the mules are walking; above, Nike to right, crowning them; in the exergue, a fish to right: border of dots.

IV. Obv. Similar.

Rev. Similar, but in exergue, two dolphins meeting. No 706, Plate VIII Nervegna Sale.

V. Obv. Similar.

Rev. Similar, but Nike stands on the reins to right: in exergue a spray of olive with fruits.

VI. Obv. Similar.

Rev. Similar, but no figure of Nike; in exergue two dolphins meeting.

VII. Obv. Similar, but beneath the hare, an ear of barley with leaves to left: border of dots.

Rev. Same symbols as No VI.

VIII. Obv. Similar, but beneath the hare, a fly to right: border of dots.

Rev. Similar.

IX. Obv. Similar: but beneath type, a locust to right, feeding on bunch of grapes with leaf: border of dots.

Rev. Similar, but in exergue, two dolphins meeting: border of dots.

X. Obv. Similar, but beneath, an ear of barley with leaves: above, an eagle flying to left.

Rev. No inscription. Similar type.

XI. Obv. A nude bearded god standing to right brandishing thunderbolt in right hand, and stretching left hand over altar; chlamys over shoulders.

DRACHMÆ.

XII. Obv. ΙΟΙΝ. A hare running to right, ΜΕΣΣΑ: the whole within olive-wreath.

Rev. Similar to No 1. Exergue, olive-leaf to right with fruit: border of dots.

Weight of specimen in B. Mus. 61.3 grains. Normal weight: 67.28 grains.

OBOLS.

XIII. Obv. A dolphin to right, within olive-wreath.
Rev. A hare running to right, beneath, ΜΕΣ.
XIV. Obv. A hare running to right: border of dots.
Rev. ΜΕΣ, plain border.

SPINK & SON, LIMITED (Brit.). Diamond and Pearl Merchants, Goldsmiths and Silversmiths, Jewellers, Coin-dealers and Antiquaries, Manufacturers of Medals, Die-sinkers, Designers, etc., formerly at 1 and 2 Gracechurch Street, London, E.C., and later 30, Cornhill, E.C., since 1894 also at 17 and 18 Piccadilly, W., 6, King Street S.W. Established at Gracechurch Street by Marshall Spink, in 1772. The firm affords an instance of direct descent from father to son (four generations). Partnership succession: (1) Marshall Spink (founder), (2) Daniel Edgar Spink (Son): (3) John Spink (grandson, 1904). Present Partners: John M. Spink, Samuel M. Spink, Charles F. Spink. Two sons in business: Edwin M. Spink, and John J. H. Spink. The earliest mention of the family occurs in the registers of Staithes, near Whitby, Yorkshire.

The firm's works are equipped with the latest power and reducing machinery for the perfect manufacture of every kind of die-sinking, medal, badge and ticket-work.

The earliest medals issued by Messrs Spink include: Pattern coins of Queen Victoria 1887, consisting of Crown and Sixpence, in various metals; — Postal Jubilee Medal, 1890; — Marriage of the Duke of York and the Princess Victoria Maud (May) of Teck, 1893; — Queen Victoria Diamond Jubilee Medals, 1897 (varied types), etc.

The firm, anxious to produce only what should be truly artistic, employed talented artists and designers (in particular, Mr. Frank Bowcher, q.v.), with the result that their Diamond Jubilee Medals held the field for artistic worth and true portraiture against all comers. Continuing in this line, they have issued since also of the Houses of the Imperial Parliament. Above all is the motto, "OPPRESSORVM CONSERVATOR", and in the foreground below is the Union Shield.

Entente cordiale Medal.

Rev. The Commander-in-Chief, Earl Roberts, holding his bâton and facing the spectator. Above him are figures of Fame and Victory: the latter in the act of placing a wreath upon his head. In the background is seen a column composed of Regulars and Colonial Troops, Volunteers etc., defiling past a mountainous range. The mottoes "VIRTVTE et DVCTV" behind the equestrian figure, and "PAX QVÆRITVR BELLO" in the exergue are expressive—the former of the valour of the troops under the skilful generalship of Lord Roberts, and the latter of the Nation's object for the War.

Only 12 examples of this Medal were struck in Gold; 50 in Silver; and 150 in Bronze.

Among the latest productions of Messr. Spink & Son L[d] are: Medals commemorating the Visit to London of King Manuel of

SOME IMITATION COINS ISSUED BY THE MINOR ITALIAN MINTS

By Philip Whiteway.

Part V.

PASSERANO AND COCONATO.

Territories in Piedmont, Province of Alessandria, and fiefs of the ancient (founded about 1182) Radicati family. There were several counts of this house reigning at the same time — as each brother enjoyed a share in the lordship — who struck coins in the collective name of the family.

Some of the Radicati issued money in their own names.

In 1598 the mint privilege was renounced by the joint proprietors of the state, in return for an annual subsidy of 300 gold scudi from the Duke of Savoy.

ANONYMOUS RADICATI, 1581-98.

1. Billon. Imitation of a quart of Geneva. Obv. N.E.M.N.D. C.RA(dicati).1586. Geneva arms.

Rev. R.P.C.ST...C. Cross similar to that on the sols of Geneva.

2. Imitation of the silver soldi of Savoy, but much baser than its original. Obv. COM.RADICATI.COCO(nato). Arms surmounted by a count's coronet.

Rev. IN.DEO.VIRTUTEM.1581. Cross of Savoy. Copy of the soldi of Dukes Emanuel Filibert (1577) and Charles Emanuel (1581).

3 and 4 are imitations of the silver quarto di soldo of Savoy.

3. Obv. COM.RADICATE.COCO. Field, COCO with star above and below.

Rev. IN.DEO.VIRTUS.1581.R(oglia-name of mint engraver).

4. Obv. COMES.RADICATE. Field, COCO with star above and below.

Rev. As 3.

5 and 6 are silver $\frac{1}{2}$ soldi, imitated from French coins.

5. Obv. COM.RADICATE.COCO. Field, H (Henry III) crowned.

Rev. IN.DEO.VIRTUS.1581.R. Cross.

6. Imitation of French liard. Obv. COM.RADICATE.COCO. Field. A large crowned L.

Rev. COM.IN.DEO.VIRTUTEM. Cross.

7. Imitation of German thaler (silver). Scudo. Obv. COMITES. RADICATE.COCONATI. Crowned eagle.

Rev. NISI.DOMINUS.CUSTODIERIT.1582. An ornate cross with four armorial shields (1 and 4 an eagle, 2 and 3 a thorn tree) surmounted by count's coronets.

NUMISMATIC REFERENCES IN SHAKESPEARE.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

The Comedy of Errors was one of the very earliest productions of Shakespeare. Both the internal evidence and the information we have in regard to its first performance prove this. Prof. Dowden believes it to have been written in the year 1591 and classifies it as the 4th play worked on by Shakespeare and as his second comedy, the first comedy, according to this authority, being 'Love's Labour's Lost', which he believes was written the previous year. The two other plays were only partially written by Shakespeare. The present play was first staged in 1594.

For convenience of reference, we shall refer to this work by the symbols, — C.E.

lent to 20 stuivers. Hazlitt says, " apparently originating in the Gildepenningen or money of the trading corporations or 'guilds'.... The word is derived from 'geld' money and the form 'gulden' and 'guilder' are alike incorrect. The value of the Gulden has fluctuated. The modern Dutch piece is = 1 s. 8 d. English ", in reality 1 s. 7 d. 3 f.

" Unless a thousand MARKS be levied,
To quit the penalty and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred MARKS ".

MARK. — At the period we are dealing with and for long before, the Mark, or Marc, was money of account in many of the states of Europe. It probably originated in Germany, travelling thence to Italy and, from there, to France. As a coin it was struck by Francesco Gonzaga III, Duke of Mantua, 1540-50, under the name of " Marcello " and it also existed in Scandinavia, at this time. History tells us that King Richard I of England was ransomed for 10,000 marks. From the reference in Shakespeare we may suppose that "a thousand marks" was a fair computation of a merchant's goods.

SCENE II. — " Oh, — SIXPENCE, that I had o'Wednesday last
To pay the saddler for my mistress's crupper ".

SIXPENCE. — Here we learn that this was the sum to pay for a repair of that sort. This coin was first issued in the reign of Edward VI.

" Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me ?"

ACT II.

SCENE I. — " He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold ".
" Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain ?"

MARK. — See above, Act I, Sc. 1. Well would Antipholus need a slave to carry such a weight of metal! That he referred to gold is evident from the opening line of the scene in which he says.

" The GOLD I gave to Dromio is laid up safe at the Centaur. "

This would prove that he had money of account in his mind, for the Mark was a silver coin.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — " He met me on the mart...
And charged him with a thousand marks in gold ".

MARK. — See above, Act. I, Sc. 1. Had Antipholus of Ephesus had a specific coin in mind he would have said.

" And charged him with a thousand golden marks ".

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — I am bound to Persia and want guilders for my voyage ".

GUILDER. — See above, Act. I, Sc. 1.

" I buy a thousand POUND a year: I buy a rope ".

POUND. — Money of account in England, derived from the Roman 'liber', a Roman weight applied to the first money of the Republic, of heavy fabric. In England, applied to the SOVEREIGN, first struck by Henry VII, in gold.

" Which doth amount to three odd DUCATS more Than I stand debted to this gentleman ".

DUCAT. — In silver, " of Venice, first struck, it appears, under Girolamo Priuli, 1559-67, with the Half and Quarter. On the reverse we read.. " 124 " for the value — 124 soldi. The silver Ducat was modified from time to time; it was continued down to the close of the republic " = Hazlitt.

In gold it is " strictly applicable only to a very limited range, and probably of Venetian origin. It was introduced at Venice under the Doge Giovanni Dandolo, 1280-89, and underwent two or three changes of type. It is sometimes erroneously used in reference to the German and Netherland series; yet a few cases are known where a German coin is expressly so called. [These instances, however, were later than the time of our Play]... This numismatic term is also found in Lorraine in the 17th and 18th centuries. Charles, Duke, 1545-1608, struck the Single, Double, and Quadruple-Ducat. " = Hazlitt.

" In the desk that's cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry
There is a purse of ducats ".

DUCAT. — See immediately above.

SCENE III. — " Here are the ANGELS that you sent for to deliver you ".

ANGEL. — This coin makes its appearance in the English series in the reign of Henry VI and was, apparently, derived from the Anglo-Gallic coinage. The type was always, Obv. The archangel Michael spearing a dragon; Rv. A ship. The original rev. legend ran " PER CRVCEM TVAM SALVA NOS CHRISTE REDEMPTOR " (" By thy cross save us O Christ, our Redeemer "). This coin was the one used as a gift to persons coming to the monarch to be " touched for the evil ". The half of the Angel was called the Angelet and its motto originally was " O Crux Ave spes unica " (" Hail, o Cross, our only hope "). In the time of Elizabeth the motto had been changed to an abbreviated form of " A DOMINO FACTVM EST ISTVD ET EST MIRABILE IN OCVLIS NOSTRIS " (" This is the Lord's doing and it is marvellous in our eyes "). There was also a Quarter-Angel. The play on words in Dromio's speech gains considerably from the knowledge of these numismatical facts, which were well known to the dramatist.

" A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats ".

DUCAT. — See above, Act IV, Sc. 1. Here is the price of a ring such as a man of the period, — and let it be remembered that Shakespeare always spoke of his own times in such matters and not of the period in which he laid the scene of the play, — would be likely to give a courtesan who served to amuse his idle hours, but with whom he was in no way infatuated. The Courtesan adds, —

" For forty ducats is too much to lose ".

SCENE IV. — " Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope? "

DUCAT. — See above, Sc. 1.

" Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats? "

The dramatist had forgotten that it was angels, and not ducats, that Dromio of Syracuse had brought to his own master, when he had been sent by Antipholus of Ephesus for " a purse of ducats ", just as he had before forgotten that Dromio had returned with angels when he had been sent for ducats..

" Adr. What is the sum he owes ?
Off. Two hundred ducats ".

ACT V.

" I did obey: and sent my peasant home for certain ducats ".

DUCAT — See above, Act IV, Sc. 1.

" This purse of ducats I received from you ".
" These ducats pawn I for my father here ".

UNPUBLISHED VARIETY OF THE ' NEWTOWNARDS, THOMAS FISHER ' TOKEN.

To the Editors " Numismatic Circular ".

Dear Sirs,

My attention was called a short time back to an unpublished variety of the token of ' Newtownards, Thomas Fisher ', of which there was a specimen in the Belfast Museum. When recently in Ireland, I paid a short visit to Newtownards, and was fortunate enough to obtain there a fine specimen of this variety, a description of which may be of interest to collectors. It is of finer work than any of the four varieties described in ' Davis ', and is struck on a thinner and slightly smaller flan. It most nearly resembles No. 40, and may be described as follows :

40 A. Obv. Similar to 40, but the bird has a larger eye, with an inner circle to denote the pupil. The bird's legs are upright, while on the other varieties the legs slant.

Rev. Similar to 40, but the legend is in larger and plainer type. The A in THOMAS is under the centre of N in PENCE instead of being under the first limb, while the S is directly under C instead of being under N and C. The F and R in FISHER touch the toothed border.

In connection with this token, I would like to call the attention of collectors to some recently published particulars regarding its issuer, which appeared in the ' Belfast Museum Quarterly Notes ' for September, and are now reprinted herewith. There has hitherto been considerable doubt whether the tokens in question were correctly attributed to Newtownards, and the only authority for that attribution, which was known to the writer at the time Mr. W. J. Davis's work was in preparation, was a manuscript catalogue of the ' Gillespie " collection, which was in his possession. The article now reproduced is of interest as confirming that attribution, for it proves conclusively that these tokens belong to Newtownards. They were probably issued about the same time as those of John Mc Cully of the same town. which bear the date 1761.

Yours truly.

18th CENTURY NEWTOWNARDS TOKEN

Issued by Thomas Fisher.

In the Quarterly Notes No. XVIII., March, 1911, there appears a most interesting contribution by Mr. William Mayes on the subject of Trade Tokens, and specially referring to those issued by Thomas Fisher.

After treating the subject from the historical standpoint, and referring to the illustrations which accompanied the article, the writer says : — " This token .... is supposed to have been struck at Newtownards ". There is little doubt that the Thomas Fisher token was issued at Newtownards. Some years ago an old gentleman who had resided in Newtownards gave me two specimens of the token in question and told me there was a local tradition that a long time ago the house of the issuer was burglariously entered, and the miscreants carried off, as they thought, several bags of coins. Their chagrin was great when later they discovered, that the contents of the bag were only Thomas Fisher's disused brass tokens, and in their anger they threw the bags and contents into a bog, where they were discovered many years afterward.

That there was a Thomas Fisher engaged in business in Newtownards during the 18th century is clearly proved by an advertisement in the " Belfast News-Letter ", and there can be little doubt but that Newtownards was the place of issue of these interesting mementoes of the past.

The following is the advertisement referred to :

" The Belfast News-Letter ", No 3418.

Tuesday, May 22, 1770.

" Newtown-ards, 21st May, 1770.

From numberless Disappointments and Losses, particularly of late in the course of my business, and a concurrence of unforeseen events, I find myself reduced to the disagreeable Necessity of Stopping Payment.

In the Meantime, for the Satisfaction of my Creditors, I am preparing and will with the greatest dispatch finish a State of my Affairs, in order to be laid before them, when I hope and expect to be able to make such Proposals as will meet with their approbation. THOS FISHER.

P. S. In the mean Time, it is hoped and expected that those that know themselves indebted to said Fisher, will be as speedy in paying their Accouots as possible.

This advertisement was repeated in the issue for Friday, June 15, 1770, No. 3425.

We can deduct from this notice that Fisher had been, for a considerable time previous to 1770, engaged largely in business in Newtownards (and therefore likely to have issued tokens), and that unfortunately he had at this date got into financial difficulties.

What special line he may have been engaged in does not appear, but it was probably that of a grocer, hardware and general merchant, not unlike those to be found in provincial towns to-day.

The only other reference which I can find is also in the " News-Letter " where in No. 3339, issued Friday, August 18, 1769, there is a long advertisement of Henry Earl's (Carlisle) British Oil, with the following addition : —

" The Genuine British Oil sold by Mr. Hugh Forbes, Innkeeper in Glenarm, and by Mr. Fisher in Newtown-Ards, and by no other in those places. "

The foregoing should I think, fix Newtownards as the place of issue of the " Thomas Fisher 18th Century Trade Token. "

TOKENS.

From the inconvenience so generally felt in respect of the deficiency of small change, it may, perhaps, be supposed by many, that this inconvenience has never been experienced in this country to an equal extent: but " there is nothing new under the sun "; and amongst the many articles of curious information to be found in the Selection from the Gentleman's Magazine, recently published, we find an interesting account of the " Origin of Tradesmen's Tokens ". It will be observed, that the inconvenience which gave rise to the abundant issue of tokens by tradesmen, previous to the year 1672, related solely to copper coin. We must, however, keep in recollection the great difference in value of the halpenny and farthing, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and in the present day, when it requires some recollection to name any article of domestic consumption, which can be procured for coin of the latter denomination.

ON THE ORIGIN OF TRADESMEN'S TOKENS.

" It appears, that from and during the reign of Elizabeth to that of King Charles II. the tradesmen and victuallers in general, that is, all that pleased, coined small money, or tokens, for the benefit and convenience of trade; and for this there was, in a manner, a perfect necessity, since at that time there were but few brass halfpennies coined by authority, and no great quantity of farthings, which, likewise, were in bulk very small.

" Now, this small money, by which I mean halfpence and farthings, was coined by the incorporation of cities and boroughs, by several of the companies there, and by the tradespeople and victuallers at pleasure, both in them and in country villages. It was struck for necessary change; the sorts were, as I said, halfpence and farthings; the figure was sometimes eight square, but mostly round, the devices very various, and the materials were lead, tin, copper, or brass. In cities and larger towns, where many sorts of them were current, a tradesman kept a sorting-box, into the partitions of which he put the money of the respective comers, and when he had a competent quantity of any one person's money, he sent it to him and got it changed for silver.

" And in this manner they proceeded till the year 1672, when King Charles II. having struck a sufficient quantity of halfpence and farthings for the exigencies of commerce, these Nummorum Famuli were superseded, and an end was put to these shifts and practices of the victuallers and shopkeepers, as being no longer either necessary or useful.

" The enquiry then, is, how this affair of coining was managed and conducted by the private tradesman. At the borough of Chesterfield, in Derbyshire, Mr. Edward Wood, and afterwards his son, Richard Wood, who were both af them apothecaries, coined money, amongst others ; and, on the death of the late Mr. Edward Wood, son of the said Richard, the dies and the press were found in the house, from whence we are enabled to comprehend the whole process, which may be presumed not to have been very intricate. These Woods coined only halfpennies, and there were two sets of dies, one for the father's, and the other for the son's money, who, I suppose, had a set of dies made for himself on his father's decease. They were apothecaries, as has been already mentioned, and the device was accordingly Apollo Opifer. The dies, consisting of an obverse and reverse, were welded on strong blocks of iron, and being fixed in a very simple screw-press, wrought by hand, in the manner of a capstern with four handles, many hundreds of halfpence might be coined in a very short time, by two persons—one to ply the screw, and the other to take off the pieces as they were struck".

In the "Extract from The Times of 1811" which we print above, a brief account was given of the origin and use of the tradesmen's "tokens" which were so common in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and were again brought into vogue at the end of the eighteenth and beginning of the nineteenth by the dearth of currency and small change occasioned by the Great War. It is not a very exhaustive account, for the story of these private substitutes for public money forms, as every numismatist knows, a long, interesting, and not unimportant chapter in the general history of coins and coinage. Broadly speaking, a token is a piece of metal fashioned and stamped like a coin and bearing, within a limited area of circulation, the same value as a coin of the same denomination. It differs from a proper coin of the realm in being issued by a private person or trader, usually with no sanction from the State, and deriving its value within its limited range of circulation not from the intrinsic value of the metal of which it is composed but from the credit and good faith of the issuer. Its origin is due to the dearth of coins of small denominations issued by the State. Men could not carry on the daily transactions of life without small change; and, as the State failed to supply that need, the traders of a town or district, especially the victuallers, took to coining their own tokens in the denomination of pennies, halfpennies, and farthings and issuing them to such of their customers as would take them—as they readily did—at their face value, which was always in excess of the value of the metal. There can hardly have been much direct profit to the issuer in this, however, since it was an essential part of the transaction that the tokens when returned by any one possessing them to the issuer in quantities equivalent to some higher denomination of coins of the realm should be redeemed in coins of that denomination. There was nothing forced about this use of a currency which, although depreciated, was nevertheless locally accepted at its face value. The issuer issued it for convenience rather than for direct profit, and the customer accepted it for the same reason without fear of loss.

There was thus no essential difference between these tradesmen's tokens and those coins of the realm now in universal use, silver coins and copper or bronze coins, that is, of which the face value is notoriously and by statutory provision in excess of the metallic or intrinsic value. Had the State issued copper coins in sufficient quantities to meet the needs of the community, it would never have been worth the while of private traders to issue tokens to supply their place; as is shown by the fact that the earlier tradesmen's tokens went rapidly out of use after the year 1672, when a sufficiency of copper coins was provided by the State, and that later issues again came into use after the year 1787, when there was again a dearth of small change. In that case they survived until 1813, when the deficiency was once more supplied by the State. In truth there would seem at first sight to be no particular reason why these latter tokens ever should have gone out of use, since the State coinage which finally supplanted them was not less a token coinage than they were. Indeed, if they were in any way inferior to the State coinage it might have been expected that they would continue to hold their own in conformity with the well-known law of GRESHAM, as it is called, which affirms that bad money always drives out good money in the end. But the State coinage, although only a token coinage, always had an advantage over the private and local tokens in at least two respects. In the first place it had a universal currency and circulation, whereas the private tokens could only be circulated in districts where the credit and good faith of the issuers were well known and could always be tested; and in the second place the whole community was protected against loss through the depreciated value of the token currency of the State by the statutory provision that no debt of over a few shillings could be legally paid in copper, and no debt of over 40s. could be legally paid in silver. Thus the State recovered its ancient privilege of issuing all the metallic currency of the realm by the simple expedient of issuing a sufficiency of it to satisfy the needs of the people.

On the other hand, though we are not aware that the issue of tradesmen's tokens ever did any serious harm to any one—while it undoubtedly was a great convenience to many— it is certain that States in times past have grossly abused their exclusive right of coinage for purposes of corruption and fraud. Of this the classical example is the attempted issue in Ireland of "WOOD's halfpence", which led to the denunciation of this nefarious transaction by SWIFT in his famous "Drapier's Letters", perhaps the most farreaching in their effects of all his political writings. Ireland was sorely in need of small change and petitioned the Government to that effect. Without consulting any one in Ireland the Government granted, in 1722, a patent to one WILLIAM WOOD, an English ironmaster—it was obtained by him through the corrupt influence of the DUCHESS OF KENDAL, the KING's mistress, while many other hangers-on of the Government took their toll out of the transaction —for the supply of over £100,000 worth of copper coinage to be exclusively issued in Ireland. This amount was something like ten times as much as was really wanted, and much more than Ireland could possibly absorb, and the intrinsic value of the coinage was far less than the price which WOOD was to be paid for it. As soon as these facts were known Ireland would have none of it, and the "Drapier's Letters" of SWIFT were so inflammatory and at the same time so unanswerable in their main contentions—though many things were said in them which were exaggerated and some which were unsound—that Ireland was provoked almost to the verge of rebellion, and the Government quailed before the storm. In vain was the versatile and capable CARTERET sent to replace the feeble GRAFTON as Viceroy. Nothing would satisfy Ireland but the total abandonment of the project. WOOD was induced to surrender his patent in return for an annuity of £3,000 for eight years—a significant indication of what he expected to make by it—and his precious halfpence, annihilated by the fierce invective of SWIFT, were withdrawn. Perhaps in the days when these things could be done by States and Governments it wast just as well that the supply of small change to the people was often in the hands of private persons, who had only their honesty, good faith, and good repute to secure the circulation of their tokens.

Corpus Nummorum Italicorum. By H. M. King Victor Emmanuel. Piemonte-Sardegna. Zecche d'Oltremonti di Casa Savoia. Vol. II. Large 4to 506 pp. + XLVIII plates. Royal Academy of the Lincei. Rome, 1911.

A few months only have elapsed since the publication of the first volume of the Corpus, and already we are favoured with a second quarto of that magnum opus which has been undertaken by H. M. the King of Italy.

No work exists, dealing with the numismatics of any one country in the world, at all commensurate in magnitude, thoroughness and completeness with the present, and judging from the contents of Vol. II, in which are treated the coinages of a number of mints of Piedmont and Lombardy, south of the Apennines, including that of Sardinia, we may form an idea, not only of the immense scientific importance, but also of the size the work will inevitably attain.

The text of Vol. II comprises about 500 pages and is accompanied by forty-eight collotype plates of coins, reproduced direct from the originals, or where specimens could not be procured, from engravings in special monographs and former treatises on Italian regional numismatics. The intermixture of process blocks with wooden blocks is not conducive to the artistic effect, which had to be sacrificed obviously for scientific reasons.

The Catalogue is most exhaustive. Every variety is carefully described; the size and weight of each coin are indicated. There should be very few omissions, as the Royal author has not only included all the specimens in His magnificent collection, but all those from the Turin and Vatican museums and public and private collections in Italy. Further His Majesty has drawn also from such sources as the French National Collection, the Imperial Museum Vienna, the Berlin and British Museums, the Ermitage, and many other less important cabinets in Austria-Hungary, France, Germany, Russia, and Switzerland, and has further consulted all the literature on the subject.

Among the most interesting coinages which are considered in Vol. II, we may mention briefly those of Asti, from which mint Louis XII. of France issued a considerable number of artistic pieces, both as Duke of Orleans, and as King; Carmagnola, where Ludovico II., marquis of Saluzzo, coined an important series of portrait-pieces in gold and silver, and also a gold ten scudi and silver talleri with the busts of the marquis and his consort, Marguerite de Foix, face to face; Casale, a prolific mint, with the conspicuous issues in artistic merit of William I. and II.; Desana, with the coinage of which mint the Tizzone family was connected from the beginning of the sixteenth century to 1676; Frinco; Messerano, where the Fieschi held sway and also produced fine testoni under Ludovico II., and Pier Luca; Montanaro, many of the coins of which are of excessive rarity; Passerano, which was the seat of the Radicati, famous for their numerous imitations of foreign coins; Tassarolo, the mint of the Spinola family; Susa, Turin, etc., and other zecche of the Dukes of Savoy; and finally Cagliari, wherefrom numerous issues were coined by the Spanish and Savoyard ruling houses.

To give a fuller idea of the excellence of the volume before us attention should be drawn to the many rarities and unique varieties described in it, and specialists will find abundant fresh material for the study of the numerous counterfeit or imitation coinages which are amongst the most difficult if not also interesting features of Italian numismatics.

A Catalogue conceived on so vast a plan and prepared with such accuracy, thoroughness, and lucidity, must supersede all previous attempts of a similar kind, and will always remain the standard work of reference, upon the accomplishment of which His Majesty King Victor Emmanuel will not only have won the admiration of all scientists but the humble and sincere gratitude of all numismatists.

Christian Teaching of Coin Mottoes. By Dr. Wm. Allan and Prof. J. Zimmerman. Small 8vo. 184 pp., with numerous illustrations in the text. London (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge), 1911.

Price : 3/6 net.

Readers of the Numismatic Circular will remember Dr Allan's series of articles on 'Christian Legends and Mottoes upon Coins' and Prof. J. Zimmerman's essay on the 'Religious character of Ancient coins', which were published in its columns in 1908-9. These papers have since been rewritten and enlarged, and by a resolution unanimously passed at a combined meeting of the Ruridecanal Chapters of Poole and Purbeck, the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge was requested to have them reprinted in book form.

The subject is not one that has been given much attention to, altough it certainly proves of considerable interest. The custom of inscribing Scripture mottoes upon coins, which was very prevalent in most Christian countries for many centuries, has now almost died out. These inscriptions, as writes the author, can hardly be supposed always to express the deep inward convictions of those who selected them, but they must have been chosen as expressing what at the time were generally accepted truths. In some cases it is indeed possible to trace them to the personal piety of the ruler who caused the coins to be issued. A remarkable example of this is found in the coinage of Ernest the Pious, duke of Saxe-Coburg and Altenburg (1640-1675) and in those of many of the German princes of the Reformation times and seventeenth century.

Dr Allan subdivides the inscriptions in various rubrics, among which we find, The Sayings of Jesus, Apostolic Sayings, Doctrinal Mottoes, Trust in God, Divine Providence, &c.

The book is well worth perusing, and is neatly got up. But we regret greater care was not taken in the proofing, and especially in ascertaining the correct descriptions of the illustrations, which are incorrect in many cases. In the preface the Numismatic Circular is twice referred to as the Numismatic Chronicle.

THE WORK OF THE ROYAL MINT

FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL REPORT.

The report for 1910 of the Deputy Master and Comptroller of the Royal Mint was issued yesterday. The revival in the demands for Imperial coins towards the end of 1909 noted in the previous report continued during last year. Over 122 millions of such coins were struck, a number exceeded only in 1907 when the large coinage of bronze raised the figure to over 128½ millions. The coinage in the precious metals during 1910 considerably exceeded that of any previous year. The demand for gold resulted in a coinage of over 27 million pieces or nearly five million pieces in excess of the coinage in 1907. Nearly 52 million silver pieces were coined or eleven millions more than in the previous highest year. The bronze coinage, consisting of nearly 43 million pieces, although large, has been exceeded on several occasions. The volume of Imperial coinage rendered it impossible to meet all Colonial requirements during the year, and rather less than usual—about 30½ million pieces—were struck. Nearly 153 million pieces were struck in all, amounting in currency value to over 28 million pounds.

The issues in each of the three Imperial coinage metals exceeded the average of the previous ten years, in the case of gold and silver being more than double. The rapid increase in the demand for gold coin in recent years resulted in an issue during 1910 of over £ 25,000,000, exceeding by over £ 4,000,000 the issue for 1907, when the financial disturbances led to unusually heavy demands in this metal. The large silver issues were due to concurrent home and Colonial demands, notably for West Africa, which absorbed more than a million pounds of new silver in the year. The issue of bronze coin, which shows an increase of nearly £ 30,000 over the previous year, brings the total issues of Imperial coin for 1910 to the unprecedented figure of nearly £ 28,000,000.

A summary of the Imperial currency issues during recent years is here given :

	1909 £		1910 £		Mean of 10 years, 1900-1909. £
Gold.....	13,800,000	...	25,300,000	...	11,230,348
Silver.....	1,389,599	...	2,520,591	...	1,146,896
Bronze.....	121,811	...	151,452	...	141,866
Totals....	15.311,410	...	27,972,043	...	12,519,110

Gold bullion weighing 5,707,638,300 ounces standard, of the value of £ 22,224, 116 12 s. 7 d., was imported into the Mint for coinage during the year. The value of the light gold coin received for recoinage was £ 2,700,000, and its weight 685,978,861 ounces standard. Gold coins of the United States of the weight of 513,319,745 ounces standard and of the value of £ 1,998,738 15 s. 2 d. were also received for conversion into sterling.

LIGHT AND WORN COINS.

The total amount of light gold coin received from the Bank of England during the year amounted to £ 2,700,000. The value of the deficiency in weight was £ 28,969. The gold coins received and weighed at the Bank of England during the year amounted to 53,392,065 pieces as compared with 54,853,882 in 1909, and the percentage of light sovereigns was lower than in the previous year, while that of half-sovereigns shows a slight rise. The amount of coin accepted as light again shows a fall. The continued fall in the value of half-sovereigns accepted as light appears to indicate that the influence of the large issues of this denomination in 1892-93, which began to fall light in 1898, has now disappeared.

The demand by the Bank of England for silver coin during the year amounted to more than double that of 1909, and reached a figure which has not been exceeded since 1889 and 1890, when favourable arrangement made by the Mint in regard to cost of carriage led to a large issue of silver.

The worn silver coin received from the Bank of England amounted to £ 470,000, from other sources in England to £ 17,298 2 s. 9 d., from Banks in Scotland to £ 30,741 5 s., and from the Banks in Ireland to £ 11,799 17 s. 6 d. Crowns to the amount of £ 3,300 were received from a provincial bank.

The total weight of the worn coin withdrawn (£ 564,758 7s. 3d.) was 1,891,529.82 ounces, equivalent in value, at 5 s. 6 d. per ounce, to £ 520,170 14 s., showing a loss of £ 44,587 12 s. 3 d., or 7.89 per cent.

PROFIT ON SILVER COIN.

The weight of silver bullion purchased for coinage during 1910 (at a cost of £ 956, 341 18 s. 5 d.) was 9,232,633.28 ounces, representing an issue value of £ 2,538,974 3 s., and the gross profit obtained, therefore, was £ 1, 582,632 4 s. 7 d., equivalent to 165.49 per cent. The weight of worn coin received (nominal value £ 564,758 7 s. 3 d.) amounted to 1,891,529.82 ounces, equal at the Mint coining rate of 5 s. 6 d. per ounce to £ 520,170 14 s. The total expenditure for metal, therefore, was £ 1,521,100 5 s. 8 d., from which coin was produced of the nominal value of £ 3,059, 144 17 s., so that there was a profit on the purchases of bullion and worn coin together at the rate of 101.11 per cent.

Shortly after the accession of King George, steps were taken, the report explains, for the preparation of a model of the Royal effigy for coinage purposes. This work was entrusted to Mr. Bertram Mackennal, A.R.A., and the design approved for the obverse of British coins consists of a portrait of his Majesty turned to the left, without decoration of any kind. The abbreviated forms of the King's style and titles adopted for the coinage are similar to those authorised by King Edward VII. The changes connected with the reverse designs of the coinage are limited to the florin and sixpence. The reverse of the florin bears four crowned shields arranged in the form of a cross, in the angles four sceptres springing from the Star of the Garter in the centre, and is in fact the design of the double-florin of 1887, the proportions being slightly modified so as to make room for the inscription indicating the value of the coin. The sixpence, like the shilling, now bears the Royal crest within an inner circle.

The work of the Medal Department shows a considerable reduction due in the main to smaller demands from the War Office. The number issued in 1910 was 11,124, as compared with 25,821 in in the previous year. King Edward, by Royal Warrant dated July 7, 1909, instituted a new medal to be awarded for acts of courage to members of the Constabulary Forces and Fire Brigades in any part of the British Dominions. This medal, known as the King's Police Medal, was issued to the first recipient in the year under review. In commemoration of the opening of the first Parliament of the Union of South Africa by the Duke of Connaught a silver medal was struck for bestowal on those who had rendered service to the cause of the Union, or who took part in the inauguration of the Legislature.

COUNTERFEIT COINING.

There was a startling increase in the number of persons charged under the Coinage Offences Act during 1910, as compared with the three previous years, and an increase of 61 convictions on the number for the year 1909. Of the 181 convictions in 1910, no fewer than 63 were for felony : 17 being for the making of counterfeit coin, 29 for the felonious possession of moulds and other implements used in such manufacture, and 18 for uttering or possessing counterfeit coin after the prisoner had been previously convicted of an offence under the Coinage Offences Act, 1861. Of the 64 persons convicted of felony, &c., 30 were new offenders, and the remaining 34 were persons who had been previously convicted of offences against the Coinage Offences Act, many of them several times. About 2,256 pieces of counterfeit coin were taken possession of by the police.

TREASURE TROVE

Colonial coinage struck during 1910 included £ 1,100 in fourpences for British Guiana, 500,000 rupees in silver and 154,003 rupees in nickel-Bronze for Ceylon, £ 350,000 in silver for the Commonwealth of Australia, 50,000 rupees in silver and 109,444 rupees in nickel-bronze for East Africa and Uganda, and £ 13,500 in nickel-bronze for Nigeria.

In April a hoard of coins, unearthed in a cottage garden at Winterslow, near Salisbury, Wiltshire, was forwarded to the department by the Treasury. The "find" consisted of fifty shillings of the reigns of Edward VI, Philip and Mary, Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I, respectively. From this treasure trove a selection of eight pieces was acquired by purchase at their antiquarian value. Beyond these coins no additions of interest were made to the museum during the year.

A total of 8,858 persons visited the Mint during the year, compared with 8,712 in 1909.

THE WORLD'S COINAGES.

From a table appended to the report, it appears that the world's coinages in 1910 reached the colossal total of 1,316,111,978 pieces, of the aggregate value of £ 105,341,143. The annexed figures for the principal producing countries shows that the British Empire easily heads the list.

ART ON BANK NOTES.

THE NEW SWISS ISSUE ADVERSELY CRITICISED.

The new issue of Swiss 1.000 franc, 100 franc, and 50 franc notes, which have just come into circulation, were printed by a London firm, Messrs. Waterlow and Co. Formerly they were printed in the United States. They have, however, as heretofore, been designed by Swiss artists, and a great deal of fun is at present being made of them, not on account of the printing, but solely on account of the designs. The 1.000 franc note, which I have seen, represents the interior of a factory, with a number of workmen around a machine. The effect, in my opinion, is good, and this particular design does not seem to have given rise to much criticism.

What is criticised is the work of the impressionist painter, Ferdinand Hodler, of Geneva, of whom the Swiss have so high an opinion, some of them even speaking of him as if he were a Rodin of the brush, whose works it is a disgrace not to know. On the 100 franc note Hodler has drawn a mower; on the 50 franc note a woodcutter, who, however, is unhappily much more like a saboteur in the very act of cutting down telegraph poles. The telegraph poles, it appears, are really pine trees, but, as the woodcutter is a robust and vigorous fellow, it is probable that this design will pass muster with the public in general. The mower is mowing with such frenzy that his shirt is flying in the wind, and his whole figure somehow produces a rather awkward and ungraceful effect. One critic, indeed, remarked that it was a pity the mower could not be asked to leave the beautiful Alpine landscape, which forms the background of the engraving, and on which he is the one blot.

THREE HELVETIAS.

The Swiss also find fault with the figure of Helvetia on the obverse of the notes. They say that she is not like Helvetia. Moreover, it seems there are three different Helvetias for the three different notes. The 1.000 franc Helvetia is, at any rate, very pretty; but the 100 franc Helvetia, with lownecked dress and elaborately dressed hair, produces a deplorable effect, and is nicknamed "La belle parfumeuse". The 50 franc Helvetia is an absolutely commonplace bourgeoise, who might be anybody's aunt or cousin.

Truly characteristic of Swiss ideas of art is the border of the engravings, which is a hotchpotch of all kinds of geometrical figures and all sorts of architectural ornaments, which have absolutely no connection with one another. As the "Journal de Genève" remarks in a witty comment, this confused border, which completely overshadows the engravings, is so hideous that it fully explains why the new bank-notes find such favour with philosophers and sages, who are constantly preaching contempt for riches.

THE RICHES OF CYRENAICA.

We have pleasure in inserting the following letter to the Editor of the Morning Post from our numismatic friend, Mr John Ward:

Sir, This once fertile region seems, after 2,000 years of neglect by the civilised world, at last to be likely to rise from its long obscurity. Under the Moslem rule it has sunk to the level of ignorance and inertia which always follows on the track of Mohammedan conquest. I spent some years in wanderings over ancient Grecian sites, on the prowl for adding to my collection of Greek coins. But when I would have rambled over the classic sites of Cyrenaica I was met with the non possumus of Turkish government — no scientific searchers were permitted. So I had to collect my coins of Cyrene elsewhere on the shores of the Mediterranean, where the commerce of the old Greeks may have carried them.

Exquisite little gems of art, beautiful gold and silver coins, dating from 550 B.C. or earlier, they all bore, on the reverse, the engraving of the wonderful plant which rendered the region famous — the silphium — which seems to have been peculiar to the district, where it was richly cultivated. We are told it supplied food, its roots and fibre were dried and were woven into fabrics, and its berries yielded a valuable oil. If the Italians only restore the irrigation (it possesses copious springs) the ancient wealth may return to the country ere long. So fertile was this region 2,500 years ago that here the old Greeks located the Garden of the Hesperides. When we see the conquest of Tripoli spoken of as a white elephant for the Italians I think the fact of the ancient riches of the Greek colonists, as shown in their exquisite moneys, all bearing the crest of the agricultural origin of their wealth, may be taken as an index of what may again come about under civilised government. — Yours, &c.

LEAVES FROM MY NOTE BOOK.

It was the wish of Ackermann when presenting to the public his "Illuminated School of Mars" — Loyal Volunteer Corps of London and its vicinity, to hand down to posterity a record in "figures, uniform, and colours" of that "valuable body of English Citizens" who so nobly responded to the call of their Country. Over a hundred years have passed, and to-day are to be found in the Collection of medal connoisseurs, medallic records in the form of Badges and Medals, not only of the London Corps but also those of all parts of the United Kingdom, thus bringing us in touch with the names and places — the old associates of our families and neighbours of a passed century.

Alas, that the forger, tempted by the high value paid for many of the rarer specimens, has unfortunately manufactured so many of his nefarious copies that many Collectors have barred their collections against Volunteer medals. Local interest, however, of one's own County, City or Town must always attract the attention of a Collector to this series. Many of the specimens portray examples of the highest skill of the Engraver's art, whilst in others, the quaintness of the design, uniform of the Corps, or wording of the inscription, will always induce the connoisseur to prize the genuine specimens. And it must not be forgotten that when these medals and badges were presented to those who had by their "skill at arms" called for some special mark of recognition from their superior Officers, it was not the custom of the British Sovereign to bestow decorations, except in very rare cases upon those of high estate. Ackermann's Work was published in 1799, giving a description of the various London Corps raised at that period, from which I propose to give the details, with illustrations of some of the medals. The names of the first Officers are given, (which I will also include as it always increases the interest in a medal if it bears a name). I would at the same time warn Collectors against the forger and his wily "innocence" of the value of these medals. As an instance — only a few weeks ago what appeared an exceedingly interesting Regimental medal was sent for my inspection purporting to be of the period of George II.; it consisted of the obverse of a George III medal with an engraved reverse let into a frame or rim of a late George III. (probably) school medal. This was offered for the low figure of a pound or two by a person who is well acquainted with the value of such medals. Care must therefore be used in purchasing a medal even though it possesses a name similar to that found in these notes.

I.

ST. JAMES'S VOLUNTEERS.

This Corps was instituted June, 1797, under the following regulations. They provided their own clothing, did not accept pay for their services and were to assist the Civil power in any part of the Metropolis, in case of riot, invasion, or other emergency, either in conjunction with other Corps, or separately, as occasion may demand.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of York presented this Corps with their Colours, on the 5th of July, 1798, in a field belonging to Mr. Calvert, at Somers Town.

The St. James's Volunteers consisted of one Grenadier, one Light Infantry and four Battalion Companies, each of sixty men, corporal included. They had also a Committee chosen every six months by ballot of which at the above date William Blew, Esq., was Chairman.

Officers.

Colonel, Lord Amherst.
Lieut.-Colonel, Monk.
Major, — —
Adjutant, Richard Chase.
Serjeant Major, William Downs.
Chaplain, Rev. Thomas Bracken.
Surgeon, Morris.
Grenadiers, Captain Bell; Lieut. Cater; Ensign Cleve.
1st Battalion Company. Captain Higham; Lieut. Jackson; Ensign Rogers.
2nd — Captain G. Ellis, M. P.; Lieut. Tate; Ensign Blades.
3rd — Captain Farquhar; Lieut. Miller; Ensign Charlton.
4th — Captain Stewart; Lieut. Hipps; Ensign Wright.
Light Infantry. Captain Chas. Ellis, M. P.; Lieut. Reynel; Ensign Ideson.

Dress.

Black Hat, White feathers.
Red Coat turned up with blue.
Blue Pantaloons.
The Wing Companies the same with the Battalion, with the following exceptions: —
Grenadiers. Red Feathers.
Light Infantry. Green Feathers and Bugles on their Wings.
Battalion. White Feathers.
Oval Breast Plate, with S. J. W. in cypher and LOYAL VOLUNTEERS.
Buttons, round, otherwise the same as Breast Plate.
Cartouche Box, a small Star.
Half Boots.

In the Murray Collection is an interesting silvergilt medal of this Corps. Obv. Bust of George III; ST. JAMES'S WESTMINSTER LOYAL VOLUNTEERS EMBODIED 1803. Rev. A heavy wreath of oak leaves, tied together with riband, on which is inscribed Give God Praise; in the centre COLONEL LORD AMHERST and round the outside of the wreath, Presented by CAPtn GRANT OF THE LIGHT INFANTRY TO MR TATHAM, FOR HIS SERVICES IN FORMING THE ARTILLERY. 1808 [1].

Another very large and handsome medal was struck in 1807 to commemorate the Centenary of the Union of England and Scotland. Obv. Bust of the King and Queen GEORGE III ET CHARLOTTA REX ET REGINA BRITANNIARUM. Within a raised band inscribed, WITH GOD AND THE PEOPLE THE THRONE IS IMMORTAL surrounded by a circle of spear heads [2] within a scroll border. Rev. Three female figures holding hands, representing England, Ireland and Scotland; in the field, Rose, Shamrock and Thistle; below, a bundle of arrows and date 1807. CONCORD IS THE SECURITY OF NATIONS, the whole within a wreath of oak leaves. The edge is engraved LORD AMHERST COLONEL COMMANDANT ST JAMES'S VOLUNTEERS, 16 June, 1803 [3] and records the date on which the Corps was embodied, 16th June 1803. In the Parliamentary Return for August 1803 the St. James's Volunteers consisted of ten Companies with a total strength of 800.

William Pitt Amherst, 2nd Baron Amherst and 1st Earl Amherst, P. C., born 14th Jany. 1773, at one time ambassador to China, and subsequently governor-general of India, created Viscount Holmesdale and Earl Amherst, 19th Decr. 1826. Died 13th March. 1857 [4].

II.

THE ROYAL WESTMINSTER VOLUNTEERS.

This Corps was originally formed in the parish of St. Ann's Soho, which name it bore until the year 1797, when, having increased to two Companies and it appearing probable that the numbers might improve much more, if a more general name was adopted, application was accordingly made for that purpose and leave granted by His Majesty to take the name of The Royal Westminster Volunteers.

Officers when first formed.

Captain, Bryant Higgins.
First Lieutenant, R. West.
Second Lieutenant, Greenwood.

Later.

Grenadiers, Captain Pettitt; Lieuts. Gordon & Bowman.
Light Company, Captain Russell; Lieuts. Rowe & Wrench.
1st Battalion, Captain Fowler; Lieut. Hopkins; Ensign Tullock.
2nd — Captain Allen; Lieut. Jennett; Ensign Wellington.
3rd — Captain Broadwood; Lieut. Smithwaite; Ensign Elliott.
4th — Lieut. Col. Birch; Lieut. Cragg; Ensign J. Bowman.
5th & 6th — reserved for the Colonel & Major; the other Officers not then appointed. All Officers elected from the ranks.

THE ROYAL WESTMINSTER VOLUNTEERS were reviewed in 1795, in Mr. Lord's Cricket Ground, Marylebone, by the Right Hon. Field Marshal Conway. In 1796, on Wimbledon Common, by Lord Onslow, and the day after called out by the Magistrates to quell a riot in St. Ann's Parish. In 1797 they were again reviewed by General Gwyn, in the King's Mews and in 1798 in Harley Fields, by General D'Oyley.

Lady Southampton, on the 25th of May, 1799 honoured this Corps with a presentation of their Colours in the King's Mews, Charing Cross.

Dress.

Coat. Blue turned up with Red, trimmed with Gold.
Black Hat. Red Feather tipped white; the Light Company wore Helmets with a Bugle Horn: Label ROYAL WESTMINSTER VOLUNTEERS.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS &c.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.

Oct. 19. — Sir Henry H. Howorth, President in the chair.

Exhibitions: — By Mr. J. G. Milne, an unpublished Alexandrian tetradrachm of Severus Alexander, with reverse Julia Mamæa holding model of a gateway; by Mr. F. A. Walters, a medallion (in two metals) of Commodus, without reverse, and a tetradrachm struck at Antioch with portraits of Marc Anthony and Cleopatra; by Mr. L. G. P. Messenger, a small bronze coin of Constantine II. with reverse SPES PUBLICA, labarum with the Christian monogram above; by Mr. Bernard Roth, the quarter stater of Cunobelinus found at Westerham in 1889 and described by Sir John Evans in his 'Supplement', p. 560; by Henry Garside, a series of recent coins of Australia (Sydney mint), Canada, and the Straits Settlements; and by Mr. Henry Symonds, a series of coins illustrating his paper.

Mr. Henry Symonds read a paper on 'The Bristol Mint of Henry VIII. and Edward VI.,' based on his researches in contemporary documents. The mint of Bristol was reopened in 1546 by Henry VIII., owing probably to the commercial importance and geographical situation of the town. William Sharington was appointed Under-Treasurer to the mint, which was the only country mint of the period to have a graver on the staff. Mr. Symonds gave numerous details regarding the changes in the mint staff, the salaries paid, and the amount of bullion coined, with an account of Sharington's wholesale issue of the prohibited "testoons". On his dismissal, Sharington was succeeded by Thomas Chamberlain. A reference to the coining of silver "with the print of angels" was quoted; none of these coins, which, the author of the paper suggested, may have been used in the ceremony of "touching", is known to have survived. Mr. Symonds pointed out that previous writers had assumed that the mint was reopened three years earlier than it really was, and suggested alterations in the present distribution of the coins of this period between Henry VIII. and Edward VI.

COINS and MEDALS for SALE

Special attention is directed to the fact that every coin or medal catalogued in the following lists is guaranteed to be absolutely genuine (except when expressly stated in the description to be otherwise) and if not approved of can be returned, when the full amount paid will be refunded.

Collectors will also kindly note that every care is taken when compiling the catalogues not to overrate the condition of the pieces but to faithfully represent them according to their merits.

All orders should be sent to Spink & Son Ltd., 17 and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. PARKES WEBER, M. A., M. D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual — his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action, — as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described. Price Five Shillings Net.
Postage extra.

GREEK COINS.

THE ANCIENT COINS OF SICILY.

MESSANA.

At the end of the 'Archaic Period' of the coinage in the year 480 B.C. Anaxilaus, tyrant of Zancle, sent to the Carthaginians for aid against Theron, who was advancing against Terillus of Himera, the father of the wife of Anaxilas. His reign, however, lasted only four years longer. From the death of Anaxilas in 476 B.C. Rhegium and Messana were under the rule of Micythus as guardian of his sons. Hieron of Syracuse invited these young men to his court, and advised them to demand the resignation of their guardian. In 467 B.C. Micythus voluntarily retired to Tegea in the Peloponnesus, and lived there for the rest of his life. One of these sons of Anaxilas was named Cleophron or Leophron, and he it was who ruled in Messana, which was under the rule of these sons of Anaxilas until 466 B.C., when so many of the Sicilian cities cast off the yoke of the tyrants, and instituted a more democratic government.

In Grote's History of Greece (Part. II, chap. LVII) we read: "After a period of severe commotion, an accommodation was concluded, whereby the adherents of the expelled dynasty were planted partly in the territory of Messene, partly in the reestablished city of Camarina in the eastern portion of the southern coast, bordering on Syracuse".

The constant changes of residence begun by the despots involved such a mixture of races and of religious institutions that a feeling of instability arose in the Greek cities, such as to make us wonder at the success of the popular government in restoring peace and prosperity.

THE MULE CAR TYPE. 480-466 B.C.

Sicily was especially famed for its mule-cars. Pindar refers to them in his ὑπορχήματα "Σικελίας δ' ἔχημα δαιδάλεον ματεύσειν" (The Sicilian curiously wrought mule-car is sought). Pindar says Hiero had given the mules, with which he had won the race, to his charioteer, one Straton, and he begs Hieron to give Straton the car also; comparing the charioteer to a Scythian with horses only, and no chariot in which to live. The Hyporcheme was a merry mimetic dance, originally performed in honour of Apollo. The car was generally called ἀπήνη, and this word was applied to the car to which only two mules were attached.

Pindar's word ἐχήμα is from a verb to carry, to bear, and so it is similar to the Latin vehiculum from "vehi". The word was used to distinguish the car from the war chariot ἅρμα. As all the great games were religious festivities this type may be regarded as having a religious significance, and thus both the hare and the mule-car were in harmony with the custom of placing religious types on the coins.

THE HARE.

Aristotle, quoted by J. Pollux, says that Anaxilas introduced hares into Sicily, and the type was first issued in Rhegium, and then afterwards into Messana. Dr Head in his Hist. Num., p. 93, says: "Such a motive, is however, quite insufficient to account either for the adoption, or for the long continuance (at Messene) of the hare as a coin type. Greek coin-types, at this early period, were always chosen, or rather sprang naturally, from the popular or state religion. The hare is here the emblem of the Messenian god Pan, as is proved beyond all doubt by the rare tetradrachm of Messene on which Pan is seen caressing one of these animals. A local tradition as to the introduction of hares into Sicily by the tyrant of Rhegium may very likely have been current in Aristotle's time. If so it was true only of the coins, which would naturally be called "hares" (confer the colts of Corinth &c.).

THREE COINS WHICH ILLUSTRATE THE HISTORY OF THIS PERIOD.

When the sons of Anaxilas were deposed in Messana the citizens appear to have sought the aid and alliance of the Locrians in Magna Graecia, as being enemies of Rhegium and its rulers. This friendship of the two cities Messana and Locri lasted for many years, as we may see from the account given by Thucydides (V, 5) of a body of Locrians who had been in Messana.

The earliest evidence of this alliance is a coin found in a hoard buried near Messana bearing on Obv. a hare running to right, above its hind quarters ΛO, beneath ΜΕΣΣΑΝΙΟΝ. Reverse, Biga of mules walking to right, male charioteer holding reins and goad; in the exergue a laurel-leaf and berry. It is figured on Plate VIII, fig. 4, Num. Chron., 1896. The A is characteristic of the period immediately succeeding the deposition of the Tyrants. The form N instead of Ν is a later form and Sir A. J. Evans considers the coin was issued not many years anterior to 450 B.C.

The coin is also interesting as being the earliest known coin of the city of Locri, which appears not to have instituted a mint until nearly a hundred years after this date.

Adolf Holm (Vol. III, p. 590, Geschichte Siciliens) notices that the Locrians represented the Dorian interests. and they were generally allied to Syracuse. In Messana were two parties, the Ionian allied to Rhegium, and the Dorian to Syracuse and Locri.

The coin illustrated in the Num. Chronicle was formerly in the Boyle Collection. Dr Ettore Gabrici mentions another examples in the collection of Dr J. P. Six and Herr A. Löbbecke.

Perhaps the most important of these three historical coins is the unique tetradrachm in the Hirsch Collection at Brussels bearing a figure of Poseidon on the Obverse, and a dolphin with a scallop shell beneath, on the Reverse, with the inscription ΔΑΝΚΛΑΙΟΝ.

It is illustrated on plate IV, fig. 8 of Mr G. F. Hill's "Coins of ancient Sicily", and also on Plate V, fig. 12 of Mr. G. Macdonald's "Coin types", also on plate VIII, fig. 7 of the Num. Chron., 1896, where it is admirably described by Sir A. J. Evans in pp. 109 seq.

The coin is a witness to the rise into power of a party of the old Zanclaeans, which no historians have mentioned.

The figure of Poseidon as the earth shaker who had rent asunder the land and made the straits on which the city was founded is most appropriate to the coinage of Messana. Very similar figures may be seen on the coins of Poseidonia.

There is a general resemblance in the style of the figure with that on the coins of Caulonia issued about 450 B.C., but more striking is the resemblance of the altar on this coin of Messana with that on a coin of Caulonia, illustrated on Plate VIII, fig. 8 of Num. Chron., 1896. From the presence on that coin of a bird fluttering its wings it is thought the date must be about 430 B.C., at which time such birds are found on the coins of Thurium.

The form of the letter D on the coin of Messana might, if taken by itself, imply a much earlier date, but this form of letter is known to have been used in the field of a coin of this city about this time or only a little earlier (Num. Chron., 1894, p. 215).

Moreover the ancient form of the letter may have been purposely used by the men who were trying to revive the ancient name of their city.

The history of Messana is a blank so far as ancient histories are concerned, at any rate between the years 461 and 427 B.C. when the first Athenian expedition set forth, but this ancient coin is a witness to an event unrecorded by any writers. Sir A. J. Evans notices a passage in Strabo which confirms the fact, illustrated by the coin, of a revival of the name of the Zanclaeans. It occurs in Lib. VI, 2, 3 where we read Catana is a foundation of the Naxeans. Tauromenium of the Zancleans in Hybla. Diodorus Sic (XVI, 7) refers to this refoundation of Tauromenium in the middle of the fourth century.

There is a third coin which illustrates the connection of the citizens of Messana with the cities of Magna Graecia. It is a coin of Croton illustrated on Plate IV, fig. 9 of G. F. Hill's "Coins of ancient Sicily"; No. 4). B. M. Catalogue.

On the Obverse is the normal type of Croton, the Apolline tripod and ΩΡΟ on the right side and a drinking cup on the left; on the Reverse is a similar type with ΔΑ on the left and an incuse altar on the right. The Zanclean party we see sought help from Croton just as the older Messenian faction had sought aid from Locri.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. PARKES WEBER, M. A., M. D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual — his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action, — as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described. Price Five Shillings Net.

GREEK COINS.

NAXOS.

At the beginning of this period Naxos was under the sway of Gelon, tyrant of Syracuse, until 478 B.C., when his brother Hieron succeeded him, and shewed himself more severe than his brother. Soon after 476 B.C., Diodorus Siculus tells us, Hieron drove out from their cities the Naxians and Catanians, and in order to repeople them he brought over five thousand men from the Peloponnesus, and the same number from Syracuse. As for the Naxians and Catanians driven out, he caused them to be received by the Leontini, who accorded to them the rights of citizenship. Hieron died at Catana in 467, having ruled for eleven years with severity.

We could hardly expect to find coins struck at a period so full of trouble and change. The earliest coins of this Transitional Period are from their style later than 461 B.C. and were issued by the Syracusans who settled in Naxos.

The new settlers preserved the old type of the Obverse, but adopted the style of their own age, which was a great advance from that of the earlier Naxian coins. There is however still something archaic in the treatment of the head, a formality and stiffness which only disappeared in the next period. The heads gradually grew less stiff as the period drew to its close. One sign of originality in the artist is the manner in which the prominent parts of the head, the hair behind and the points of the beard project beyond the border of dots. The different treatment of the hair of the head and that of the beard is also noticeable.

The most wonderful improvement in the skill of the die-engraver is seen however in the anatomical knowledge expressed in the body of the Seilen on the reverse of the coin.

It is evidently the work of an artist who had studied from living models, but who forgot that the young athletic men before him would be unlike a half drunken semi-bestial Seilen.

The determination to exhibit knowledge of anatomy is seen in the works of artists in many differents periods and lands, and is so natural that we cannot be surprised to find it in the work of the fifth century B.C. We must however note that these coins are among the earliest specimens of this lack of judgment or perception of proportion.

On the Reverse as well as on the Obverse types the artistic merit of the work gradually increased until the Finest Art was attained.

The coins can only be arranged chronologically if we admit that the style of art did gradually and surely advance.

In the legends or inscriptions on the coins of this period we always find the old form of the letter X. It would perhaps be difficult to fix the date at which the more modern form Ξ took its place, but at Naxos probably not much before the Athenian invasion of Sicily.

From the style of art exhibited on these coins it is not probable that they were struck before 461 B.C. and this is the earliest date given by modern numismatists.

TRANSITIONAL PERIOD 461-450 B.C.

Tetradrachms.

I Obv. A head of Dionysus to right, his hair long and tied in a bunch behind, and bound with a wreath of ivy : border of dots.

Rev. N AXI ON. A bearded Seilen, naked, with pointed ears and long tail, seated on the ground, facing, his head turned to left towards a wine cup in his right hand; while he supports himself with the left hand.

Drachms.

II. Obv. Similar head of Dionysus, his hair short : same border.
Rev. N AXI ON. Similar type to No 1, body turned rather to left : border of dots.

VII. Obv. Similar head.
Rev. Bunch of grapes on branch with leaves. NAX.
VIII. NAXI. Similar head.
Rev. Similar to VII : plain border.

SELINUS

TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

In the period before the Carthaginian defeat at Himera in 450 B.C. the citizens of Selinus were on such friendly terms with that people that they had promised their assistance, but the help they sent arrived too late to be of use. During the next few years the Selinuntines appear to have been forgiven by the Greeks, for they are mentioned in 466 B.C. as helping the other free cities to expel Thrasybulus from Syracuse (Diodorus, Sic., XI, 68).

Thucydides mentions Selinus as if it were on an equality with Syracuse in wealth and power (Lib. VI, 20). "For there are in them many heavy armed troops and bowmen and dartmen, with many triremes, and crowds to man them. They have money too, partly in private funds, and partly in the temples also at Selinus. But what they most of all excel us in is that they possess many horses and use corn of native growth, and not imported."

Diodorus Siculus (lib. XIII, 45) describes the neglect of the walls and fortifications of the city due to the long period of peace which Selinus had enjoyed.

THE TYPE HAVING REFERENCE TO EMPEDOCLES.

Diogenes Laertius thus relates the legend of Empedocles draining the pestilential marshes round the city :

"But Diodorus of Ephesus, writing about Anaximander says that Empedocles imitated him, indulging in a tragic sort of pride, and wearing magnificent apparel. And when a pestilence attacked the people of Selinus by reason of the bad smells arising from the adjacent river, so that the men died and the women bore children with difficulty, Empedocles contrived a plan and brought into the same channel two other rivers at his own expense; and so by mixing their waters with that of the other river, he sweetened the stream. And as the pestilence was removed in this way, when the people of Selinus were on one occasion holding a festival on the bank of the river, Empedocles appeared among them and they, rising up, offered him adoration, and prayed to him as to a god, and he, wishing to confirm this idea which they had adopted of him, leaped into the fire" (p. 230 B and 231 A Ed. 1664).

This legend is most clearly illustrated by the coin-types of this transitional period during which Empedocles was working and writing. The event happened probably about the middle of the fifth century B.C.

On the Obverse Apollo, the sun-god, is seen with his bow and arrows, which here probably represent the healing rays of the sun driving off the mists of the marshes which had been drained by Empedocles. His sister Artemis rides in the chariot by his side, as the goddess who brought health and ease to the women who had suffered so grievously in childbed.

On the reverse is the figure of a young man with horns on his head, by which we may recognize that he represents the river-god Selinus, and above, the legend ΣΕΛΙΝΟΣ confirms the attribution.

The river-god stands naked before an altar, near which stands a cock, the bird sacred to Æsculapius, the god of healing. With one hand he pours a libation, and in the other holds a branch with which to sprinkle water, as a lustral rite of purification from the pestilence.

Behind the god is a bull on a pedestal which may signify that the Selinuntines had erected a monument of a bull to commemorate the force of water which had driven forth the malarial marsh. This appears probable, because on the didrachms we see a figure of Heracles struggling with the bull. This myth is explained by Professor Cardella in his treatise "Lotta di Ercole con Archeloo". (Orvieto, 1894), in which the myth is illustrated by a drawing of an Etruscan carving representing Heracles struggling with a bull.

The bull represents the force of a stream and the action of Empedocles in using the force of water to clear the marsh reminded the artist of the legend concerning Heracles.

THE TYPE OF THE DIDRACHMS.

The suggestion that the bull on a pedestal in the field of the Tetradrachms may refer to the legend of Heracles and his struggle with the waters of a lake in the mainland of Greece receives some support from the types on the Didrachms, on the Obverse of which we see the figure of the hero struggling with the bull.

On the reverse, the river-god of the Hypsas is seen offering a libation at an altar of Æsculapius round which a snake is twined. In the field a crane or marsh bird of some kind walks to right, that is, away from the altar. Mr. G. F. Hill suggests, on p. 85 of "Coins of Ancient Sicily", that it "seems to stalk away in high disgust at the disappearance of its favourite haunts".

Both the Tetradrachms and Didrachms thus refer to the same symbolism, and it seems probable that the obols also bear a similar reference.

THE TYPE OF THE OBOLS.

It was suggested by Eckhel that the type on the Obols of a female figure seated with her hand on a snake has reference to a legend related by Clement of Alexandria in his "exhortation to the heathen" (p. 11 of Paris Ed. 1641):

"Zeus is both the father and seducer of Korê and has intercourse with her in the shape of a serpent: his identity, however, was discovered ..... Perephatta (i. e. Proserpine, the Korê) has a child, though to be sure in the form of a bull, as an idolatrous poet says —

"The bull the dragon's father and the father of the bull the dragon".

The same legend is also told by S[t] Athenogoras in his "Legatio pro Christianis" Ed. Oxon, 1706, p. 71. Again this legend appears on p. 64 of Eusebius "præparatio Evangelicae".

Arnobius in his work "adversus gentes" (lib. V, § 21) after telling the story even more in detail, says:

"If any one asks who narrates this, then we shall quote the well-known senarian verse of a Tarentine poet which antiquity sings, saying "The bull begot a dragon and the dragon a bull."

Diodorus Siculus (IV, 4) speaks of Dionysus as the son of Zeus and Persephone, but does not mention the story of the snake.

Cicero in "de natura Deorum" (III, 23) states the same fact without reference to the snake. Whether Eckhel is right in regarding the type as a reference to this horrible legend is not easy to prove, but at first sight the type rather reminds one of the daughter of Æsculapius with the usual emblem of her father's healing art.

The bull on the other side of the coin is a fact in favour of Eckhel's suggestion.

THE LEGEND EVRYMEΔO ON THE DRACHM.

Connected with the same legend concerning Empedocles is the type of the drachms on which we see as Obverse type the head of a nymph, with the legend EVRYMEΔO, and a crane; and on the Reverse the head of the River-god Selinus with the legend ΣΕΛΙΝΟΣ.

As the letters, on both Obverse and Reverse are the same size, and in the same position relative to the types, it seems probable that they both represent the name of the head on the coin.

In the Brit. Mus. Cat. however the name is filled in by adding N making a male name Eurymedon but the head is that of a female. A. Holm suggests we should read Eurymedosa, and regards her as one of the daughters of Acheloüs. The name is more familiar as that of the nurse of Nausicaa mentioned in Odyssey, VII, 8. It occurs also in the list of the amours of Zeus, in the Clementine Homilies (V, 13) and this is the authority for calling her the daughter of Acheloüs.

The name Eurymedusa is derived from εὐρυς (wide, broad), and μεδω (I rule over).

The well-known name Medusa, the Gorgon, is the feminine of μέδων. Pallas and Aphrodite are called μεδέουσα; Zeus is called Ἰδηθεν μεδέων by Homer, and Poseidon ἁλῳνων μεδέων by Aristophanes (Eq. 558).

Thus we see how appropriate the name Eurymedosa would be as the name of the nymph of the waters freely running before the force of the combined waters of the rivers.

The crane, or water fowl, placed behind her head on the coins symbolizes the wide stretch of waters freely flowing through the old once stagnant marsh, or perhaps the bird of the marsh retiring before the flowing stream.

If the name in the legend were to be filled in as masculine it would be so done under the impression that a magistrate's name was signified, but the names of magistrates do not at that period appear so fully expressed, nor in such large letters nor in such a position in regard to the type.

TETRADRACHM.

I. Obv. ΣEΛ OΣ. The river god Selinos, standing naked to left sacrificing with a patera at an altar; holding in his left hand a laurel-branch, in front of the altar a cock to left; in the field to right a bull standing to left on a pedestal, above which a selinon leaf.

Rev. ИOI OИIΛƎΣ. A quadriga to left driven by Artemis who holds the reins in both hands; on her right side stands Apollo, his chlamys over his shoulder, discharging an arrow; horses walking: border of dots.

II. Obv. Σ EΛI ИOΣ. Similar but the river-god is horned and diademed, and the altar is wreathed.

Rev. ИOITИ OИIΛƎΣ. Similar to I.

III. Obv. ΣEΛIN ONTIO N. Similar type, but the river-god is wearing himation round his body and over his left shoulder.

Rev. Similar, but Apollo is without chlamys.

IV. Obv. Similar to No 1, altar flaming, the bull with his head lowered.

Rev. Similar but front of chariot ornamented with a crane: Apollo wearing chlamys over his shoulder.

V. Obv. Similar to last.

Rev. Similar but Artemis holds a goad with the reins: in exergue a barley-corn: border of dots.

VI. Similar, but the bull has a human head.

Rev. Similar, no goad in hand of Artemis : above the horses an olive-wreath ; in the exergue, a barley-corn : border of dots.

DIDRACHMS.

I. Obv. ΣΕΛΙ ΝΟΙΤΟΝ (sic). Heracles naked standing to right on his right foot, raising left leg to press knee against the bull which he seizes by the horn with his left hand : his right hand is raised grasping club ready to strike, the bull is rearing : border of dots.

Rev. ΗΥΦ ΑΣ. The River-god Hypsas standing nude facing with head turned to left, in the right hand he holds patera over an altar round which a snake is twined ; in his left hand he holds a laurel-branch. In the field to right a crane to right, over which, selinon leaf.

II. Similar both Obverse and Reverse, but the altar on Reverse is wreathed.

DRACHMS.

I. Obv. ΟΔƎMYϘVƎ. Female head to left, hair turned up behind under broad diadem, behind, a crane to right : border of dots.

Rev. ΣΟΝΙΛƎΣ. Youthful head of the river-god Selinus to left, with long horn and pointed ear ; behind, a selinon leaf.

OBOLS.

I. Obv. A female figure draped, seated to left on rock, on which she rests her left hand, her right hand is on the neck of a snake which advances towards her ; above, a selinon leaf : border of dots.

Rev. ΣΕΛΙΝΟΕΣ. A man-headed bull to right, in the exergue a long fish to right : plain border.

The legend ΣΕΛΙΝΟΕΣ is no doubt an old form equivalent to ΣΕΛΙΝΟΥΣ like ΓΥΧΟΕΜ for ΠΥΣΟΥΣ on coin of Pyxus. It is the nominative case.

II. Obv. Similar but the female figure is raising her veil with the left hand.

Rev. Similar to No 1.

III. Obv. Similar type but the female figure places her left hand on her breast.

Rev. Similar to No I but above, a selinon leaf.

STAEDELIN (also STEDELIN, STENDELIN), DAVID ANTON (Swiss). Medallist, Goldworker, Mint-master, etc., born on 22. April 1737 at Steinen in Canton Schwytz, studied first at Lucerne, and went in 1750 to Sion, where he resided until 1755. He learned the art of die-engraving under Hedlinger. We find him working in 1755 at Zoug at a goldsmith's, in which branch of art he perfected himself by a prolonged stay with the Goldsmith of the Court of Sardinia at Turin. In 1760 he returned to his native country. Joint Mint-master from 1791 to the Bishop of Sion, and also at Schwytz and Aarau. He cut dies for currency for Lucerne 1803-1812, Uri and Nidwald 1812, and remained in office until 1819. After that date he settled permanently at Schwytz, and died there in 1830, at the advanced age of 94. He had also officiated as Mint-master in Canton Schwytz. He engraved many dies for the current coins, some of which are signed : SCHWYTZ. AV. Ducat, undated (1779 ; signed S), 1781, 1788, 1790 (S); AR. Gulden 1785 (STEDELIN), 1797 (S); Half Gulden 1785 (St.) and 1797 (S on both sides) ; 5 Schilling pieces 1785, 1787 (S). — BISHOPRIC OF SITTEN. STAMPFER, HANS (Johann) ULRICH, the Elder (Swiss). Goldsmith of the early sixteenth century, a native of Constance, settled at Zurich before 1502, and died there in 1544 (according to Füssli in 1540). The father of Zurich's celebrated Medallist, Jakob Stampfer. From contemporaneous records we learn that H. U. Stampfer was appointed to assay the newly coined silver in 1526, probably in the quality of Warden of the Mint. From early times goldsmiths were entrusted at Zurich with the cutting of the dies for the currency, medals, seals, etc. and it is almost certain that H. U. Stampfer is responsible for some at least of the coin-dies of the Zurich Mint between 1502 and 1540. In 1514 he was elected to the "Gross Rath", and became 'Zugmeister' in 1526. He was one of the champions of the Reformation at Zurich.

There is a Portrait-medal of him, which is one of the earlier works of his son.

STAMPFER, HANS JAKOB (Swiss). Goldsmith, Medallist and Coin-engraver, and one of the foremost artists of Switzerland in the sixteenth century. A son of H. U. Stampfer, he was born at Zurich circ. 1505, and died there in 1579 (according to some authorities on the 2nd July).

Self-portrait of Jakob Stampfer.

Jakob Stampfer was initiated at an early age by his father in the art of die-sinking and goldsmith's work. In conformity with the custom of the time, he travelled abroad and visited various towns in the South of Germany. Meier suggests that he may have made a stay at Augsburg and worked under the famous medallist, Friedrich Hagenauer, with whose style and method of treatment, especially in portraiture, his own bears strong similarity. In 1530 the artist returned to his native town, and was received a "Meister" in his profession. It is probable that between 1530 and 1540 he worked in conjunction with his father. In 1535 he married Anna von Schönau ; in 1544 he was appointed "Zwölfer zum Kämbel", 1555 Master of the guild of goldsmiths, 1560 Statthalter and Chief of the Corporations. From 1570 he filled the office of a bailiff at Wädenswil. He left three sons : Hans, Jakob, and Hans Ulrich, the latter of whom also held important civic appointments.

One of the earliest medallic works of the artist is the Portrait-medal of his father Ulrich Stampfer, dated 1531. Then followed other medallic portraits of his famous compatriots, and foremost amongst these, the Reformers Ulrich Zwingli of Zurich, and Joh. Occolampadius of Basle, which were issued as presentation pieces to their friends and admirers. The two portraits occur on some specimens as obv. and R. of the same medal. They date from the period between 1531 and 1540. Two other varieties of Zwingli medals are known. In 1537 he cut the medal of the 60 year old historian Hans Füssli, author of the "Eidgenössische Cronik". Some specimens occur with Füssli's father's portrait on the R., which Dr Lehmann considers as a proof that the Füssli medal was executed by the father's wish. The two Portrait-medals of Simon Grynaeus, rector of the University of Basle, 1541, and Magister Johannes Fries of Greifensee, professor of classical languages, first at Basle and later at Zurich, are both dated 1540. Of Heinrich Bullinger, Stampfer engraved two medals, the one dated 1542, which depicts the Zurich Antistes in full vigour, and the other 1566, which shows him as a 62 year old man. To this gallery of scholars' medals belong also those of Peter Martyr Vermilius, theologian of Zurich, executed in the year of his death 1562, Ambrosius Blarer, the Constance reformer, which bears on the R. an epigram by Rudolf Gwalther, Hans Asper, the Zurich painter. The medal of Colonel Wilhelm Froehlich of Riesbach, near Zurich, who commanded the Swiss in the service of the French King (L. F., Une médaille suisse rare, Geneva, 1504) is given by Erman to Stampfer, from its treatment and style; but this attribution is not absolutely certain. Well-known are Stampfers's medals of Bruder Klaus (Nicholas von der Flüe), which exist in two sizes, and have been duplicated in large numbers, in cast and struck specimens, but the work of which is not equal to some of the artist's best productions. His most famous medallic achievement is the medal commissioned by the Diet of the 13 cantons and allied states as a Presentation piece (Pathenpfennig) to the French King Henry II on the christening of his daughter, the Princess Claudia, 1547. It was presented in 1548. Duplicates in silver were issued later as presents to statesmen and foreign ambassadors. Of very common occurrence are Stampfer's 'Bundesthalers', showing on one side the Oath of the Grutli. This medal, no doubt on account of its subject, became so popular that even to this day imitations are made. Beside these, Stampfer cut dies for a number of religious and allegorical medals (so-called "Pathenpfennige"), which medals it was customary to give as Presentation-medals on certain occasions and events in life, such as on a Birth, Christening, Confirmation, Marriage, Birthday anniversary, or at certain times of the year, New Year's day, Easter, Christmas, etc. Such medals were issued in large quantities in South Germany, especially at Augsburg, Nuremberg, also at Joachimsthal, etc., and not being signed, except in very few instances, it is difficult to determine the work of any particular artist.

Portrait of Jakob Stampfer.
(Jeton of the Swiss Numismatic Society).

Stampfer's reputation as an Engraver of coin-dies is well deserved. His 'Wappenthaler' of 1558 and 1559, Gold Crowns of 1561, dated and undated Thalers, struck between 1550 and 1570, exhibited the skill of an artist. There is no record of the date when Stampfer came into connection with the Zurich mint, which was owned by Gutenson, the engraver of many types of the currency of this period. But we learn that on Gutenson being appointed by Duke Wolfgang of the Palatinate to reinstal in 1565 the old mint of Meisenheim, he entrusted Stampfer with the entire charge of the Zurich mint. It is quite clear however that Stampfer worked for neighbouring mints as well, as for instance, Zoug, St. Gall, Chur, etc., and we find him in 1563 applying to the Zurich Council for a recommendation as Die-cutter to the Archbishop of Salzburg. Bullinger, in a latter to the jurist Wolfgang Weidner in Worms calls him "omnium per Germaniam nobilissimo", an eulogium which is perhaps excessive, although the artist was undoubtedly the first of his time in his own country.

Only two pieces of plate are known so far, which undoubtedly belong to Stampfer; a Goblet, cast in silver, presented by the Canons of Constance Cathedral to Strassburg in 1545 (now preserved in the Hohenlohe Museum), and a double Goblet, in repoussé silver, which is the property of Basle University (on exhibition at the Basle Historical Museum).

Stampfer cut many seals, armorial stamps, etc. On his activity as a seal-engraver cf. Neujahrsbl. zum Besten des Waisenhauses in Zurich, 1896, p. 12.

Stampfer's technique is that of the Augsburg and Nuremberg masters. He worked by the same processes, first preparing his models in honestone or wood, making from these moulds in which the medals were cast.

Asper, painter of Zurich (H. I. 87). This medal has also been given to Lorenz Rosenbaum (p. 214 suprâ); — Johannes Occolampadius (Hausschein or Heussegen), the Basle reformer, 1541 (Hall. I, 251); — Wilhelm Froehlich, colonel of the Swiss in the service of the French King (the attribution to J. Stampfer is not absolutely certain; H. I, p. 120, n° 201; illustrated); — The artist's self-portrait, at the age of 35 (illustrated). The Löbbecke specimen of this medal was purchased by the Swiss National Museum, 1908, for 2700 Marks; — Nicholas von der Flüe (Bruder Klaus), in two sizes; the large medal was probably engraved in commission for the Unterwald government, whereas the smaller one was probably meant for general distribution. Cast specimens are not of uncommon occurrence. Several varieties are known (one illustrated); etc.

Nicholas von der Flüe.

Other Portrait-medals are given to Jakob Stampfer with more or less certainty. Dr Lehmann however does not mention them :

Presentation medal of the Swiss States to Henry II. on the Christening of Princess Claudia, 1547.

Josias Simler, 1567 (1576 ?); — Berthold Haller, the reformer of Berne, 1535 (Sattler I, 1); — Hans Offenpech, of Ratisbon, 1540; — Johannes Frisius (H. I, 118). etc. These medals are all said to bear Stampfer's monogram IS.

The most famous medallic work by the Zurich artist is the large Medallion issued by the Confederate States and Allies for presentation to King Henry II. of France on the occasion of the Christening of his daughter Princess Claudia, 1547 (several varieties exist; Haller I, 30; Wund. Cat. 3501-2; Stroehlin Cat. III, n° 5589-92; one illustrated). These medals are cast and chased; some specimens are enamelled. The best example in the Stroehlin Catalogue realized the sum of 510 francs.

The original specimen of this medal weighed 300 crowns in gold. Two others, each of the weight of 50 crowns, were struck for her sponsors (H. I, p. 20, n° 30). Other specimens cast in silver were issued at a later time as Presentation pieces to Statesmen and Ambassadors of foreign States.

The rare medal commemorating the Independence of the town of St. Gall, 1566, is usually attributed to Stampfer (H. 1849; W. 2689; Stroehlin Sale Cat. III, n° 3047; illustrated).

Medal commemorating the Independence of St. Gall, 1566.

But the medallist's best known medallic work, of which numerous specimens exist and which was largely imitated, is the so-called "Schweizer-bundesthaler", commemorating the foundation of Swiss Independence, 1291, "Anfang des Puntz im Jar Christi 1291", on which are depicted William Tell of Uri, Stauffacher of Schwytz, and Erne of Unterwald (illustrated).

Schweizer Bundesthaler.

Besides these Stampfer engraved a series of medals with religious and allegorical representations, Moralpfennige, etc. which vary very much in artistic merit. Among these : The so-called "Reise-thaler", representing the conversion of Saul of Tarsus on his way to Damascus; many varieties; — Medal with the three cardinal Virtues, Faith, Love and Hope; — The three Holy Kings; — The Annunciation; — Jesus and the Samaritan woman at the well of Sichar; — The Flight to Egypt; — The Fall, etc.

Coins.

Among the best known coins, the dies of which were engraved by Stampfer, I may mention the following :

Zurich. Thaler of 1559, struck in gold (2 var.); — Goldkrone, undated; struck in 1561 and following years (several varieties; cf. Wunderly Catalogue, nos 42-46); — AR. Thaler, undated; struck circ. 1550-1570 (several varieties; cf. Wund. Cat. nos 214-222); — Klippe 1 ½ Thaler 1559 (of great rarity); — Double Thaler 1559;

One of the Engravers, with Lammas, and Harold, of William Wood's Irish and Colonial American issues, circ. 1722-1733 (Nelson, The Coinage of Ireland; and The Coinage of William Wood for the American Colonies, Brit. Num. Journal I, pp. 203, 266). Cf. William Wood infra.

STANGE, GEORG (Germ.). Mint-master at Rostock, appointed on 2. July 1620 and in office until 1623; privy-mark, a crowned heart.

STANGER, ALOIS (Germ.). Medallist and Die-cutter, died at Munich in 1870. Was working at Munich in 1859, later at Dresden, 1864. Some of his productions are described by Kull, München Alterthums-Verein, 1890/91, p. 23, 1897, p. 26.

The only medals by him I have met with are: Jubilee of the Munich Academy of Fine Arts, 1858; — 200th Anniversary of the Gymnasium of Neuburg-on-the-Danube, 1864 (signed: A. STANGER FEC.); — Inauguration of the Ludwig I. Monument at Munich, 1862; — Foundation of the holiday Drawing classes, by H. Mitterer, 1862; — Baron J. von Liebig; — Dr C. F. P. von Martin, Munich, etc.

STANHOPE, EARL (Brit.) Lord Mahon, afterwards third Earl of Stanhope (1786), published in 1775 a tract which he had written two years previously, entitled "Considerations on the means of preventing Fraudulent Practices on the gold coin", 4to; and in 1782, he struck a variety of pieces in illustration of his views upon the means of protecting the coins from forgery, and injury by friction. Hawkins describes seven varieties in Num. Chron., XIII, p. 128; Mr. Montagu owned nine specimens, varied, of the so-called "Pattern Guinea" or "Sovereign", the obv. type of which was made from a puncheon of the Half-Guinea. The principles of Earl Stanhope's remedy are, very low relief, uniform flat surface, deep milling, date incuse, fine wiry lines introduced into part of the work, and the type brought quite close to the edge of the coin. These pieces were not intended as patterns for coins and are not introduced into the regular series. They are dated 1782; the edge is inscribed MDCCLLXXII repeated four times; one variety has MDCCLXXXI followed by MDCCXXXXII repeated three times.

Charles, third Earl Stanhope, 1753-1816, politician and man of science, F.R.S. 1771; constructed two calculating machines, circ. 1777; carried Gold Coin and Banknote Bill 1811, also motions for committees to revise statutes and unify weights and measures; his process of stereotyping acquired by Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1805, also his iron hand-press and logotypes, &c.

STANIER, EDUARD (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; Professor of modelling at the Frankfurt a/M. Kunstgewerbeschule. He is the author of a number of Portrait Medals and Plaquettes. Among these I may mention: Dr Moritz Benedikt, professor at the Vienna University; uniface plaquette; — 70th Anniversary of Dr Josef Gruber, professor at the Vienna University. Both plaquettes are illustrated in Dr Dompierre de Chaufepié's "Médailles et Plaquettes modernes", p. 39, Pl. XXXI, 145-6.

STANLEY, SIR THOMAS (Brit.). By a proclamation of the 20th August, 1553, and an indenture of the same date made with Thomas Egerton, Thomas Stanley, and others, it was ordered that the gold coins to be henceforth made were to be the Sovereign, which was to be current for 30*s.*; the Half-sovereign, to be called the Royal of gold, and to be current for 15*s.*; the Angel at 10*s.*; and the Half-angel at Angelets, of the fineness of twenty-three carats ten grains and a half fine gold and one grain and a half alloy, as the record has it, instead of three grains and a half fine and half a grain alloy, which bear the same proportion, and shew evidently the mistake, and of crown gold, twenty-two carats fine, Sovereigns at twenty shillings, thirthy-three to the pound; Half-sovereigns, Crowns, and Half-crowns. Remedy, as well for fine as crown gold, two grains; coinage four shillings. And of silver (eleven ounces fine and one ounce alloy). Shillings, sixty to the pound; Half-shillings, Groats, Half-groats, and Pence. Remedy, two penny weights; coinage to the queen eighteen-pence per pound weight ".

1551 he was comptroller. Ruding in his list of Mint-masters mentions Sir Thomas Stanley as in office, with others, from the second year of Elizabeth to her fourteenth year, and again in the fifteenth. By a commission, dated 31st. December, first year of Elizabeth, Sir Edmund Peckham Knt. (q. v. Vol. IV, p. 442), high treasurer of the mint, Thomas Stanley, comptroller, and others, were authorised " to make sovereigns at thirty-shillings, twenty-four to the pound weight; angels at ten shillings, seventy-two to the pound; and Sovereign of Elizabeth, m. m. lis.

Ruding gives further the following interesting note : " It appears that, during the last reign, money for the use of Philip's foreign dominions had been coined in the Tower of London. The implements which were made use of for that purpose were, upon the late queen's decease, detained by the officers of the mint, who supposed them to belong to their office; but they were afterwards restored, upon a certificate from Mr. Stanley, the comptroller ".

On the 17th of February 1558-9, a commission was granted also to " Sir Edmund Peckham, knight, high treasurer of the mints, Thomas Stanley, comptroller-within the Tower of London, and others, to coin twelve thousand pounds of the base English money into twenty-four thousand pounds Irish.

On the 1st May 1559, a similar commission was issued authorizing the officers of the mint to alter the base monies then current, into harpe shillings and groats, to be defraied about the queen's affairs in Ireland. Four thousand pounds of such money to be coined into eight thousand pounds Irish.

Commissioners were appointed on the 12th of January 1572-3 to receive an account from Mr. Thomas Stanley, then master of the mint, no such account having been given in by the master of the mint from the time of Edward VI., and during the reign of Mary, until the 15th year of Elizabeth.

STANTON, JOHN (Amer.). Die-sinker and Engraver of Cincinnati, born in Orange County, New York, on March 9, 1829; still living (1911). He made during the war of the rebellion, 1861-5, more " Copper heads ", " War Tokens ", ' Store Cards ' and other metal tokens and checks which passed current as money for the value of " one cent ", and for higher values in exchange for merchandise, milk, bread, coal, drayage, &c., than any other die-sinker or engraver in the United States. He issued the first of these War Tokens with the Liberty head and date underneath, in 1862, and continued making them in 1863 and 1864 until the close of the war, at about which time the United States Government issued fractional currency, and this put an end to the manufacture of these little metal coins or 'necessity money', which were issued by many merchants throughout the United States.

It was early in the war of the rebellion when Mr Stanton conceived the idea of making these War Tokens, which passed for one cent. While at Lafayette, Ind., he saw for the first time one of the patriotic war tokens of the size of a small cent, which gave him the idea that these things might do as business cards, and at the same time be issued for the value of one cent. He came back to Cincinnati and proposed the same to a number of Cincinnati merchants, and secured orders for very large quantities. He made these tokens for several hundred firms in Cincinnati, and at this time does not recollect how many firms he supplied, but from the number that are known of by collectors they run into the hundreds. Mr. Stanton says that prior to this time, or just at the beginning of the war, when small silver money, and bronze, copper and nickel currency became scarce, the merchants of Cincinnati issued what were known as paper checks or ' Cards of Value ", which were about one and one-half inches by three inches, with the names of firms on them, good for so many cents and redeemable by the parties who issued them.

These little copper War Tokens, Copper Heads, or Store Cards passed readily as money in value of one cent from hand to hand, and no questions were ever asked in respect to them. They were quite convenient for making change, and no one questioned that the firms or individuals who issued them would redeem them promptly, which of course, was done, excepting where they gathered up by collectors and are still held by them.

Mr. Stanton also made quite a number of Sutlers' Checks for almost all of the Western regiments that went into the war. He also made, about 1861, the well-known " Wealth of the South " series, of which he sold a great many, not only in the North, but in the South, and they were used as tokens and also as badges at the time they were made. He issued a circular describing them and sent the same to all the papers throughout the South at the beginning of the war. They advertised them extensively and large numbers of them were sold by him. There was considerable Confederate sentiment in and about Cincinnati, where large quantities were disposed of, and they were worn as badges by Southern sympathisers.

Robert Wright, the dry-goods merchant of Cincinnati, whose name is well-known in connection with war tokens, ordered from him about 10,000 tokens a week during the time that he made them, and he made for this one merchant alone over one million pieces, which, at the current value, would amount to over $10.000. More than 800 firms issued such metal tokens during these years, and if he made for each one of them one-half of this amount, it would appear that there were about $1.200.000 of these little coins, which he made for Cincinnati merchants, that passed as money during these two years alone. He also made a large number of them for Cleveland and other places in Ohio, and for about 1000 firms in Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. Stanton came to Cincinnati in 1851 and went into business in 1852. He first worked for Ira Bisbee, a steel letter and stencil cutter, who flourished in Cincinnati prior to 1853. After he had been with him for about a year Mr. Bisbee retired from business, and Mr. Stanton took it up and picked up the trade of die-sinker and engraver, continuing in it until the present time, excepting at intervals. Mr. James Murdoch Jnr ", bought him out in 1866 and continued the business for some time, then forming the firm of Murdoch and Spencer, which continued for five years.

Mr. Stanton states that Messrs Lamphear, Hughes, Spencer, Wright, with others and himself, made most of the tokens used in Cincinnati as money during the war. He says that at the time he commenced making these little coins in 1861 and 1862 copper was 39 cents per pound. It went up to 80 cents per pound two years afterwards, after which it was so high that he could not make the tokens and sell them at the price of one cent in order to make any profit on them.

STAPLEY, ABRAHAM (Brit.). A Forger of the Commonwealth period, apprehended in October 1655, as a false coiner of money. "In his house at Deptford were found several false coining irons for half-crowns, and false half-crowns coined with the date 1655. And this is to give notice to all persons whatsoever, that shall receive any of the said money of Stapley's, dated 1655: there being none of that date in his highness' mint coined to this day, the 26th of October." Public Intelligencer, October 22-29, 1655.

STAPPEN, PIERRE CHARLES VAN DER (Belg.). Director of the Belgian Royal Academy of Fine Arts (since 1898), born at Saint-Josse-lez-Noode on 19. December 1843, died on 21. October 1910 at Brussels. A pupil of Portaels. He leaves a considerable number of varied works which are impressed with a characteristic personal feeling. None, amongst Belgian sculptors, had such a decorative instinct. He contributed largely to the ornamentation of numerous public monuments at Brussels. He also laid out the plan for the decoration of the Brussels Zoological Garden, in which he gave a large share to the great sculptors of his country, and especially to Constantin Meunier.

In his style, he clung to the school of the Italian Renaissance. Among his chief productions in statuary, I may mention his Sphinx du mystère (Tervueren Museum); Jeune homme à l'épée (Brussels Museum); David (Antwerp Museum); the group "Le Temps poussant devant lui la jeunesse"; numerous busts of contemporaries and compatriots, among which that of Edmond Picard.

Amongst his best known medallic productions are: Plaquette on the Marriage of Prince Albert of Belgium with Princess Elizabeth, Duchess of Bavaria, 1900 (commissioned by the Société hollandaise-belge des amis de la médaille); — Medal of the Brussels International Exhibition, 1897, with bust of Leopold II. (2 var.); — Presentation-medal to M. Charles Buls, burgomaster of Brussels, 1901; — Centenary of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts of Brussels, 1800-1900, etc.

"C'est Van der Stappen", says M. de Witte (La Médaille en Belgique, 1905) "qui fut l'éducateur de la plupart de nos sculpteurs-médailleurs contemporains, bien qu'il ne se soit essayé à la médaille qu'à d'assez rares occasions. Charles Van der Stappen n'a nul dogmatisme: il apprend à aimer les formes; il en révèle la force; c'est un éveilleur de beauté. On ne l'imite point: on l'écoute. Lui-même excelle à comprendre. Et l'art belge lui doit beaucoup."

STARCK, CONSTANTIN (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; born at Riga on 2nd March 1866; pupil of R. Begas, Schaper, and A. Wolff; Professor at the Berlin Academy of Fine Arts; residing at Wilmersdorf, near Berlin.

At the Salon de la médaille held at Brussels in connection with the Universal Exhibition, 1910, this artist exhibited the following works: Jubilee of the city of Riga, 1901; — Prize-medal of the Berlin Academy of sciences, with portrait of Leibnitz; — Prize-medal of the Grand Duchy of Hesse, with bust of the Grand Duke Ernst Ludwig; — Prize-medal of the Jubilee Exhibition of the Anglers' Club of the province of Brandenburg, 1908; — XIV. International Congress of Hygiene and Demography at Berlin, 1907; — Nurses' Association of Berlin; — The new Century, 1900; — Prize-medal for Arboriculture; — Prize-medal for Floriculture; — Necklace composed of seven small allegorical plaquettes representing the Arts; — Duke Johann Albrecht; — Jubilee medal of the University of Halle.

Several of these medals were also exhibited at the New-York International Medallic Exhibition, March 1910, and a few others besides: Christening Medal; — Empress Frederick of Germany; — Count Waldersee; — Pallas Athene; — Ten silver brooches, representing: Painting, Sculpture, Modelling, Architecture, Decorative Arts, Poetry, Music, Hebe, Bacchus, Mercury, Fame, etc.; also a Necklace, etc.

By him is also a Portrait-medal of Bismarck, 1895 (Bennert, Bismarck Medaillen, Pl. 7, n° 161).

The Studio (XLII, 75) has reproduced two of his works: XX. Century; and Baptismal Medal.

Prof. Starck is very fine in his modelling and expressive; he gives his best in classical types.

STARCKH, DONATVS (Austr.). Seal-engraver and Die-cutter at the Mint of Prague from 1626 to 1635. In 1626 he cut dies for the coinage, again in 1627, 1629 and 1630. In 1629 he engraved the large broad Coronation medals of Ferdinand III., R. Arms in laurel-wreath, which bear his signature D. S. (Cat. Donebauer, n° 2353). Specimens occur in gold, of the weight of 100 Ducats, and in silver. Varieties of smaller sizes, 40, 26.5, 21 and 18 mill. were also issued as Presentation pieces and Jetons.

Starckh's productions were formerly confused with those of Sebastian Dadler, although they shew totally different work, and that the Saxon engraver always signed S. D. and not D. S.

A document of 1627 is signed Donatus Starckh Sigill und Muntz Eizenschneider.

STARKE, BARTHEL (Germ.). Coiner at Breslau, 1656.

STARLINSKI, E. (Pol.). Mint-engraver at Krakau, 1869. His name occurs also as Skarlinski.

STATTLER, HANS JAKOB (Austr.). Warden of the Imperial Mint at Vienna, circ. 1696.

STAUB, JOHANN M. (Germ.). Mint-master at Tettnang, in the service of the Counts of Montfort, 1760 (Binder 391. Lori III 431).

STAUDE, G. F. (Germ.). Mint-master at Gotha, 1677-1680. He signed coins with his initials G. S. or G. F. S.

STAUDE, JOHANN CHRISTOPH (Germ.). Mint-master at Weimar, 1684-1687 and later at Erfurt, 1690-1691. His initials I. C. S. occur on the currency for which he was responsible.

STAUDICEL, F. (Germ.). Medallist of the third quarter of the nineteenth century.

By him are the following medals: Medal of the Berlin 'Schützengilde', 1858, with busts of the Crown Prince and Princess of Prussia; — Birth of William (II), 1859 (Weber, Medals of the XIX. Cent. 209a, 209aa, 258); — Schiller (3 var.; two of which are in the Boston Medical Library); — Coronation medal of William I, and Augusta of Prussia, 1861; — Golden Wedding of Wilhelm Stattler and Catherine née Geiger, 1859, etc.

STAUDINGER, LUISE (now FRAU FEDERN) (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Grünewald, near Berlin. At the Berlin Kunst Ausstellung 1907 she has exhibited the following medallic productions:

Heinrich Heine, plaquette (edited by Ad. E. Cahn, Frankfurt a/M.; illustrated); — E. Wenck; — Lady's Portrait; — Portrait of a young Girl; — Man reading, etc. At the Brussels International Salon de la Médaille contemporaine, held in connection with the Universal Exhibition 1910, she exhibited further: Portrait of a young Girl; — Portrait of a young Woman; — Young Woman seated, nude; — Portrait of a Child; — Children's Games, hexagonal medal; — Fräulein Helen Lange; — Young Girl sowing; — Immanuel Kant, 1907 (publ. by Carl Poellath), etc. These are cast uniface Plaquettes.

STAUDNER, PETER (Germ.). A native of Schneeberg, Mint-master at Würzburg, 1508.

STEINCHEN (also STEIN), HEINRICH (Germ.). Mint-master at Leipzig, 1495.

STEINBÖCK, OSWALD G. (Austr.). Medallist of the nineteenth century, whose period of activity is comprised between about 1830 and 1871, the year in which it is surmised he died. Very little is known of him, except that in the year 1843 he applied for a post of Engraver at the Mint of Vienna, and that he was employed also in official work.

Amongst his works I may mention : Foundation of the Institute of Sisters of mercy at Vienna, 1831 (with bust of the dowager Empress Carolina Augusta); signed : O. STEINBOCK INV. ET FECIT; two types ; — Medal on the Exhibition of Raffaelli's reproduction in mosaic of Leonardo da Vinci's 'Last Supper', 1847; — Prize Medal for distinction in silversmith and jeweller's work, 1852; — Centenary of Mozart at Salzburg, 1856; — Inauguration of the Archduke Charles Monument at Vienna (1860), undated; — Prize Medal of the Vienna Chamber of Commerce and Industry for successful pupils of the Industrial Schools, 1866; — Inauguration of the "Künstlerhaus" at Vienna, founded in 1863; — Sigmund Thalberg, composer and pianist († 1871); — Jos. Haydn, undated. (Steinböck's best known production); — Inauguration of the Gaisberg railway line; — Alb. Dürer, medallion, etc.

This engraver's usual signature is O. STEINBÖCK F.

INDO-PORTUGUESE COINS.

THE ISSUES OF THE DIU MINT.

The desire to find a direct sea-route to India led to all those great maritime discoveries which stamp the closing years of the fifteenth century as one of the greatest epochs in the world's history. Almost simultaneously with the discovery of America by the Spaniards, the Portuguese, after cautiously feeling their way, for some years, down the West coast of Africa, succeeded in rounding the Southern extremity of that continent and so re-discovered the sea-route to Asia — a route which had been well-known to the Carthaginians and to the Egyptians as long ago as B.C. 600 (Herodotus-Melpomene, IV, 42, 43, 44). This discovery opened up a New World for them. But to take possession was not the easy task that fell to the lot of the Spaniards in the New World of the West. Instead of having to subdue comparatively helpless nations, poorly armed and unacquainted even with the use of metals except in the way of ornament, — they were brought into conflict with peoples well equipped with ships, cannon and arms of all kinds, skilled in commerce and accustomed to the use of money as a medium of exchange. But that was the heroic age of Portugal and the enterprise, skill and audacity of her daring adventurers overcame all obstacles, and early in the sixteenth century they had established themselves along the East Coast of Africa, the Coast of Arabia and at various important posts in India and the further East. For the Portuguese, unlike the other European nations who, later, followed their footsteps in Asia, from the first, were not content to open mere trading depots or factories and to ask the permission of native rulers to issue Coins. They conquered places where they wished to trade, regulated the circulation of native coins there and opened Mints for the issue of their own special coins when and where required.

Mints were thus opened at Goa in 1510, at Malacca in 1511, at Cochim in 1544 and again in 1568, in Ceylon early in the seventeenth century, at Bassein and at Damão in 1611 and at Chaul about 1644. But Diu — the important Northern island stronghold in the Bay of Cambay — which had been occupied by the Portuguese as early as 1535, was left without a Mint of its own until the end of the seventeenth century. The monetary needs of Diu and its territory were met by supplies of the issues of the Goa Mint, by certain pieces of the regal issue for Portugal and by sundry coins of adjoining native and foreign countries — including coins of Persia and the gold sequin of Venice.

The Governor and principal merchants of Diu repeatedly petitioned the Central Authority at Goa for permission to open a Mint but without success until 1684 when, at last, grudging leave was granted but for one year only and for the issue of gold and silver Xerafins. Once opened, however, the Mint remained open and its later issues included coins of copper and also of tutenag. The tutenag pieces were of an amalgam of copper, zinc, nickel and iron or of pewter and tin; see Dr. Da Cunha's " Contributions to the Study of Indo-Portuguese Numismatics ", Bombay 1883, Folios 26 and 84.

All the issues of the Diu Mint are rude and incorrect in design and of rough execution. The issues too were irregular and intermittent and made, frequently, at long intervals. They ceased altogether in 1859 and the Mint was then finally closed.

The first coins issued were without a Mint mark of any kind but later issues had the Mint marks — D O, D Ɗ, O O. and some had the name in full, thus : DIO.

Unfortunately, official documents and correspondence relating to the operations of the Diu Mint are hardly known. The third volume of Dr. A. C. Teixeira de Aragão's " Moedas cunhadas em nome dos Reis, Regentes e Governadores de Portugal ", published in Lisbon in 1880, contains copies of about 140 official documents referring to Mint matters and to Coins of the Portuguese in India. Among them, however, are only two or three relating to the Diu Mint and its issues. One of these (Document 105) is the letter of the Goa authorities, dated October 24th. 1684, sanctioning the opening of a Mint at Diu.

Acting on the authority, thus received from Goa, a Mint was opened at Diu and, in 1685/86, three silver pieces were issued, viz :

A Xerafim dobrado (double Xerafim)	21.57 grammes.
A Xerafim	11. »
and A Meio (half) Xerafim	5.65 »

of a very rude type. The obverse is a barbaric representation of the crowned arms of Portugal — with three dots in place of the quinas (the central shield containing 5 shields) and a chain of dots in place of the seven castles in the outer shield — and, on the reverse, is a Cross of St. George with five nail-like ornaments at the end of each arm of the Cross. These pieces were without Mint mark or date. The Xerafim dobrado is in the National Library at Lisbon. — The Xerafim and Half Xerafim are here illustrated :

The Meio or Half Xerafim was in the collection of the late Mr. de Campos, No. 544 and another specimen (above illustrated) is in the British Museum. No piece of this type of a denomina, tional value lower than the half Xerafim was issued. No silver Tanga of the Diu Mint is known to exist and, in all probability none was ever issued. The piece referred to, as a Tanga of this type, by Mr. de Campos in his " Numismatica Indo-Portuguesa ", Lisbon, 1901, Folio 346, is now in the possession of the writer of this article. It is a half Xerafim or quarter Rupia, of the type issued in the reign of D. Joao V and is No. 8 of the following illustrations. The treatment of the Portuguese arms differentiates it from the pieces of the first issue of the reign of D. Pedro II (1667-1706). It also displays one figure of a date (7) whereas the pieces of the earlier issue are undated. Besides, it weighs 2.9 grammes and, to belong to the issue under consideration, should not weigh more than 2.2 grammes as the Xerafim of that issue, as is seen above, weighs only 11 grammes and was equal to five tangas. Weight is a most important factor in determining the denominational value of the early coins of the Indo-Portuguese series as very few of those pieces bear their value on their face.

The coins of the first issue of the Diu Mint did not correspond with the contemporary Goa pieces either in design or weight. A letter was, consequently, sent from Goa, March 17th. 1688 (Aragão-Document 109) to the Governor of Diu calling attention to these discrepancies and commanding that the Diu coinage should conform to that of Goa. The contemporary Goa pieces displayed, on the reverse, the Cross of the Order of Christ with the figures of the date in the angles of the Cross and, on the obverse, the crowned Portuguese Arms (correct) between the initial and last letter of the name of the Mint of origin. The Goa pieces were also slightly lighter in weight.

In 1688, therefore, when the Diu Mint brought out its new series of Coins, the Cross of St. George, which had appeared on the coins of the first issue, was discarded and the pieces were dated and bore a Mint mark D O.

The issue consisted of: 1° a Xerafim dobrado or double Xerafim.

Obv. Crowned arms (regular) of Portugal with D to the right of the shield; the letter, which should be on the left of the shield, is not visible as the piece was badly struck.

Rev. Cross of the Order of Christ with the date 1688 in the angles of the Cross.

Size: 28 mm. Weight: 21.3 grammes.

and 2° a Xerafim of similar design and also dated 1688.

Size: 23 mm. Weight: 10.5 grammes.

No piece of the Diu Mint, of this design, smaller than the Xerafim has yet come to light and, in all probability, the issue was confined to the Double Xerafim and Xerafim in conformity with the regulation of October 24th. 1684 (Document 105) which only allowed of Xerafins being struck.

The Xerafim of this type was issued by the Diu Mint up to the year of the death of D. Pedro II (1706) — but whether it was issued in each year is still uncertain. The writer has specimens dated 1688, 1691, 1699, and 1706 and other pieces, dated 1692, 1693, 1694 and 1696, are known to exist.

The Xerafim dobrado or double Xerafim, apparently, was only issued in 1688. A similar piece, weighing 20.58 grammes, had been issued by the Goa Mint, in 1685, in conformity with the order of the Viceroy and the officials of that Mint, dated March 8th. 1685 (Aragão, Document 106). These two pieces and the one, of the Cross of St. George type, before mentioned, are the only silver pieces, of the 17th. Century, known as Double Xerafins. Similar large pieces had been issued in earlier reigns but they were known as Patacões, Bastiões, Silver San Thomés, &c. (Aragão-Folios 219, 155, 143). All were issued to compete with the Spanish Duro or piece of 8 reals which, however, weighed 26/27 grammes and continued to retain its hold on the natives in spite of all efforts to displace it.

In 1706 D. João V succeeded to the throne of Portugal and, during the first few years of his reign, the Diu Mint continued to issue the Xerafins of the Cross of the Order of Christ type — but not pieces of any other denomination except the gold S. Thome's of 5 and 2 ½ Xerafins respectively. The writer's collection contains Xerafins dated 1710, 1711 and 1713 weighing, respectively, 10.4, 10.6, & 10.65 grammes.

Whether the Diu Mint issued any Xerafim of this type after 1713 is uncertain but, a few years later, a radical change was made in the standard of money by the central authorities at Goa and the operations of the Diu Mint were tempoarily suspended.

About 1725 the Goa authorities decreed that the silver Xerafim, which had been the standard of money in the Indo-Portuguese possessions and which was of the value of 300 reis and which weighed, on the average, about 10.5 grammes, should still be worth 300 reis but should only be of little more than half the original weight and, consequently, value. The old half Xerafim and Tanga were also proportionately reduced in weight but with their value in reis still retained. A new coin — a Rupia — was issued weighing only about 10 °/₀ more than the old Xerafim but having a value equal to 600 reis or to two of the new Xerafins. Thus the Rupia was a Xerafim dobrado or double Xerafim but it weighed only 11.5 grammes whereas the double Xerafim of the seventeenth century, as is seen above, weighs 21.5 grammes and is, therefore, practically a double Rupia.

Aragão (Fo. 264.), J. M. do Carmo Nazareth (Numismatica do India Portugueza, published in Nova Goa 1896 — Fo. 111 Note a) and Dr G. da Cunha (Contributions to Study of Indo-Portuguese Numismatics Folio 74), through not having seen a Xerafim dobrado of the seventeenth century, make an almost inexplicable error concerning it. Though aware of the reference to such a coin in Document 106, of March 1685, they all state that it became the Rupia ot the eighteenth century whereas it is equal to nearly two Rupias. Possessed with this idea J. M. do Carmo Nazareth catalogues his Xerafins of 1668 and 1700 Nos. 296 & 301 and his half Xerafins of 1670 & 1690. Nos. 297 & 300 as Double Xerafins and Xerafins, while giving, at the same time, their weights, as 10.45 and 4.85 grammes, respectively.

The late Mr. de Campos wrote a very interesting article on the Xerafim dobrado (O Archeologo Português, Vol. X January 1905) and refers to the error committed by Aragão.

When the Diu Mint, in 1729, resumed its issue of silver pieces it brought out, in that year, a Rupia and a Half Rupia or Xerafim or Pardao — for the terms were then synonymous — of a new type. The Cross of the Order of Christ was discarded and the Cross of St. Thomas took its place but with the figures of date still in the angles of the Cross. On the obverse the Crowned Arms of Portugal between the Mint marks D O, were again rendered in a crude and incorrect way. This issue is, however, noteworthy as it introduced the Cross of St. Thomas on the Indo-Portuguese coinage for the first time in the history of the series. The following illustration: — shews the Rupia of 1729 which weighs 11.9 grammes. The tail of the 9, in thff date, is hardly visible as the piece is badly struck. The Xerafim or Half Rupia weighs 5.7 grammes and is in the collection of Mr. J. M. do Carmo Nazareth who also possesses Rupias of the same type dated 1731 and 1736 (Nos. 624 & 625). Aragao also illustrates a Rupia of this type with a varied treatment of the Portuguese arms (Plate 3 : No. 18) dated 1738.

In 1741 the Diu Mint again changed the type of its silver issue — rejecting the Cross of St. Thomas and replacing it with the Cross of St. George, as on the pieces of the first issue of the Mint but, this time, with the date in the angles of the Cross. The rendering of the crowned Portuguese Arms is still crude and incorrect and the seven castles in the outer shield are depicted as seven groups of four dots — 3 small with one large one under — in each group. This rendering of the castles is striking and different to any found on any other issue of the series. The Diu Mint-marks were again omitted.

The following illustrations :

are of a Rupia and a quarter Rupia of this series. The writer possesses Rupias dated 1741, 1744, 1749 and 1750 weighing, respectively, 11.8, 11.7, 10.65 and 11.7 grammes. Probably pieces of other dates exist. The quarter Rupia shews only one figure 7 of the date. It weighs 2.9 grammes and is the piece referred to in the earlier part of this article as having been mistaken by Dr. Meili and Mr. de Campos for a Tanga of the first issue of the Diu Mint. A Xerafim or half Rupia of this type has not yet been discovered. No doubt it was issued and, together with the Quarter Rupia, in various years. Number 6, Plate 2, in Aragão's work, must be a fancy illustration as the obverse is similar to that of the above issue while the reverse shews the Cross undated and similar to that of the first issue of the Diu Mint. No weight is given and it is called a Tanga. The piece is probably a quarter Rupia of the above issue of D. João V and, in the angles of the Cross, on the reverse, the figures of the date should have been drawn instead of mere lines bent to form angles.

In the year 1750 D. João V died and was succeeded by D. José I. The Diu Mint now suspended its coinage of silver pieces for some years and confined itself to the issue of gold St. Thomés of 10 and 5 Xerafins, in 1755 and 1757.

In 1765 the Mint resumed its issue of silver coins, altering the design again, retaining the ornamented Cross of St. George with the date in the angles of the Cross but reverting to the barbaric rendering of the Crowned Arms of Portugal as on the pieces first issued by the Diu Mint and also without Mint marks. Rupias and Half Rupias were issued — the former weighing 11.9 grammes and the latter 5.87 grammes. The writer has Rupias of 1765, 1766 and 1771, and a Half Rupia of 176. — The following illustrations : — are of a Rupia and the Half Rupia of this type. The figure 1 of the date is seen to be made thus 1 and this no doubt accounts for Mr. de Campos (Fo : 75) thinking that the pieces were also issued in 1774 and 1777. Specimens exist which appear to exhibit those dates but the final 4 and the final 7 are probably only the 1 worn or badly struck. The above is the only type of Diu silver issued in the reign of D. José I.

The next issue, consisting of a Rupia only, was made in 1781.

Obv. The jugate busts of D. Pedro III and Maria I having D I O behind, Rupia in front, and 1781 in the exergue.

Rev. The Portuguese Arms in a rococco shield of the Louis XV period.

Weight 10.65 grammes.

This is the only coin of the Diu series with a bust of any kind displayed thereon.

The Goa Mint did not adopt the jugate bust type till the following year (1782) and J. M. do Carmo Nazareth, Fo : 29, mentions how it happened that the Diu Mint had the type first. In 1781 a ship reached Diu and brought with it some of the recent coins of Portugal of that type so the Mint adopted the design for the Rupia which is was then about to issue. The Goa Mint authorities were not aware of the existence of the type till after they had issued a series in that year with the bust of Maria I alone. Hence too the Goa pieces of 1782 are found both with the single bust and with the jugate busts.

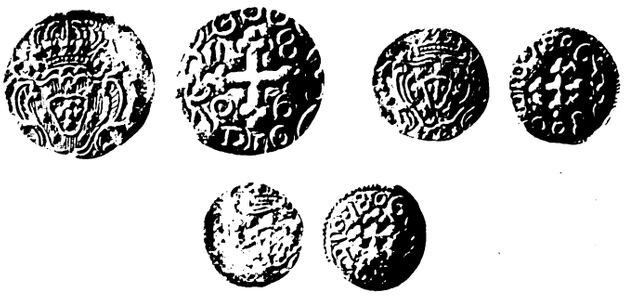
The Rupia of 1781 issued by the Diu Mint is very light in weight ; quite 10 °/₀ lighter than the Rupias of the two preceding reigns. The Goa Rupia, contemporary with this and the later Diu issues, weighed 10.8 grammes. This depreciation in weight and consequent value is even more marked in the next issue of silver which took place a quarter of a century later.

That issue, made in 1806, consists of a Rupia, a Half Rupia and a Quarter Rupia weighing, respectively, only 7.5, 3.7 and 1.85 grammes. These pieces have, on the reverse, the Cross of St. Thomas with the date, the value 600, 300 or 150 reis and DIO and, on the obverse, the ornamented Louis XV shield. On the Rupia the date is in the angles of the Cross but on the other values it is in the margin.



An interval of 35 years took place before the Diu Mint again made a silver issue — not till 1841, when D. Maria II was on the throne of Portugal. The issue consisted only of Rupias of similar design and weight to those struck in 1806.

The next and last issue of silver coins by the Diu Mint was that made in the reign of D. Pedro V, in the year 1859, consisting of a half Rupia weighing 3.89 grammes and a quarter Rupia weighing 1.85 grammes with plain crowned shield on the obverse illustrated below :

This was the last issue, in any metal, of the Diu Mint and the Mint itself was finally closed in the same year.

Before a Mint was opened at Diu it has been suggested that the Goa Mint, besides sending to Diu supplies of the Goa coins, also, occasionally, struck special coins for Diu.

In the reign of D. João IV (1640-1656) two series of silver coins were issued each with Mint marks Ⓐ-D, with the crowned Portuguese arms between, on the obverse. One series consists of a Double Tanga only and has, on the reverse, a standing figure of St. John and the date; and the other, consisting of Xerafim, Half Xerafim and Tanga, has the Cross of the Order of Christ on the reverse with the date in the angles of the Cross. Both these series have been mentioned as having been specially issued by the Goa Mint for Diu. The dates, on the known Double Tangas of the Saint Type, are 1654 (British Museum), 1655 (Ramos collection) and 1656 (the writer's collection) and they each weigh 4.20 grammes. Two specimens of the Double Tanga are illustrated as the coins were badly struck and one piece alone does not shew the various details of the type. The known dates on the pieces of the Cross of the Order of Christ type are 1653, 1656 and 1657 for the Xerafim, 1654 for the half Xerafim and 1653 and 1655 for the Tanga. The Xerafim weighs 10.4 grammes, the half Xerafim 5 grammes and the Tanga 2 grammes.

It is not at all probable that two series of coins, of such different types, should have been issued in the same years for any one place. They must have been issued for two different places — each with a name beginning with D. The only Indo-Portuguese possessions with names beginning with the letter D are Diu and Damão. The Monogram ₳ stands for " The Tanga " in the generic sense of money : — The Tanga (or money) of D. In the absence of any document bearing on the subject, however, it is impossible to decide for which place each series was issued — but, no doubt, one of the series was issued for Diu.

The gold issues are of two types only. When the Diu Mint, in 1684, was authorised to issue gold, as well as silver, pieces, it struck gold S. Thomés of 5 and 2½ Xerafins, the former weighing 2.90 grammes and the latter 1.45 grammes, similar to the contemporary gold S. Thomés of Goa.

Obv. Crowned Arms of Portugal (without the quinas and castles) between the Mint letters D O.

Rev. The standing figure of S. Thomas and the date.

The following is an illustration of the S. Thomé of 5 Xerafins of 1719 in order to show the type.

Mr. J. A, d'Azevedo Borralho, of Lisbon, possesses pieces of 5 Xerafins of this type dated 1717, 1721, 1722, 1723, 1724, 1726 and 1728, and pieces of 2 ½ Xerafins dated 1717, 1720, 1721 and 1726.

The second type of the gold pieces of the Diu Mint was not issued till 1755. This time it consisted of S. Thomés of 10 and 5 Xerafins, the former weighing 5.68 grammes and the latter 2.84 grammes. On the reverse the figure of St. Thomas was replaced by the Cross of St. Thomas with the date divided by the lower arm of the Cross and, on the obverse, the crowned Portuguese Arms, rendered in a very crude and incorrect style. The following is an illustration of the S. Thomé of 10 Xerafins :

These pieces were only issued in 1755 and 1757 and are the last gold issues of the Diu Mint.

San Thomé was the generic name of the Indo-Portuguese gold pieces and such pieces were not called half, quarter, &c. S. Thomés but S. Thomés of 12, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2 or 1 Xerafins.

The Copper issues consist of the Atiá (15 reis), half Atiá and quarter Atiá ; and the Tutenag pieces of 20 (equal to 1 Atiá), 10 and 5 bazarucos, respectively. The copper pieces were issued, on and off, from the beginning of the eighteenth century until 1851, when the last coins in that metal were struck ; and the tutenag bazarucos, also intermittingly, from about 1745 until 1828. All have a very crude and incorrect representation of the crowned Arms of Portugal between the letters D O, D ꓤ, or O O, on the obverse, and, on the reverse, the Cross of the Order of Christ with the figures of the date in the angles of the Cross. Although these copper and tutenag issues are of one type only they comprise many varieties in that type and are too numerous to be considered, in further detail, in the space of this article. Most of the varieties are fully described by the late Mr. de Campos and illustrated by the late Dr. T. de Aragão in their excellent works referred to in the course of this article.

The following are illustrations of a copper Atiá of 1799 and of a 20 bazaruco piece of 1828.

Many of the issues of the Portuguese for their Indian possessions are incorrect and fantastic in design but none are so consistently fantastic and incorrect as the issues of the Diu Mint.

Helmet Plate, a star, in the centre the Arms of Westminster within a garter inscribed WESTMINSTER VOLUNTEER CAVALRY, above, a crown, below NON NOBIS SED PATRIÆ.

IV.

London and Westminster Light Horse Volunteers.

This distinguished Corps was formed so long ago as the year 1779, when the French Fleet was off the coast. They did duty and rendered essential service during the Riots, in the memorable year 1780, for which they were rewarded by Commissions from His Majesty, and a Royal Standard; also, by the Lord Mayor and Alderman, with the City Standard. These they deposited in the Tower of London at the Peace, 1783 and resumed them again in the beginning of the year 1794.

They consisted — 1799 — of nine troops of sixty-five gentlemen each, exclusive of Officers; but the Seventh, Eight and Ninth troops were dismounted and acted as Riflemen, carrying a rifle-barrelled gun of a new construction, which would do execution at a great distance; and their broad swords were so contrived as to serve occasionally as bayonets. Cars or Expedition carriages were always kept ready to convey them at the same pace as the Cavalry would march.

The Corps could only be called out in case of invasion or insurrection to do duty in the Metropolis, or within the distance of ten miles. When not on actual service they were regulated by a Committee of their choosing and this Committee elected all new members by ballot, but they could not join until approved by the King.

Officers.

Colonel, Herries.
Lieutenant Colonels, Beachcroft; Bosanquet.
Majors, Hoare; Stacy.
Adjutant, Lieutenant Gordon.
Captains, Colling; Dunlop; Dorrien; Bird; Harris; Harrison; Parish; Vansittart and Moore.

REVIEWS.

Modern Chinese Copper Coins. By H. A. Ramsden, F.R.N.S. 8°, 27 pp., with many illustrations in the text. Yokohama, 1911.

This valuable monograph, which is reprinted from the Numismatist, won the first prize in the W. F. Dunham competition in New York last year.

For twenty-five centuries China issued the cast brass cash, replaced about twenty years ago by stamped copper, but within recent years a new coinage has been adopted on similar lines to those of modern civilized countries. The introduction of the new coinage dates from about 1899, but the earliest date occurring on the coins corresponds to the year 1902, on the Tai Ching Ti Kuo series.

Mr. Ramsden has given a full description of all the types of modern Chinese copper currency, comprizing the Tai Ching Ti Kuo series, and the Regular Provincial series, the latter bearing the names of An Hwei, Che Chiang, Foo Kion, F. K. Custom House, Fung Tien, Ho Nan, Hu Nan, Hu Pch, Ho Poo, Kiang See, Kiang Nan, Kiang Soo, Kirin, Kwang Tung, Pei Yang, Shang Tung, Tsin Kiang, and miscellaneous.

The denominations include 20, 10, 5 and 1 cash, but the different mints did not all issue the four values.

Well-engraved wood blocks supply illustrations of each type, and thus add to the usefulness of this clever little manual.

Porcelain and other Tokens. By H. A. Ramsden, F.R.N.S. 8°. 37 pp. + XX Plates. Yokohama, 1911.

Price: 5/6. nett.

The works dealing on this subject are not easily procurable and none of them are very comprehensive. Mr. Ramsden's catalogue of his collection of Siamese porcelain tokens will be therefore very welcome, and particularly so because every piece is illustrated in its natural colour. Although the collection is a very large one, it does not claim to be complete, as several specimens in our possession are not represented, and the series is no doubt a very important one (Haas mentions about 890 different kinds). But we sincerely congratulate the indefatigable and painstaking author who is doing so much to widen the knowledge of Far Eastern numismatics in the West.

These porcelain tokens were used for gambling purposes. We read, p. 4: "As gambling became more and more a recognized institution the bullet-shaped small coins — Salung and Fuang — were found inconvenient to handle; namely, the gambler squatting down on an oblong mat, at one end of which the cashier or croupier was seated in a kneeling attitude, the coin had often to be thrown to a considerable distance to reach the croupier, and it was very apt to roll off in a wrong direction. To remedy this inconvenience the owners of gambling establishments introduced special counters, etc.". These counters are said to have made their first appearance in 1760, and the circulation was prohibited in 1870. In shape they vary; the circular pieces predominate, but others are met with representing stars, cash, ovals, lozenges, gourds, leaves, door-tablets, butterflies, bats and fishes. Some of the types have a certain artistic merit, depicting all kinds of animals, insects, flowers, etc., but the majority bear inscriptions, while some show human heads or figures.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS &c.

For a year or two the British Numismatic Society has instituted a Research Fund and employed expert assistance in searching the unpublished rolls of the Record Office for entries throwing light on the history of our mediæval coinage. The results have been eminently satisfactory — for instance, they show that for the first seven years of his reign Edward I. was content to continue the issue of his father's money without even changing the name. Mr. J. S. Saltus of New-York, a Vice-President, who, it will be remembered, last year founded a gold medal for the Society's best paper, has now subscribed 150*l.* to the Research Fund, which will probably enable the records to be thoroughly searched.

Die Sitzung des Vereins für Münzkunde in Nürnberg vom 2. Oktober 1911 war von Nürnbergen und auswärtigen Mitgliedern recht gut besucht, wenn auch einige regelmässige Besucher wegen Krankheit etc. sich entschuldigt hatten. Die geplante Ehrung musste ausfallen, da der betreffende Herr verreisen musste. Der Vorsitzende gedachte des 70. Geburtstages von Prof. v. Luschin, der Grazer Tagung. der leider kein Mitglied beiwohnen konnte und wo unser Verein nur durch ein Begrüssungs-Telegramm vertreten war, der nächst jährigen Tagung in Würzburg. Weiter wurde die schon früher angeregte Untersuchung über numismatische Strassennamen besprochen. Es gibt schon 10 Strassen in Nürnberg, welche den Namen von Männern tragen, die mit der Münzkunde in Verbindung standen und es könnten höchstens noch 3 oder 4 weitere in Frage kommen. Herr C. F. Gebert gab dann "Neue Beiträge zur Nürnberger Münz- und Medaillen-Geschichte", gelegentliche Funde bei archivalischen Studien. Er sprach: "Von den drei Nürnberger Flettner", "Der Stempelschneider J. G. Schwertfeger", "Von den Nachprägungen für Kaiser Franz I. in der Nürnberger Münze", "Windscheim lässt in Nürnberg ummünzen", "Die Nürnberger Kopfstücke mit den Wecken", "Die Nürnberger Jesuiten-Medaille" und "Dukatenprägung für Bamberg in Nürnberg". Verschiedene der Mitteilungen waren durch die betreffenden Stücke belegt. Nach diesen mit Beifall aufgenommenen Darbietungen sprach Herr Dr. Will-Erlangen über den Brakteatenfund von Wollishausen und legte sämtliche dort gefundenen Typen bis auf 6 vor. Die prächtigen Stücke und die Mitteilungen fanden mit Recht alle Anerkennung. — Eine neue griechische Drachme, vom gleichen Herrn vorgelegt, zeigte, wie weit heute das Verständnis für das Darzustellende und die Kunst des Stempelschnittes gegen die antike Zeit zurücksteht. In reicher Fülle legten weiter die Herren König, Hummel, A. Müller und Major interessante Geld- und Denkmünzen vor.

Die Bayerische Numismatische Gesellschaft in München hielt am 21. Oktober ihre erste Sitzung für diesen Winter im grossen Kavalierzimmer des Hauptbahnhofes ab, welche sehr gut besucht war. Herr Konservator Dr. Buchenau berichtete ausführlich über die vorliegende neue numismatische Literatur, Herr Direktor Dr. Habich sprach darüber, dass der ganze Nachlass des Fälschers Becker (alle Stempel und das ganze Arbeitsmaterial), der bisher auf der Saalburg war, nun in das Kgl. Münzkabinett Berlin gelangte. Die Untersuchung hat wichtige Resultate namentlich darüber ergeben, in welcher Weise Becker die antiken Münzen so vortrefflich nachahmte. In seltner Fülle erfolgte sodann die Vorlegung interessanter oder schöner Münzen und Medaillen durch die Herren Reg.-Dir. Riederer, Pachinger, Bürklin, Hauser und Gebert. Herr Kons. Dr. Buchenau brachte sodann von den 5 im Bayer. Nationalmuseum aufbewahrten Rechenbüchern der bayer. Landschaft 3 zur Vorlage, die Benützung derselben erläuternd. An der sich anschliessenden Debatte beteiligten sich die Herren Noss und Gebert. Herr Direktor Dr. Habich zeigte eine Reihe von Neuerwerbungen des Kgl. Kabinetts in München vor. Herr Dr. Bernhart besprach den Fund von Niederlauer, der neben Würzburger Schillingen des 15. Jahrhunderts in zahlreichen Varianten auch einen bisher ganz unbekannten

FINDS

IMPORTANT FIND OF ANCIENT COINS IN GALLOWAY, SCOTLAND.

Last Spring a ploughman — Charles Clark — employed on the farm of Blackhills, Corsock, Kirkcudbrightshire, when ploughing turned up about 2100 ancient silver coins, enclosed in a wooden bowl, which was unfortunately broken to pieces by the plough and the horses' feet.

Judging from the position of the find, the nature of the soil, and other indications, the place may have originally been a glen with wooded banks and streamlet. The root of a tree was embedded in the peaty soil about 2½ feet down, and hazel-nut branches still bearing the nuts. The coins were only 6 inches below the surface, which had been levelled about 60 years ago into meadow land, and at present was deep drained — one of the drains made being only about 12 inches from the hoard — for the purpose of cropping, hence the find when being ploughed.

The coins were taken up by the Crown and submitted to an expert. A number have been retained for the National Museum of antiquities. Those kept have been paid for, and the remainder returned to the respective finders, of which there were two or three after the bulk was taken up.

All the coins are silver pennies except two, a silver halfpenny and a silver farthing. The pennies are long cross Scottish Coins of Alexander III, John Baliol and Robert the Bruce; some Irish pennies of Edward I and II, minted at Dublin and Waterford; English pennies of the same reigns minted at London, Durham, Canterbury, Berwick, Bristol, York and other places.

Among the coins is a halfpenny of Edward I, minted at Berwick, while a farthing minted at London is supposed to belong to the same reign or that of his son Edward II.

There were also a number of foreign " sterlings ".

The 22nd proceeded to India in 1841, and on arrival was stationed at Kurrachee. In 1843 it formed part of the force under Sir Charles Napier, which destroyed the stronghold of Emaum-ghur — an enterprise characterized by the Duke of Wellington, in the House of Lords, as one of the most curious military feats "in the annals of war". The fortress, says the historian of that campaign, was situated in the heart of "a wild singular country, where sandhills stretched north and south for hundreds of miles in parallel ridges, rounded at top and most systematically plaited, like the ripples on the sea shore after a placid tide. Varying in their heights, their breadth, and slope, they presented one uniform surface, but while some were over a mile broad, others were ten miles across, and so steep that the howitzers could only be dragged up by men. The sand was mingled with shells, and ran in great streams resembling numerous rivers, skirted on each side by parallel streaks of soil, which nourished jungle, yet thinly scattered. The tracks of the hyæna and wild boar, and the foot-prints of small deer were sometimes seen at first, but they soon disappeared and the solitude of the waste was then unbroken. "For eight days", continues the author of the "Conquests of Scinde", these intrepid soldiers traversed this gloomy region, living from hand to mouth, uncertain each morning if water would be found before evening, and often times it was not found.

They were not even sure of the right course; but with fiery valour and untiring strength continued their dreary dangerous way. The camels found very little food and got weak, but the stout infantry helped to drag the heavy howitzers up the sandy steeps. On the eighth day of this work, the famous desert stronghold was reached, but Mohammed Khan, with a force six times as numerous as his assailants, had already fled, leaving huge stores of powder and grain behind. The fortress was destroyed by mining, and the troops returned to Sukkur". Then rapidly followed the brilliant defence of the Hyderabad Residency by 100 men of the Light Company, under Captain T. S. Conway, against 8,000 Beluchees; the glorious battle of Meeanee, 17th February, 1843, when, with 2,000 troops, Sir Charles Napier defeated 22,000. Scindians, — the 22nd, the only Queen's regiment present, leading the attack; and that of Hyderabad, 24th March following, when the forces, under Meer Shere Mohammed, were utterly routed, the day, to quote the words of Sir Charles Napier, being "decided by the troop of Bombay European Horse Artillery, and H.M. 22nd Regiment".

At the outbreak of the American War the regiment was at Boston. It fought at Lexington, and at Bunker's Hill it suffered severely; and of the three officers and seventy men who went into action with the Grenadier company, only five came out unhurt. For a short time the regiment served as marines on board Earl Howe's fleet; after which it re-landed and served at the actions of Brooklyn, Brandywine, Freehold Camden, and Guildford, under Howe, Clinton, and Cornwallis down to the surrender at Yorktown, 19th Oct. 1781; and was everywhere distinguished "by its gallantry and heavy losses". After Cornwallis's surrender it was "interned" until the peace when it returned and remained in England eleven years. Vide-Regimental Records.

Nicknamed the Slashers from its conduct at the passage of the river Brunx 1776.

The reserve reached Nogales on the evening of 4th after having gained twelve hours start of the enemy by a forced march of thirty-six miles. "Under the most favourable circumstances, the tail of a retreating force exhibits terrible scene of distress, and on the road near Nogales the followers of the army were dying fast from cold and hungar. The soldiers barefooted, harassed, and weakened by their excesses at Bembibre and Villa Franca, were dropping to the rear by hundreds, while broken carts, dead animals, and the piteous spectacle of women and children, struggling or falling exhausted in the snow, completed a picture of war, which, like Janus, has a double face. Vide Napier.

Portrait-medal of
M. E. Babelon
Keeper of the Department of Coins and Medals
Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris.

The medal reproduced here, was issued, on the suggestion of Mr. Archer M. Huntington, seconded by M. Alphonse de Witte, in honour of M. E. Babelon, the distinguished savant, in commemoration of the International Numismatic Congress at Brussels, 1910.

The obv. was modelled by M. Godefroid Devreese, the eminent Belgian artist, and the Rℒ. engraved by means of the graving tool, by H. Rudolf Bosselt, of Magdeburg.

The medal was presented to M. Babelon on 6. May 1911 at the Bibliothèque Nationale.

THE NEW CANADIAN COINAGE.

Mr. Evelyn Cecil (U, Aston Manor) asked the Secretary to the Treasury why the Royal Mint had supplied to the Canadian Mint dies for the new coinage on which the legend Dei Gratia or D : G : was for the first time omitted on Canadian coins; and whether, in view of the strong public condemnation which was expressed in this country in 1849 with regard to the florin when the same omission was made and was speedily corrected, he would take immediate steps to rectify this error, as it had caused considerable annoyance in Canada.

Mr. Mckinnon Wood — The omission of the legend Dei Gratia or D : G : from the dies sent to Canada occurred by inadvertence. They were used for coining in Canada without the attention of the Royal Mint being called to the omission. When this was done fresh dies were at once prepared and sent to the branch mint at Ottawa.

Aspects of Death in Art. By F. Parkes Weber, M. A., M. D., Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries and of the Royal Numismatic Society. With 58 Figures. 8vo, cloth.

The book is intended to be an essay, not on the iconography of death, but on the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, and the various ways in which the idea of death has, or may be supposed to have, affected the living individual — his mental and physical state, and especially the direction and force of his action, — as illustrated by minor works of art, especially medals, engraved gems, jewels, etc. The book is divided into four parts. The first is meant to serve as an introduction to the whole subject. The second is an arrangement and analysis of the various possible aspects of death and the mental attitudes towards the idea of death, intended to show the headings under which the illustrative works of art may be grouped. The third deals with the medals and coins, and in the fourth the engraved gems, finger-rings, jewels, etc., bearing on the subject, are described. Price Five Shillings Net.

THE Monthly Numismatic Circular will be forwarded post free on receipt of half-a-crown (= 3 francs = 2 ½ marks = 60 U. S. A. cents, in P. O. O. or stamps) for one year's subscription.

Should any applicant not receive it regularly by post, please notify the omission to us, when it shall be at once rectified. All communications respecting the Numismatic Circular (either referring to its literary portion or to its catalogue of coins, &c. for sale) should be made to our West-End house, 17 and 18 Piccadilly, London, W., where all letters and orders will receive immediate attention.

Cheques crossed National Provincial Bank of England, Piccadilly Branch.

Any coins or medals can be had on approval if the applicant is known to us, or, if not, on receipt of references. Postage on coins, as a rule, is paid out.

Orders for coins from the annexed list will be executed in rotation, but preference will be given to clients who are willing to purchase outright, providing the coins answer to the description.

Coins not approved of can be returned.

LA Circulaire mensuelle de Numismatique sera adressée franco à toutes les personnes qui voudront bien en faire la demande en nous faisant parvenir 3 francs 20 centimes par mandat postal pour un abonnement annuel.

Nous prions nos correspondants d'adresser toutes lettres et communications relatives à la partie littéraire du journal ou au catalogue des monnaies et médailles, à notre établissement, 17 et 18, Piccadilly, Londres, W.; nous y répondrons immédiatement.

Les ordres seront exécutés à tour de rôle en donnant la préférence aux commandes effectives.

Toutes les pièces seront envoyées à condition, si le client le désire, mais le port de retour est à sa charge.

Les personnes qui ne nous seraient pas connues sont priées de nous fournir des références.

DAS Numismatische Circular wird portofrei, nach Empfang von 2 ½ Mark (3 Kronen ö. W.) als Jahresbetrag, geschickt.

Sollte jedoch ein Abonnent dasselbe nicht regelmässig erhalten, so bitten wir, uns gefälligst Anzeige davon zu machen, um weitere Unregelmässigkeiten zu verhüten.

Alle Mittheilungen, welche dieses "Numismatische Circular" betreffen (gleichviel ob dieselben sich auf den literarischen Teil oder auf das Verzeichnis der Münzen, &c. zum Verkauf beziehen), sollten an unser West End Etablissement, 17 und 18 Piccadilly, London, W., gerichtet werden, wo Briefe und Aufträge sofortige Erledigung finden.

Jede Münze oder Medaille wird zur Ansicht gesandt. Bestellungen werden nach Reihenfolge des Einganges effectuirt und Nichtconvenirendes zurückgenommen.

Rückporto zu Lasten der Herren Besteller.

Uns unbekannte Herren Sammler werden um Aufgabe genügender Referenzen ersucht.

GREEK COINS.

SELINUS.

SELINUS FROM 480 TO 450 B.C.

In 480 B.C. the citizens of Selinus sent some troops to aid the Carthaginians at Himera; probably the power of Carthage appeared to them overwhelming. At any rate by 466 B.C., that is, only fourteen years afterwards, they are reported by Diodorus Siculus as co-operating with the other free Greek cities in assisting the Syracusans to expel Thrasybulus (XI, 68). He says the Syracusans "sent deputies to Gela, Agrigentum, Selinus and Himera, and to other cities in the interior of Sicily, asking for prompt succour."

Just before the date of the Athenian expedition Thucydides wrote of Selinus as a powerful and wealthy city. In Bk. VI, c. 20 he says: "Besides Naxos and Catana, which I expect will side with us on the strength of their connexion with Leontini, there are seven others, and those equipped with everything in a style just agreeing with our own power, and most of all those against whom we are more especially sailing, viz. Selinus and Syracuse.

For there are in them many heavy armed, and bowmen and dartmen, with many triremes and crowds to man them. They have money too, partly in private funds and partly in the temples also at Selinus, ... but what they most of all excel us in is, that they possess many horses, and use corn of native growth, and not imported."

The long time during which Selinus enjoyed prosperity caused the citizens to neglect their fortifications, and Diodorus Siculus attributes to this neglect the fall of the city into the hands of the Carthaginians in 409 B.C.

Selinus, during the Period of Transition from the Archaic to the Fine Art Period, was then a prosperous city enjoying the influence of the development of Greek life, thought and art.

The coins bear witness to the deliverance of the citizens from the scourge of pestilence through the knowledge and energy of the philosopher Empedocles, who appears to have been one of the greatest men of that period.

According to Diogenes Laertius this famous saviour of Selinus was born at Agrigentum, and belonged to a wealthy and noble family.

He quotes Diodorus of Ephesus, writing about Anaximander, as saying "that Empedocles imitated him; indulging in a tragic sort of pride, and wearing magnificent apparel. And when a pestilence attacked the people of Selinus by reason of the bad smells arising from the adjacent river, so that the men died, and the women bore children with difficulty, Empedocles contrived a plan, and brought into the same channel two other rivers at his own expense; and so by mixing their waters with that of the other river, he sweetened the stream. And as the pestilence was removed in this way, when the people of Selinus were on one occasion holding a festival on the bank of the river, Empedocles appeared among them, and they rising up offered him adoration, and prayed to him as a god. And he wishing to confirm this idea, which they had adopted of him, leaped into the fire. Diodorus adds that this was denied by Timaeus, who said Empedocles went to the Peloponnesus.

These coins are evidence of the influence of the new study of natural science which seemed to promise power over all the forces of nature, and in the case of Empedocles the new studies apparently made him proud and boastful.

He was one of the band of students whose fame has come down to us, the physicians Acron and Pausanias, Parmenides and Anaxagoras.

In seeking the date of the pestilence which he averted we must endeavour to decide whether it was before his visit to Thurii and the Peloponnesus. He was at Thurii soon after its foundation in 446 B.C. As the coins are apparently earlier than that date, if we may judge by their style, it is probable that the pestilence occurred before he went to Thurii, about 450-455 B.C. Aristotle tells us he died aged 60 years.

All his writings were metrical compositions. We have a work called καθαρμοί (on Purifications) and fragments of a didactic poem on Nature which consisted of 2.000 hexameter verses. His work on Purifications recommended a moral life as the best preservative from evil.

The Roman poet of Natural Science took Empedocles as his model. Those who wish to know more of his life and opinions should refer to the works of Fr. W. Sturz (1805) and the more recent work of Simon Karsten (1838).

THE TYPES.

The types of the coins of this period are interesting as being all influenced by the event of the pestilence, and its removal by the work of Empedocles.

On the Obverse of the Tetradrachms we see Apollo discharging arrows from his bow; this design was meant to signify the healing rays of the sun driving off the malarial mists. The figure of Artemis by his side was regarded as the goddess who eased the pains of women in labour with child.

On the Reverse the figure of the local river-god Selinos is seen sacrificing to Æsculapius with a patera representing the sacrifice of thanksgiving of the citizens for the healing of the plague; the laurel branch in the the hand of the river-god was used in sprinkling the lustral water in the ceremony of Purification.

As the bull in the field stands on a pedestal it is probably a representation of some monument erected in the city to commemorate the flowing of the waters which cleansed the malarial marsh. The bull was a well known symbol of the rushing roaring river water. This is evidently the meaning of the bull because we have on the didrachms the figure of Heracles struggling with the bull. Professor Cardello has explained the myth in his treatise "Lotta di Ercole con Archeloo" (Orvieto 1894). In that treatise is an illustration shewing Heracles struggling with the bull (confer p. 290, Coins of Magna Graecia). On the reverse of this didrachm bearing the figure of Heracles we see another type which bears a similar meaning. The River-god Hypsas at an altar of Æsculapius and behind him one of the marsh birds is represented as departing from the haunts recently drained.

The ideas and imaginations of the citizens of that period are more clearly brought home to us by these coin-types than by much reading of ancient literature.

We come now to the type seen on the drachms. On the obverse is a female head with the legend ΟΔΞΜΥϜΥΞ and we naturally take this to be the name of the nymph whose head is there represented. In the British Museum Catalogue, p. 141, we find this name completed as if masculine Eurumedon, but this cannot be if the legend refers to the type. The names of magistrates are sometimes found in full but the size of the letters and position of the legend make it difficult to think of this name as that of a magistrate. A more probable suggestion is that the wide stretch of water at the mouth of the rivers joined by Empedocles was then regarded as the abode of a nymph who was named most appropriately Eurimedusa. Poseidon is spoken of as εὐρυμέδων by Pindar (Ol., VIII, 41). The root is μεδ (rule over), and we get the feminine form in the well known name Medusa, the Gorgon. We find the name Eurumedusa in Homer's Odyssey (VII, 8) "An aged dame from Apeiraea kindled the fire for her, Eurymedusa, the handmaid of the chamber, whom the curved ships upon a time had brought from Apeiraea". — "She waited on the white armed Nausicaa in the palace halls".

The name was naturally suggestive of the nymph who ruled the wide spreading waters.

The type on the obols has been variously interpreted. A female figure is represented with her hand raised before a serpent.

Havercamp long ago considered we have here Hygeia, the daughter of Æsculapius, caressing the serpent, the emblem of her father's healing art. Some however have thought the hand is not in the attitude expressing caresses, but rather is raised in expression of fear and abhorrence, and an obscure myth, which however seems to have been well known to early Christian writers, is thought to be represented by the type. After describing the birth of Proserpine Arnobius (B. V, 21) goes on "whom when Jupiter Verveceus saw to be strong, plump and blooming, forgetting what evils .... he had a little before fallen into, he returns to his former practices and because it seemed too wicked that a father openly be joined as in marriage with his daughter, he passes into the terrible form of a dragon : he winds his huge coils round the terrified maiden and under a fierce appearance, sports and caresses her in softest embraces. She too is in consequence filled with the seed of the most powerful Jupiter, but not as her mother was, for she bore a daughter like unto herself, but from the maiden was born something like a bull, to testify to her seduction by Jupiter. If any one asks who narrates this there we shall quote the well known senarian verse of a Tarentine poet which antiquity sings, saying.

"The bull begot a dragon and the dragon a bull" The myth is briefly referred to by the author of the recognitions of Clement (Bk X, 22).

" By his own daughter Ceres Zeus begot Persephone whom also herself he defiled being changed into a dragon." More briefly the myth is spoken of in the Clementine homelies (c. XVI) " there is the wicked example from his story in his committing incest with Proserpine".

Clement of Alexandria tells the myth more fully in his exhortation to the Heathen (p. 11, Ed. Paris, 1641). " What if I add the rest? Demeter becomes a mother, Kore is reared up to womanhood, and in course of time he who begot her — this same Zeus has intercourse with his own daughter Pherephatta — after Ceres the mother — forgetting his former abominable wickedness. Zeus is both the father and seducer of Kore, and has intercourse with her in the shape of a dragon; his identity however was discovered. The token of the Sabazian mysteries is to the initiated " the deity gliding over the breast" — the deity being this serpent crawling over the breasts of the initiated. Proof surely this of the unbridled lust of Zeus. Pherephatta has a child, though to be sure, in the form of a bull as an idolatrous poet says : " The bull the dragon's father, another father of the bull the dragon. "

For an illustration of the snake being a symbol of Zeus confer Bull. Correspondance Hellénique, 1883, p. 510 on " the cult of Zeus Milichios".

The poet quoted was a Tarentine and the intercourse with Magna Graecia was considerable. We can hardly believe such a poem was unknown to the Greeks of Selinus, but as all the other types have reference to the work of Empedocles it seems more probable that Havercamp was right and Eckhel wrong in the interpretation of the type. There seems to be no reason apparent why such a myth should have been popular enough to be placed on the obols used chiefly by the poorer citizens, whereas the health of the city was naturally a most popular subject.

Moreover the man-headed bull is a well-known symbol of water power, and the fish in the exergue points also to that interpretation.

TETRADRACHM.

Normal weight : 268 grains. 17.4 grammes.

I. Obv. ΣΕΛ ΟΣ. The river-god Selinus, naked, to left, sacrificing with a patera at an altar; he holds in the left hand a laurel-branch, on this side of the altar a cock to left; in the field to right a bull standing to left on a pedestal, above which a selinon leaf.

Rev. ИОІ ОИІΛΞΞ. A quadriga to left, driven by Artemis holding reins in both hands; on her right hand stands Apollo, his chlamys over his shoulder, discharging an arrow; the horses are walking : border of dots.

II. Obv. Similar but the river-god is horned, and diademed, and the altar is wreathed. ΣΕΛΙ ИΟΣ.

Rev. Similar, but legend ITИ ОИІΛΕΣ.

III. Obv. ΣΕΛΙΝΟΝΤΙΟΝ. Similar, but Selinos is clothed with himation round his body and over his left shoulder.

Rev. Similar but Apollo is without his chlamys.

IV. Obv. Similar, but the bull with lowered head, the letter N shaped N.

Rev. Similar, but the front of the quadriga ornamented with a crane.

V. Obv. Similar.

Rev. Similar, but in exergue a barley-corn.

VI. Obv. Similar, but the bull is man-headed.

Rev. Similar, no goad in hand of driver; front of chariot plain, above the horses an olive-wreath; beneath their feet a bivalve shell.

DIDRACHM,

Normal weight : 134 grains. 8.7 grammes.

Obv. ΣΕΛΙ ИΟΙΤΟИ (sic) } or, ΕΛΙΝ ΟΝΤ ΙΟΣ

Rev. ΗΥΫΑΣ. The river-god Hypsas standing to left, naked; on his head a short horn; he is sacrificing with a patera at an altar, round which a bearded snake twines; he holds in the left-hand a laurel-branch ; in the field to the right a crane running to right, over which is a selinon-leaf.

DRACHM.

Normal weight : 67.28 grains or 4.366 grammes.

Obv. ΟΔΞΜVϘVΞ. A female head, to left her hair turned up behind under a broad diadem; behind, a crane to right: border of dots.

Rev. ΣΟΝΙΛΞΣ. A youthful head of the river-god Selinos to left, with long horn and pointed ear; behind, a selinon-leaf.

OBOLS.

Normal weight: 11.11 grains, or ·73 grammes.

Obv. A female figure, draped, seated to left on a rock on which her left hand rests, her right hand is on the neck of a bearded snake, which advances towards her; above a selinon-leaf : border of dots.

Rev. ΣΕΛΙΝΟΕΣ. A man-headed bull to right : in exergue, a long fish to right : plain border.

Obv. Similar; but the female figure raises the veil with her left hand.

Rev. Similar.

Obv. Similar type; but the female figure places the left hand on her breast : same border.

Rev. ΣΕΛ ΙΝΟ Σ. Similar type; above a selinon leaf.

Some specimens have the legend ending in ΙΟΝ.

SYRACUSE

THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

In Dr Barclay Heads' " History of the coinage of Syracuse " on page 4 he gives the following periods.

I. Oligarchy of the Geomori. VI. Century.

II. Gelon. 485-478.
III. Hieron I. 478-467.
IV. Democracy before the Athenian siege. 466-415.

In the Transitional at period 478-450 B.C. we should have the coinage of Hieron I and that of the first part of the period of the Democracy.

THE COINAGE OF HIERON.

As the coinage of Gelon was distinguished by its reference to the victory over the Carthaginians. So was that of Hieron by its symbolic reference to the naval victory gained by him over the Etruscans near Cumae, in 474 B.C. Each victory was of supreme importance to the Greeks of Sicily, the naval victory involved the freedom of the seas which had been dominated by the Etruscan fleets (Diodorus, XI, 51).

Pindar thus alludes to the struggle (Pyth., I, 72): " Grant I beseech thee my prayer, son of Cronus, that the war party of the Carthaginian and Thyrrhenian hosts may remain quietly at home, now that they have witnessed the discomfiture of their fleet before Cumæ, — the fate they endured through their defeat by the ruler of the Syracusans, who flung into the sea the flower of their youth from their quick-sailing vessels, delivering Hellas from the heavy yoke of slavery ".

The helmet taken from the spoils, and dedicated to Zeus at Olympia, may be seen in the British Museum, and is of interest to numismatists because the letters of the inscription on the helmet correspond in form to those on the coins of this period.

The series of coins bearing the pistrix symbol are distinguished from the coins of Gelon by a greater fineness of workmanship. The advance from the Archaic style is seen especially in the formation of the eye of the goddess, which now first appears in profile, whereas before both corners of the eye were visible. The hair of the goddess is waved and there is greater variety in the way in which it is arranged, moreover the old plain string of beads is replaced by a fillet.

The horses in the quadriga are, with one exception, always represented walking, and the charioteer is always a male.

The inscriptions are very seldom written in the retrograde manner usual in the archaic period. Towards the close of Hieron's reign the form R gave place to the later form P, but throughout the transitional period the older form still some times appeared. This series forms a link between the Archaic Period and that of the Transitional.

On the death of Hieron, Thrasybulus, the brother of Gelon, became Tyrant in Syracuse.

Aristotle says "Thrasybulus, the brother of Hiero, flattered Gelo's son, and urged him to lead a life of pleasure that he himself might govern; but the family joined together, and endeavoured to support the Tyranny and expel Thrasybulus, but those of them who combined together seized the opportunity and expelled the whole family " (V, 10).

Diodorus represents Hieron as more harsh than Gelon, who was popular, but Thrasybulus, he says, surpassed his brother in wickedness. A full and interesting account of the overthrow of Thrasybulus and his mercenaries is given by Diodorus (lib. XI, c. LVI LVII LVIII).

The reign of this last of the Tyrants of the Gelonean dynasty lasted only about one year, and was followed by many years of prosperity and peace.

THE EARLY DEMOCRATIC PERIOD.

The only coins of this period known are tetradrachms, and these have been classified by Dr Head in five classes: —

The Ist Type is distinguised by the sphendone on the head.

The IInd Type by the saccos or bag generally ornamented with the Maeander pattern.

The IIIrd Type is distinguished by a cord wound four times round the back hair.

All these three types have the exergue plain, and the quadriga is driven by a male charioteer.

The IVth Type is distinguished by a jewelled net on the hair of the goddess.

The Vth Type by the same net bound by a cord twisted round it. Both IV and V bear a locust in the exergue. On all these five types the horses are walking. No didrachms or drachms of this period are known.

This series is most interesting to those who desire to trace the gradual improvement of the artist's work. We see on some coins that the attempt to give character to the face of the goddess involved an element of coarseness in the lower part of the face. One artist made an attempt to represent the long eyelashes which distinguished his model. One feature of the work of these artists is the evident faithfulness with which they copied their models, and the wonderfully lifelike effect, which makes some of the heads curiously modern in appearance.

The following words of Mr. Ruskin are quoted by Mr. G. F. Hill in his "Coins of Ancient Sicily " — " Extreme simplicity, unpretending vigour of work, which claims no admiration either for minuteness or dexterity, and suggests no idea of effort at all: refusal of extraneous ornament and perfectly arranged disposition of counted masses in a sequent order, this is all you have to be pleased with, neither will you ever find in the best Greek art more ". The work of this period is however not without faults, but it has one advantage over that of the later fine art period in that there is no trace in it of the beginning of decay.

Those who use the coins as specimens of art should notice the arrangement of the hair on these Syracusan coins and compare it with that on the sculpture of the same period, for instance with the statue Cipparelli in Florence and with the well-known stele of Hegeso. Confer Furtwängler "Masterpieces" p. 102 and Fig. 14.

THE EARLIEST COPPER COINS.

The earliest copper coins of Syracuse appear from their semi-archaic style to belong to this period, but we have no historical reference to the introduction of copper coinage at Syracuse in the writing of the ancient Greeks.

In the British Museum Catalogue six specimens are given, nos 126 to 131.

1. Weight 62 grains. Size .65.

Obv. ΣΥΡΑ. A female head to right, wearing necklace; hair in a knot or κορυμβος; in front and behind a dolphin, downwards: plain border.

Rev. A cuttle-fish, the feelers of which are connected by a web: around oOo.

The surface of the Reverse is slightly incuse. Smaller coins with similar types but without marks of value exist, and they are considered by Dr Head to represent the Trias, Hexas, and Uncia.

They were probably of nominal not real value. The occurrence of the form P shews that they are not earlier than this Transitional Period.

The reason for rejecting the opinions of the older writers, Brandes and Mommsen, is the fact that the copper coins they thought to be earlier, for reasons connected with theories of weight, are evidently later in regard to style.

The ancient proportion in Sicily of silver to copper in value was 250: 1, and the copper litra which then weighed 3.375 grains (218 grammes) or half an Attic Mina, was in value equal to 13.5 grains of silver) (87 grammes).

Or one tenth of the Stater or didrachm which was in consequence called the δεκάλιτρος στατήρ.

(Pollux, IV, 175) .1 drachm = 60 oz copper.
The silver litra = $\frac{1}{5}$ drachm or 12 oz of copper.
The obol = $\frac{1}{6}$ drachm or 10 oz of copper.
We should expect the trias to = 4 oz of copper.
A tetradrachm = 240 oz copper or 12 trias.
A trias should be 4 oz.
Actual weight of trias 1 oz 14 grains.
This coinage is therefore money of account.

STEINHORST, BENJAMIN (Germ.). Mint-master at Rostock, 1842-1862; signed the currency with his initials B.S. He was a Gold-and Silver-worker, and gave up his office in 1862. In 1843 copper Dreilinge to the amount of 1000 thalers were struck under him (Ed. Grimm, Münzen und Medaillen der Stadt Rostock, Berl. Blätter, 1904, p. 603.

STEININGER, PETER (Germ.). Mint-master at Wunsiedel, Brandenburg, 1621.

STEINGER, LUTZ (Germ.). Mint-master at Nuremberg, 1435 (Gebert (304) 35).

STEINLA (Germ.). A Saxon Sculptor and Medallist of the middle years of the nineteenth century. By him is a Portrait-medal of himself, 1836.

STEINLINGER, LUTZ. Vide STEININGER. Mentioned in 1435 as "der Müntzmeister". Gebert adds that he was as little a Mint-master as the councillors with the title of Architects (Baumeister) were in reality architects (Gebert, p. 39).

STEINMACHER, WERNHER (Germ.). Mint-master at Neumarkt a. Sulz, 1374.

STEINMANN, L. (Germ.). Medallist of the nineteenth century, by whom I only know the following medals : Dr Carl Ernst von Baer, the embryologist of Dorpat; — Prize-medal of the Imperial Açademy of St. Petersburg; 68 mill. Æ. (in the Boston collection); — Inauguration of the Railway Line of Polessié, 1887 (Moyaux, 396); — Opening of the Tunnel of Sourame on the Transcaucasian Railway, 1890.

STEINMETZ, PHILIPP (Germ.). Mint-master at Arolsen, 1765-1800. His initials P. S. occur on the currency for which he was responsible.

STEINMÜLLER, GREGOR (Austr.). Royal Mint-master at Joachimsthal, 1621-1637. Privy-mark, a bird's wing.

STEINMÜLLER, SEBASTIAN (Germ.). Mint-master at Jicin (Silesia) 1632, in the service of Wallenstein; the Die-cutter at this time was Conrad Froböse. Steinmüller's privy-mark was a Lion rampant. In the Donebauer collection, this Mint-master was represented by 10 Ducats, 2 and 1 Ducat pieces, silver Thalers, Groschen and Hellers.

STELLA, ETIENNE ALEXANDRE (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born in Paris; pupil of A. Dumont. He has occasionally modelled Portrait-medallions; one, in bronze, cast, was exhibited by him at the Paris Salon, 1882, and another of Mme Houlet, in 1884.

STENDELIN. Vide STAEDELIN suprâ.

STEPHAN DER WISENT DER MÜNZER (Austr.). Moneyer at Vienna, 1406.

STEPHANI, BENEDIKT (Germ.) of Dantzig; Mint-master at Mayence, 1634, and Hesse, later also at Dantzig, and in the service of the King of Sweden at Elbing. His initials B. S. occur on Mayence Thalers of 1620 and 1630, on Ducats of 1633, as well as on undated Double Ducats and Ducats of Queen Christina of Sweden, struck at Mayence. Stephani was in the service of the Mayence Mint before the Swedish occupation, but he was not appointed Mint-master to the Archbishop before 9. February 1636. From that year until 1642 his initials occur on coins of Mayence and on Half Batzen struck at Mayence of the four allied states, and on others of Mayence and Hesse. On his departure from Mayence Stephani entered the service of the Archbishop of Cologne, 1642.

Prof. Joseph refers to this Mint-master on pp. 16, 230 and 236 of his work on the coins of Frankfort a/ M.

STEPHEN, H. Usually known as STEPHEN OF HOLLAND (Vide Vol. II, pp. 530-532). The following notes from Mr. G. F. Hill's Stephen H., Medallist and Painter (Burlington Magazine, Vol. XII, p. 355 sq.) present so much interest that I give below copious extracts from this valuable monograph. "The medallist who is generally called 'Stephen of Holland' signs himself on his medals STE., STE.H.F. or STE.H.FEC. The responsibility for the explanation of these abbreviations as Stephanus Hollandus (sic) fecit seems to rest with George Vertue. He has been followed, practically without question, by later writers. For Vertue, who knew only the medals of Englishmen by this artist, it was perhaps natural to suppose that Stephen, a Dutchman, working in England, expressed his Dutch nationality by the letter H. I do not know whether Dutchmen of the sixteenth century used such a barbarism as Hollandicus (or the like) instead of the classical Batavus; but it seems to me incredible that Stephen, when he signed himself STE.H. on medals of Netherlanders made in the Netherlands, before he paid his visit to England, should describe himself as 'Stephen of Holland'. It is only reasonable to suppose that H conceals a surname, or more probably a place-name; that it means 'Hollander' is a supposition that need only be considered when some documentary evidence in its favour is discovered. It is hardly worth while to speculate on the nature of the surname of place-name. It has, indeed, been suggested that it was Van Hollandt, but it is very much to be doubted whether such a suggestion would have been made had not English writers already spoken of the artist as 'Stephen of Holland.'

"Much of the confusion which at present prevails about the identity of this medallist is due to Horace Walpole, whose careless use of the materials which lay before him in the MS. collections of George Vertue makes his 'Anecdotes of Painting' a trap of the most dangerous kind for the unwary. If a publisher could be found for the work, no more valuable service could be done to the history of art in England than the re-writing ot the 'Anecdotes' on the basis of the MS. and other materials which are now available.

"We learn from Vertue that '... Stevens, a painter who lived in the beginning of Queen Elisabeth,' painted several family pictures (of the Lumley family), and that among the accounts of that family were receipts of this Stevens for pictures which in Vertue's time were in the possession of Lord Scarbrough. Vertue himself saw one, well drawn and painted, 'on board'. The duke of Devonshire also possessed among his old family pictures some done by '... Stephens a painter'. It is to be noted that Vertue leaves a blank before the artist's name. It seems probable, therefore, that the evidence before him did not give more than 'Stephens' or something similar; he assumed this to be a surname, and left a blank for the baptismal name."

Mr. Hill further gives several more quotations concerning Stephens the painter, and then mentions Vertue's marginal cross-reference to his description of the medal of Anna Poines, of which he gives a sketch, after Vertue's, no original being known to exist.

"Vertue praises this piece highly, and goes on to say once more: 'I think I have seen two or three more of the same work near the same time, particularly that medal of Sir Thomas Bodley and Lord Pembroke — 1562, and Lord Leicester.'

"A little later (fol. 45 b) he gives a drawing of the medal of William Parr, marquis of Northampton, explaining the signature STE.H. as 'Stevens Holandus'. This medal he regards as another confirmation of that artist's having been in England, and the work, being 'so masterly done, sharp, neat, and in good taste', makes him apprehend that the medallist was a 'sculptor of large works, and made models in wax or clay for medals thus', and also for 'monuments or other statues'.

"Walpole, without the slightest reservation, identifies the Stephen who signed the medals of 1562 with the sculptor of the Boreham monument and the painter of the family portraits above mentioned. The 'curious portraits at Hardwicke', of Queen Elizabeth, in a gown embroidered with sea-monsters, the Queen of Scots, both at whole length, and others', are also dragged in as probably painted by him.

"About the sculptor Richard Stephens, a certain amount of information is forthcoming from the sixteenth-century returns of aliens resident in England and similar documents. From these it appears that in May 1571 there was living in St. Saviour's Parish, Southwark, Richard Stevens, a freemason, born in Brabant, who had been in the country four years; with him lived one man-child, named Steven, and John Bescay his servant, who was born in Antwerp, and had been in the country four years.

"In November 1571 he is returned in the parish of St. George, Southwark, as Richard Stephens, of the age of twenty-nine years, a carver in stone, in England four years, with Jane his wife, born in Ghent, twenty-six years of age, in England three years, and one child called Stephen, born there, of the age of five years. They 'came over for religion.'

"In 1582-3 he is returned by the Company of Freemasons as a stranger practising the Art of Masonry, though he had never been admitted to the Company.

"Finally, another document, probably of 1583, returns him as a Dutch stone-cutter living in St. Saviour's Parish, Southwark.

"Richard Stephens, the sculptor, therefore, was born about 1542, and came to England about 1568; lived there continuously until the end of 1571; and was certainly there in 1582-1583, and 1587-1589. The last fact is proved not only by the documents but by his employment on the Boreham monument, which must have been begun about 1583, and finished in 1589.

"As the evidence stands there is no shadow of a reason for connecting this Richard Stephens with the Stephen or Steven who made the medals of 1562 and (if, as seems certain, medallist and painter were identical) painted the portraits of about the same date. Let us turn to the work of this latter artist. I may begin by describing the hithertho unpublished medals, the discovery of which first suggested the present inquiry. They are in the British Museum.

"1. Medal of Jacobus Fabius. Bust to right, bearded, in coat with furred collar, and cloak. Around, .IACOBVS·FABIVS.AET.40.A°. 1559. Signed (incised) on the truncation of the arm, STE.H. The lettera AE are ligatured. Lead, 70.5 mm. From George III.'s collection.

"The only Low Countryman of the name of Fabius in the sixteenth century whom I can discover is Gulielmus Fabius (properly Willem Boonaerts), a native of Hilvarenbeek (in North Brabant) who was professor of Greek at Louvain, and was killed in 1590. Jacobus Fabius may have been his father, but obviously no stress can be laid on such a conjecture.

"The arms are those of the Alendorp family of Utrecht, described by Rietstap as: Argent, three Lions' heads sable, tongued gules, crowned or.

"Hillegoent, the wife of Johan can Abcoude van Wyk, was the daughter of Lubbert van Alendorp (lord of Blijenburg and Abelschoten).

British Museum. The same collection also possesses a lead specimen (from George III.'s cabinet) of the portrait of Mor. The conjunction of the portrait and the yarn-winder reverse on the surmoulage suggests that they are by the same hand. They are of the same diameter to within 1 millimetre. On the larger (the reverse design) the borders of pearls stands some slight distance from the edge. If this margin were removed (and it is, of course, unessential) the two would fit exactly, as indeed they do in the surmoulage. It seems, therefore, reasonable to attribute the portrait of Antonis Mor to Stephen.

"The close resemblance between the reverse design with the yarn-winder and that with Charity which belongs to Stephen's portrait of Hans van den Broeck.

Hans van den Broeck, should be noticed. Stephen has blundered in his motto, which should of course run, 'dabit deus his quoque finem' (Vergil, Aen. I, 199). The motto, correctly worded, was used by Leone Leoni and his copyists on medals, with the reverse of Hercules and the Hydra. Its application to the design by Stephen is not clear. If the portrait of Mor is by Stephen, the further question arises whether the reverse design of Painting which is attached to the portrait of the Brussels specimen published by Simonis (pl. XII, 1) is not also by the same artist. Simonis has attributed it to Jonghelinck; but it is to be noted that he says (p. 105) that at this period no other artist than Jonghelinck, 'si non Etienne de Hollande, could have shown certain qualities which he finds in the design. Without having seen the medal, or even a cast of it, I hesitate to pronounce decidedly; but I would call attention to the extraordinary resemblance in treatment between the figure of Painting on the Mor medal and the figure of Faith on the medal of the marchioness of Northampton. When the evidence of the other reverse connected with the Mor portrait is taken into account, Stephen certainly seems to have a better claim than Jonghelinck to the reverse of the Brussels medal.

"To the pieces so far discussed it is convenient to add two others, the one, of Engelken Tols, because it seems to be a much finer specimen than that illustrated by Simonis; the other, of Hans van den Broeck, because traces of the signature STE.H are visible on the original on the truncation of the bust. The attribution of the medal to Stephen in thus confirmed.

"The British Museum is naturally rich in the portraits of English men and women executed by Stephen in 1562. They will be found well illustrated in plate VII of the 'Medallic Illustrations' of Franks and Grueber. For Stephen's medals of other than Englishmen it is best to refer to the work of Simonis, although it is necessary to regard some of that writer's attributions with caution. In particular the attempt to credit Stephen with portraits of Adrian VI and of Henry VIII (Vide illustr., vol. II, p. 525) may be set aside without hesitation.

Justus Fit.

"Stephen's first dated medals are of 1558. To this year, for instance, belong the portraits of Engelken Tols and George, count of Egmont and bishop of Utrecht. (Of the latter, as we have seen, John Lord Lumley possessed a painting signed by 'Steven'.) The medallist's sitters in this year hail chiefly from Utrecht. In 1559, the year of the Fabius medal, and the next two years he did various other portraits, chiefly of Antwerpers. Medals of Sigismund Augustus of Poland are dated 1561 and 1562; and perhaps to the same time belong the undated medals of Catherine of Austria, Bona Sforza and John Sigismund. In 1562 and (if once more we assume his identity with the painter 'Steven') in 1563 he was in England; in 1564, as the van Alendorp medal shows, he was back in Utrecht. Then his movements are hidden until he reappears at the Polish court, making medals of Sigismund Augustus, dated 1571 and 1572. After this, no more is heard of him.

The Italianate style of some of his works (of which the Fabius will serve as an example) has suggested that he went to Italy. Obviously, however, few things are easier to transport than medals, and there can be little doubt that the works of Italian medallists must have found their way across the Alps. Such imported medals would amply suffice for the Italianizing of Stephen's style. That he was susceptible to outside influences is clear enough from the variety of styles illustrated on the plates.

The last that we hear of Stephen, then, as a medallist is in Poland in 1572. That the medallist and the painter were identical is, I think, almost beyond doubt, in view of the coincidence of the dates of their work in England and in one of their subjects — Count Egmont. But the further identification with the sculptor Richard Stephens stands on a different plane. It implies that the medallist was only about sixteen years old when he was doing signed medals of distinguished people like Count Egmont; that at the age of nineteen he was sufficiently famous to go to the Polish Court, and in the next year, coming to England, to begin immediately to portray great nobles all over the country; that after returning to the Low Countries he came and settled down in England in 1565 as a stone-mason, and worked for four years; then suddenly went once more to Poland, where he made medals in 1571 and 1572; then returned to England, and from about 1583 to 1589 (according to the most probable date) worked once more as a stone-mason.

This, even when one takes into account the versatility and the wandering habits of the artists of the time, is a somewhat improbable construction of any man's career. If it is necessary to connect Stephen the medallist and painter with Richard Stephens the sculptor, there is nothing (except the commonness of the name) to prevent our supposing that they were father and son. 'Richard, son of Stephen', would, according to the English usage, be called 'Richard Stephens'".

The medal of Pope Adrian V. ascribed by Simon to Stephen of Holland is undoubtedly Italian; there is a specimen in Mr. Max Rosenheim's collection (69 mill.). Of Alexander Farnese are probably two medals in existence. Simonis describe one dated 1587; Mr. Rosenheim's specimen has the date 1589. The same collector has also the medal of Floris Allewyn, Æ cast, 70 mill.

Jonkheer S. Muller Fz has recently sent me his paper, contributed to the Tijdschrift van het Kon. Ned. Genootschap voor Munt-en Penningkunde, XXIX (1911), 3th part, on " De medailleur Ste. H. Utrecht " which gives additional information on the place of origin of this much discussed and still imperfectly known Medallist.

STERN, RENÉ (French). Medallist, Seal-and gem-engraver of Paris. The present owner's father, born at Hagenau (Alsace) in 1826, had a small shop in the proximity of the Théâtre Français, rue Richelieu, from about 1851; it is now transferred to the Passage des Panoramas, n° 47.

The firm has a very good name for Seal-engraving. Besides numerous gems, intaglios and cameos, they have cut dies for several medals, among which I have noted: the Prince Imperial, 1869; — Medal of the Lodge Anglaise of Bordeaux, founded in 1732, undated (signed: STERN, PARIS); two types (Marvin, n°s LXXII and CCXXXV); — Cholera at Amiens; — Jeton of the Compagnie des Quatre mines réunies de Graissessac, 1864 (500 ex. émis); — Opening of the Railway line from Paris to Orleans, 1895 (60 mill.); — Medal of the Company of Russian Railways, 1858.

STESICRATES (Greek). This inscription occurs on a scarab of the Treasure of Curium (P. di Cesnola, Cyprus, pl. 18, fig. 14) and figures in minute letters above a horse, but it remains uncertain, says Babelon, whether it represents the name of the engraver or that of the owner who utilised it as a seal (La gravure en pierres fines, p. 98).

STETTLER, WILHELM (Swiss). Line-engraver of Berne, born 12. March 1643, died in 1708. He prepared designs of coins and medals for the numismatists Andreas Morell, Dr Patin, etc.

STETTNER, JOHANN THOMAS (Germ.). Medallist at Nuremberg, circ. 1806-1840. According to Schlickeysen he was born in 1786. Bolzenthal mentions his name, but does not express much admiration for his work. Among his medals we find: Nuremberg incorporated into Bavarian territory, 1806. This medal is a great rarity; Gebert only knows of three specimens, in silver, and one in tin; — Victories in 1806 and 1807; medallic box containing prints (Bramsen I, 676); — Napoleon and Maximilian Joseph of Bavaria; Rℒ. Frederick Augustus of Saxony and Frederick of Württemberg, undated; — Victories from 1806 to 1809; medallic box containing prints (Bramsen, I, 893); — Successes of the Allies in 1813 (signed on obv. ST. and on Rℒ. Tho. Stettner); — First Reunion of the States of Bavaria, 1819; — Marriage of Frederick William, Crown Prince of Prussia, 1823; — Maximimilian, Crown Prince of Bavaria, undated; Rℒ. SEIN NAME GLAENZ SO LANG, etc. (Witt. Cat. 2840); — Maximilian and Marie. Thaler size (Witt. Cat. 2841); — The Prince of Orange's arrival at Amsterdam, 1813 (Br. II, 1286); — Battle of Brienne, 1814 (Br. II, 1336-7; engraved in conjunction with Lauer); — The Allies enter Paris, 1814; two varieties (Br. 1374-5); — Prince of Wreden, 1814 (Br. 1512); — The Prince of Orange proclaimed Sovereign of Holland, 1811 (two varieties: Catalogues, &c. 3958-9); — Battle of Leipzig, 1813, with busts of Alexander I. and Francis I.

STIGLMAYER, JOHANN BAPTIST (Germ.). Medallist and Coin-engraver, born on 18th October 1791 at Fürstenfeldbruck near Munich, died on 2nd March, 1844 at Munich. His father was an ordinary smith. The youth was first apprenticed to a Silversmith, where he began to show uncommon abilities, which brought him to the notice of the Director of the Mint at Munich, H. v. Leprieur. Under the auspices of his patron, Stiglmayer learned modelling and die-engraving; and after a time was admitted to the Academy of Fine Arts, where he continued to study sculpture. He was a pupil of Pfeifer, and Sträussl. His first work as a Die-sinker was an imitation of a Syracusan coin with the head of Persephone on obv. and an archer on rev., copied from a Cretan coin-type. In 1814 he obtained the post of Assistant-engraver at the Royal Mint under Maximilian I. Before, however, entering office, he received a government grant to visit Italy. There he directed his attention to the technique of bronze-casting, and studied the art of the Renaissance medallists. Whilst in Rome he produced a number of models which were very successful. On his return to Munich in 1822, he was appointed Engraver of the coins at the Mint, which appointment he held until 1830, when he was succeeded by Karl Friedrich Voigt. Besides coin-dies, Stilgmayer engraved many medals. In 1824, he was in Berlin, on the occasion of the casting of the Blücher statue, studying the French achievements in bronze casting. About 1830 he became Inspector of the famous Royal Foundry, which on his death in 1844 he left to his nephew, Friedrich Miller.

For King Ludwig I. of Bavaria Stiglmayer cut the historical conventionsthalers on his accession 1825, Foundation of the Bavaria-Würtemberg Zollverein, 1827, the Royal family, 1828 (illustrated) described in Wittelsbach Medaillen und Münzen,

By him are also the medals of Ludwig I. on the Foundation of the Old Pinacothek 1826, Prize medals of the Academy of Sciences, 'Ludwigs-medaille' for Scholars and Artists (Wittelsb., nos 2628, 2634, 2672). These are signed: ST.F. or S.

Besides these I have noted: ℞. of Marriage by proxy medal of Frederick William, Crown Prince of Prussia, with Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria, 1823.

STIELER, AUGUST FRIEDRICH (Germ.). Brother of Johanna Friedrick Stieler, a native of Dresden; was appointed Mint-engraver at Mayence on 1st August 1765 with a salary of 400 florins. Until 1789 his name occurs in official records, as well as on numerous coins and medals, which are variously signed S., ST., St., A. S., A.F.S. or with his full name.

By him are probably the following works: Commemoration of the Sede Vacante of Mayence, 1774 (signed: A. STIELER); — Third Centenary of Mayence University, 1784.

STIELER, FRIEDRICH (Germ.). Son of August Friedrich Stieler, born at Mayence in 1772, died there at the age of twenty-seven on 18th January 1799. Hennin ascribes to him the Conventionsthaler of 1791, the issue of which was stopped by the war, but I prefer to give it to August Friedrich S. He is said to have been entrusted with the engraving of the obsidional coinage of Mayence in 1793 (5, 2 and 1 Sol pieces: Hennin, nos 504-507). In 1795 his signature F. S. occurs on a commemorative medal or Thaler, with bust of the archbishop Frederick Charles Joseph, and another with view of city and monument, struck in honour of the Austrian general, Charles Joseph Count Clairfait, who defeated Pichegru on 29th October 1795. A medal by the same Engraver commemorates the return of the Elector to Mayence in 1794.

Hennin states that until his death Friedrich Stieler was in the service of the Mint at Mayence (which however was closed in 1796) and that he cut numerous coin- and medal-dies: Ducat 1795, AUREA MOGUNTIA View of city; — Ducat, with bust of the Elector, ℞. SALUS PUBLICA Arms; — Another, without inscription on ℞.

STIELER, JACOB FRIEDRICH (Germ.). Brother of August Friedrich Stieler, was born at Reinsdorf (in the Harz mountains), died at Dresden in 1790. He was a pupil of Meil and others in Leipzig. In 1755 he was appointed Mint-engraver at Dresden, but already in 1751 he had cut coins dies for Poland, consisting of various patterns for a copper coinage.

I have observed J. F. Stieler's signature on a Leipzig Conventionsthaler 1763 of Friedrich Christian, the ℞. of which is by I. F. ô Feral; — Establishment of a School of Artillery at Dresden, 1767 (signed: STIELER, F.); — Memorial medal of Gelert; — Peace of Teschen; — Recovery of the Frederick Augustus III. of Saxony, 1784; — Conventionsthaler 1773 of Clemens Wenzel, Prince of Poland and Duke of Saxony (signed: ST); — Pheasantry laid out by Count Marcolini at Moritzburg, 1782.

STIELER, J. K. (Germ.). This signature occurs in connection with that of J. Rhein on a Portrait-plaquette of Goethe, 1899 (Joseph, 2352).

STIENON, J. (Belg.). A medal dedicated by the city of Ostend to Leopold II., King of Belgium, 1901, is thus signed.

STIERBITZ, FRIEDRICH (Germ.). A Hungarian; contracted to work the Mint of Sorau, May 1622, for a period of six months, but already ceded his rights on 9. August to Johann Jakob Huser. He had previously been Master of the Mint forge (Münzschmiedemeister) at Grossglogau.

STIERLE, JOHANN JACOB GOTTFRIED (Germ.). Medallist, Coin and Seal-engraver, born at Berlin in 1764, died there at the end of September 1806. He was the son of a saddler, and learned engraving at the Die-sinking works of D. Loos. In 1784 he was appointed Medallist and Engraver to the Berlin Mint, which office he held until his death, with an interruption between 1787 and 1791.

By him are many coin-dies of Frederick William II. and III., and he is the author of the so-called 'Sterbethaler', memorial Thaler of Frederick the Great, 1786 (with 17.A.86). He cut dies for numerous STIMPFEL, GEORGE (Germ.). General Mint-warden of Upper Saxony, about 1571.

STIORE, F. (Ital.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, by whom is a commemorative medal of the Third Centennial of the epidemic of Plague at Venice, 1576-1876; it is signed : F. STIORE F.

STIORE, FRANCESCO (Ital.). Mint-engraver at Venice, born at Venice on 18th October 1806, son of one of the workmen at the Mint. He entered the Mint himself in 1818, became Assistant engraver in 1827, and continued to study art at the Academy of Fine Arts. In 1829, his salary was raised by 200 florins; in 1829, 1831, 1832, 1835 and 1843 he received special gratifications for artistic achievements in the coinage (kunstrollen Leistwyen Münzwesen). From 1844 to 1852 Stiore filled the place of second Engraver, and on 8th October 1852 he was appointed to that post with a salary of 600 florins. Among his medallic productions we find : Portrait-medal of Frederick Ferdinand Leopold, Archduke of Austria, 1841; — Capture of Sidon by Archduke Frederick, 1840, and others.

STOCK, CARL (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, by whom is a medal, issued by the Poellath Die-sinking Works of Schrobenhausen, "Wanderversammlung", 1910.

STOCKER (Germ.). Mint-warden, in conjunction with Aschbacher, Mint-master at Hall in Tyrol, 1765-1771. Their joint-initials A.S. occur on the coinage.

STOCKING, JOHANN CHRISTIAN (Germ.). Mint-master at Neuwied 1756, and Poppelsdorf, 1777-1792. His initials I.C.S. occur on the coinage.

STOCKMANN, JOHANN (Austr.). Mint-master at Warsaw, 1810-1811.

STOCKMANN (Austr.). Mint-engraver at Sadogura in Moldavia, 1771-1774, under Russian administration. His signature STOCKMAN occurs on a medal struck to commemorate the establishment of Mars Lodge, at Jassy, Moldavia, in 1774, by Baron Von Gartenburg Sadogusky, then Commission general of the Imperial Russian army. The Mint-master's name F. Comstadius appears also on that medal (Marvin, Masonic Medals, p. 23, XIX).

STOCKMAR, CARL CHRISTIAN (Germ.). Mint-engraver at Werthein, 1766; Warden of the Mint there, 1785; died in 1802.

STOCKMAR, FRIEDRICH (Germ.). Warden of the Mint at Werthein, 1802.

STOCKMAR, KARL CHRISTIAN. Vide CARL CHRISTIAN STOCKMAR.

STOCKMAR, LEONHARDT. Vide JOHANN LEONHARD STOCKMAR.

STOCKMAR, P. F. (Germ.). Medallist and Mint-engraver at Dresden, 1760-1775; brother of Johann Leonhard and Theodor Stockmar. According to Domanig he is the same as Johann Wolfgang Heinrich Stockmar, and Bolzenthal, Dr Burckhardt, Schlickeysen, Nagler and other authorities are wrong in the Christian names they give this Engraver. Dr Burckhardt (Die Münzen und Medaillen des Herzogs Ernst August von Sachsen-Weimar, 1731-1748). Blätter für Münzfreunde 1893, col. 1872, states that Joh. Wolf Heinr. Stockmar was appointed Court-medallist to Duke Ernest Augustus on 9th May 1732, and was still living at Ilmenau, 12th of December 1752. He ascribes to him a medal commemorating the accession of Duke Ernest Augustus to the Principality of Eisenach on the death of Duke William Henry of Saxe-Eisenach, 1741. To the same Engraver, Bolzenthal gives Portrait-medals of Duke Ernest Augustus Constantine.

Dr Domanig (Die Deutsche Medaille), 1907, Pl. 75, nº 671, illustrates a medal, signed P. F. STOCKMAR, commemorating the Marriage of the Prince Elector (later King) Frederick Augustus III. of Saxony with Duchess Amalia Augusta of Palatinate-Zuribrüchen, 1769 (illustrated). By him is no doubt also the medal on the Peace of Hubertusburg, with bust of Francis Josiah, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, 1763; — Foundation of the Masonic Lodge Ernestus at Hildburghausen, 1755 (STOCKMAR F.); —

STOCKMAR, THEODOR (Germ.). Brother of Johann Leonhard and P. F. Stockmar; Mint warden and Engraver at Gotha, 1779-1805; Mint-master at Dusseldorf, 1805-1818. He signed both medals and coin-dies. The signature occurs variously as St.; T. St. F.; T. S.; STOCKMAR F.; TH : STOCKMAR F.

Among his productions, I believe the following may be safely attributed to him : Conventionsthaler of Henry XI. of Reuss-Greiz, 1769 (ST.); — Conventionsthaler of Christian Augustus of Solms-Baruth-Wildenfels, 1770 (ST.); — Visit to Erfurt of Frederick Christian Joseph, Baron Erthal, archbishop of Mayence, 1777; — Fourth Centenary celebrations of the University of Erfurt, 1792; — Successes of the Allies against the French, 1793; signed:

STOCKMAR, WOLFGANG IOHANN HEINRICH (Germ.). Domanig states that the Christian names given by Bolzenthal and others of this Engraver are not correct, and that his initials should be P. F. He was a brother of Johann Leonhard and Theodor Stockmar, and filled the post of Medallist to the court of Saxe-Weimar, Eisenach, during the second and third quarters of the eighteenth century. Vide STOCKMAR, P. F.

STÖHR, ANTON (Austr.). Warden of the Mint at Prague, 1760-1773. He signed his coins A.S., thus Thaler and Zwanziger of Joseph II., varied dates; Thaler of count Leopold Henry of Schlick, 1767.

Stöhr was previouly Mint-assayer for Moravia, 1760.

STÖR, JAKOB (Germ.). A citizen of Hamburg; Warden of the Holstein-Gottorp Mint of Steinbeck near Hamburg, 1601; appointed Mint-warden at Hamburg 8. April 1618, and still in office in 1622.

STÖR, HENNING (Germ.). Mint-master at Wismar, 1661-1670. He issued at his own cost Thalers, 1662, 1666, 1668; Half Thalers, 1668; Quarter Thalers, 1662; Four Schilling pieces, 1662-1670; Schillings, 1661, 1663-69; Sechslings, 1666 and other dates; Dreilings undated, and in 1669 converted his own house in the Schmiedestrasse into a Mint (Münzen und Medaillen der Stadt Wismar, Berl. Münzbl., 1894, 1731).

STÖHR or STOER, THOMAS (Germ.). A large religious medal, representing on one side the Baptism of Christ and on the Rℒ. the crucifixion, is reproduced in Domanig, Die Deutsche Medaille, pl. 88, n° 766, diam. 150 mill., and is there ascribed to Thomas Stoer of Nuremberg, from the signature ST—N which appears upon it.

Thomas Stöhr was a native of Joachimsthal, and came as Goldsmith's apprentice to Nuremberg, where he settled down, and became a Master in 1597 (Rosenberg, op. cit. — Hampe, Nürnb. Ratsrerlässe, II, n. 1996; Domanig, op. cit., p. 163).

STOKES, THOMAS (Brit.). Medallist, Engraver and Die-sinker, born in 1830, died at Alphington (Australia) on 13th June 1910. He arrived in Victoria on 1st of January 1854 and after some two years of unsuccessful prospecting settled in Melbourne. In 1857 he purchased the plant and coining-press which had been sent out to Melbourne in 1853 by W. J. Taylor to strike the Port Philip gold 2 oz., 1 oz., ½ and ¼ oz. and Victorian silver Shilling and Sixpenny pieces.

By 1862 Stokes had got all his machinery brought to perfection, but in 1863 all his plant was thrown idle by the issue in Melbourne of the British bronze coins. Most of the Melbourne Tokens after withdrawal were shipped to Sidney.

Atkins, Colonial Coins and Tokens, 1889, describes a number of Australian tokens by Thomas Stokes, on which the engraver variously styles himself: T. STOKES DIE SINKER SEAL ENGRAVER LETTER CUTTER CHECK & TOKEN MAKER MELBOURNE; THOMAS STOKES MAKER 100 COLLINS ST. EAST & MELBOURNE; T. STOKES MAKER MEL. Besides his own Melbourne Penny and Halfpenny Tokens, Thos Stokes engraved Penny Tokens for Collins & Co., Bathurst, 1864; Love & Roberts of Wagga Wagga, 1865; J. Taylor of Ballarat, 1862 (sev. var.); — W. R. Watson & Co. of Ballarat, 1862 (sev. var.); Hodgson Bros of Bendigo, 1862; R. Calder, W. Froomes, Murray and Christie, G. Ryland, all of Castlemaine, 1862; R. Grieve of Eagle Hawk, 1862; S. Deeble, Evans & Foster, J. Hosie, Miller Brothers, George Nichols, Hugh Peck, Robinson Brothers & Co., T. Warburton, all of Melbourne and dated 1862, several varieties; Gippsland Hardware Co. of Port Albert and Sale, 1862; Barrowclough, R. B. Ridler, Jas. Davey & Co., J. D. Leeson, 1862, all of Richmond; Stead Brothers of Sandhurst, 1862; W. C. Cook of Sandridge, 1862; Thos. H. Cope of South Yarra, 1862; — J. Caro & Co., Christchurch (N.Z.).

The pieces by Stokes, says M. P. Coleman P. Hyman (An Account of the Coins, Coinages, and Currency of Australia, 1893) were very well designed and struck. One of the neatest designs in Stokes' reverses is that with with the vine-branch, surrounded by the legend IN VINO VERITAS. Stokes is responsible for the existence of about two dozen varieties of pence not bearing names other than his own.

After 1863, Thomas Stokes, later STOKES AND MARTIN, issued a large number of Tokens for firms in New South Wales, West Australia, and New Zealand. I have noticed the firm's signature on Auckland Pennies issued by Holland and Butler, Edward Waters, Mason Struthers & Co., etc. The West Australian ones were for John Henderson, and dated 1874 or undated. These were the last tokens struck by the Stokes firm.

Since the tokens went out the firm of Stokes and Martin, now STOKES AND SON, have executed many varieties of Exhibition medals, commemorative and portrait pieces, some of them being very commendable works.

The signature H. STOKES occurs on a medal of the International Exhibition at Melbourne, 1880; it bears on the obverse a fine bust of Queen Victoria.

In 1887 the Jubilee of Queen Victoria proved a busy time for this firm. They issued for the different districts and localities of Australia a large variety of commemorative medals, many with representations of commemorative buildings and monuments erected in various places in honour of that event. A medal intended as a Prize for Melbourne Exhibition at the Colonial Exhibition at Earl's Court, 1894, is also signed STOKES & SON. At the Diamond Jubilee 1897 the firm issued no less than seventy-two varieties of medals, displaying on Rℒ. the arms of different cities, towns, provinces, &c. They also issued coronation medals of King Edward VII., but most of their productions bear a local character.

STOLBERG, Count LUDWIG ZU (Germ.). Pawnee of the Imperial mints of Augsburg and Nördlingen, 1544-74.

STOLBA, A. (Amer.). This signature on a masonic medal which was struck for sale at the Chicago Conclave of Knights Templar, in 1880. The work is poor. A. Stolba is no doubt a Seal-engraver or ordinary Die-sinker (Marvin, p. 264).

STOLTZ, MICHAEL (Germ.). "Schmiedemeister", Smith at the Breslau Mint, 1540, 1541, 1543, and conjointly Mint-master at Liegnitz and Crossen.

Friedensberg does not know for certain if the MS on Ducats of Reichenstein from 1553 to 1555 represents his signature, and whether this Stoltz is identical with the Engraver of the same name who is frequently mentioned in the mint records of Prague, 1578-1593 (Wiener Num. Zeitsch. Bd. 27, p. 190 sq.). The latter's privy-mark was a rose.

STONE, F. FRANK (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist. Born in London in 1863. Followed commercial pursuits until he was between twenty and thirty, when he came under the influence of Richard Belt, at one time Sculptor to Queen Victoria, and in a very short time was doing portrait work. Some of the notable people who sat for him for portrait busts were the late W. E. Gladstone, Cardinal Manning (Jubilee bust), and Dadabhai Naoroji, the latter an Indian statesman.

From London Mr. Stone went to Canada, and thence to California. Has exhibited at Montreal, Sacramento, Chicago, Philadelphia, also at San Antonio and Seattle (Alaska-Yukon). Some of his ideal

At the Brussels Salon de la Médaille, held in 1910, in connection with the Universal Exhibition there, he exhibited a series of medals for the Opening of the Zoological Gardens at Munich : Eagle, 1910; — Sea lion, 1909 ; — Antelope, 1909 ; — Bear; — Sea cat; — Antelope; — Lion, 1909; — Crane, 1909.

STOTHARD, ALFRED JOSEPH (Brit.). Son of the distinguished Painter, Thomas Stothard, was born in 1793, and died on 6th of October 1864. He was a Sculptor and Medallist, and was appointed Medallist to King George IV., of whom he executed a fine Portrait-medal. His works are remarkable for their bold relief, and the taste, fidelity, and beauty of their execution. The medal he produced of Sir Walter Scott, after the bust by Chantrey, is stated by Mrs. Bray to be finest medal that has yet been of the famous novelist.

Among his other medallic productions, the following are the best known : Dr John Leo, first president of the Numismatic Society of London, 1838 (signed : STOTHARD F.) ; — Mehemet Ali Pacha, 1840; — Lord Brougham, 1831, uniface Portrait-medallion ; — Lord Byron, memorial 1824 ; dedication of F. ions, 1779; R. A. 1794, librarian, 1812; designed Wellington's shield, decorated Burghley House and Advocates Library, Edinburgh. He was an intimate friend of Flaxman, Beckford of Fonthill, and Samuel Rogers. Among his best pictures are Dryads finding Narcissus, the 'Canterbury Pilgrims setting forth from the Tabard Inn', and 'The Vintage'. He executed masterly illustrations of Fielding, Richardson, Sterne, 'Robinson Crusoe', Milton, 'Rape of the Lock', Shakespeare, Spenser, and Rogers; his 'Callisto' and 'Zephyrus and Flora' engraved by Blake; his Milton designs by Bartolozzi.

Thomas Stothard's name occurs on the reverses of several medals, which he designed in conjunction with his son A. J. Stothard, who issued in 1826 a series of Portrait-medals of illustrious men, Byron, Lanning, Claxman, Sir Walter Scott, Jams Watt.

STRACHOWSKY (Bohem.). Fiala in his list of Engravers who have produced coins and medals connected with Bohemia gives the name of Strachowsky of Prague, but does not mention the period of his activity.

STRADA. JACOPO (Ital.). Mentioned by Bolzenthal as an Italian Medallist of the second half of the sixteenth century.

STRADA, A. (Ital.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, whose signature I have observed on a Portrait-medal of Giuseppe Verdi, 1901.

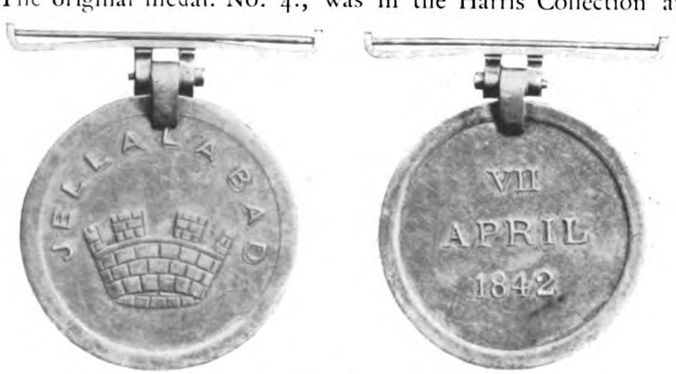
FALSE MEDALS.

A few weeks ago two Officers' sets of decorations were put up at Auction and sold for £. 42. They were catalogued as follows:

"A valuable Group of Decorations.
1. A Waterloo Medal 1815,
2. A Gold and Enamel Badge of Knight Commander Order of Hanover.
3. A Star of a Knight Commander.
4. A Ten Clasp Peninsular.
5. Indian Mutiny.
6. Seven Clasp Peninsular.
7. Gold and Enamel Badge of Knight Commander Order of Hanover.
8. South Africa 1853.
They were all mounted in a glass case, lined velvet.
The First Group belonged to General John Cox, K.H.
The Second Group to Major General William Cox, K.H."
With the exception of two, the whole lot were made up.
No. 1. Waterloo, erased and re-engraved.
No. 2. Gold Badge of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order. This was a genuine badge.
No. 3. Order of the Bath (C.B.) made up.
No. 4. An eight bar Military General Service medal, converted into a ten bar medal by adding two engraved bars; edge of medal erased and re-engraved.
No. 5. Indian Mutiny medal with two bars this was also a genuine medal.
No. 6. A five bar medal converted into a seven bar medal by adding two engraved bars; edge of medal erased and re-engraved.
No. 7. A very poorly made up badge of the Civil division.
No. 8. South Africa medal of 1853; edge erased and re-engraved.
The original medal. No. 4., was in the Harris Collection and was purchased by Messrs. Spink and Son, when that collection was dispersed in 1897, lot 158. No other medals or Orders accompanied the lot.



No 1.

*. War Medals and Decorations.

No 2.

The two medals illustrated will interest Collectors and they will observe what a slight difference exists between original and false Jellalabad medals of the first issue. In the case of No. 1., the forger has gone to the expense of having a die cut, which owing to the simplicity of the design did not involve a very great outlay.

The probable cost of these dies would be about four pounds, and the cost of the medals, eight to ten shillings each, which would yield a lucrative profit to the Factor, when it is remembered, that original medals sell from eight to fifteen pounds each.

Most of the original Jellalabad medals (if not all) are double struck on the obverse side, i. e., an outline appears on the right hand side of the letters usually caused through the Stamper not fitting the medal into the die in the exact place after the first blow, no doubt, owing in this case to the shallowness of the die.

It will be noticed this has carefully been copied but taking into consideration the depth of the false die there would be no need for this fault if ordinary care had been exercised in the stamping, it is therefore quite possible that the double striking is cut in the die.

On comparing a number of original medals I found them all to be from the same die as No. 2.

No. 1. differs as follows:
a. Higher in relief.
b. Divisions inside the Mural Crown.
c. Letters and figures not from the same punches.

THE DURBAR, 1911.

Victoria Cross.
Order of British India.
Indian Order of Merit.

"A fact which will undoubtedly give much satisfaction to all ranks of our Indian Army is that the Victoria Cross can now be won by native officers and men. This is a step in the right direction and one which we have long advocated in these columns; our Indian soldiers have stood loyally by us in many campaigns and their courage and loyalty as a body has been proved over and over again. The text of Lord Hardinge's announcement is as follows: "His Imperial Majesty has been graciously pleased to ordain that from henceforth the loyal Native officers, men, and reservists of his Indian Army shall be eligible for the grant of the Victoria Cross for valour; that membership of the Order of British India shall be increased during the decade following this His Imperial Majesty's Coronation Durbar by fifty-two appointments in the First Class, and by one hundred appointments in the Second Class, and that in mark of these historic ceremonies fifteen new appointments in the First Class and nineteen new appointments in the Second Class shall forthwith be made; that from henceforth Indian officers of the Frontier Militia Corps and the Military Police shall be deemed eligible for admission to the aforesaid Order; that special grants of land or assignments or remissions of land revenue, as the case may be, shall now be conferred on certain Native officers of His Imperial Majesty's Indian Army who may be distinguished for long and honourable service; and that the special allowances now assigned for three years only to the widows of the deceased members of the Indian Order of Merit shall, with effect from the date of this Durbar, hereafter be continued to all such widows until death or re-marriage."

His Imperial Majesty further ordains that: "Every native officer who shall have received the Cross shall from the date of th act by which such decoration has been gained be entitled to a special pension of five hundred and twenty-five rupees a year, and each additional bar conferred under the fourth rule on such native officer shall carry with it an additional pension of one hundred and fifty rupees a year. In the case of a warrant or non-commissioned officer or soldier the special pension shall be one hundred and fifty rupees with seventy-five rupees additional for each additional bar. On the death of a recipient of the Cross these pensions shall be continued to his widow until her death or re-marriage."

CORRECTIONS TO "HAZLITT"

Mr. Hazlitt, in his valuable work "Coinage of the European Continent", "catalogue of European denominations", at the word "Coronato", speaks of Saint George and the dragon on the reverse.

With all respect to Mr. Hazlitt, we beg to differ. The saint represented is not St. George, but St. Michael and the devil, in dragon form. This we will easily prove. We have a late fifteenth century manuscript, giving most important events affecting the ancient town of Troia, in Apulia (our birth-place), from its foundation to the chronicler's time. In writing of Ferdinand I of Aragon, who had made Apulia the theatre of his war with the French pretender, the author gives the following passage (quoted by my uncle Vincenzo Stefanelli in his "Memorie Storiche della citta' di Troia"): "(Ferdinand) hastening to Sansevero seized it by storm, also taking other nearby towns, threatening some and burning others. Among these was Santangelo on the Garganus. There the king and soldiers took great booty, not sparing women, nuns or children. He carried off the treasure of the Church of St. Micheal Archangel. From this treasure the "Coronati of Saint Angelo" were struck."

Above speak for itself. The chronicler, in describing this incident of Ferdinand's time, relates his own personal knowledge.

Beside the above historical testimony, is it not a fact, that Saint George both on the English and Russian coins, always appears mounted on horseback? Also in the usual Christian language the dragon represents the devil. St. George is not an Italian saint. It would seem that we have conclusively proved that the figure on the reserve of the "Coronato" is not Saint George, but Saint Michael.

Mr. Hazlitt, also, in his list of coin denominations, at the word "Barbone" and "Sanctus Vultus" does not seem to have known the historical reason for the appearance of the "Sanctus Vultus" on the "Barbone" of Lucca.

He would make his readers think that the appearance of the "Holy Face" on the coin was not only fanciful, but the diplomatic idea and attempt of the ruler to impress upon his people "some relationship between their ruler and the Deity".

We think Mr. Hazlitt's ideas are incorrect. Firstly: a ruler in Republican Lucca would not attempt to show supreme authority over his people by means of coin types. Secondly: Republican Lucca, in placing the face of Christ upon its coins, did no more than other cities at that time. All free cities were then putting on their coinage the patron saint to insure godly favor and protection. Florence had St. John Baptist; Venice St. Mark; Milan St. Ambrose: Lucca in the Middle Ages worshipped a renowned painting on a wooden table, which work tradition attributed to St. Luke the first Christian painter, according to the popular belief. This painting of the bust of Christ was the pride of the city. It was, of course, put upon the coinage and preferred to any saint. It naturally continued while the Republic lived, with the worship of the holy relic. The progress of art marks the gradual rafinement of the representation of the "Vultus" from the rude and long-bearded head of Christ, from which the coin takes its name of "Barbone" (long beard), down to the more artistic "Vultus" with dress and shoulders of Christ.

THE FIRST COINAGE OF LOUIS XV OF FRANCE

On September 1st 1715 the long reign of Louis XIV ended and his Great Grandson succeeded to the Crown under the name of Louis XV.

The first coinage of the new reign bears date 1716. The king, a child of five years old, is represented looking to the right, in armour and wearing a wig but in spite of these peculiarities in childish costume the coins are distinctly attractive. The obverse legend is LVD XV D G FR ET NAV REX with a cinqfoil below the bust. The reverse shows the three lis of France enclosed in a plain circle above which is a large crown. The legend is as usual at the time SIT NOMEN DOMINI BENEDICTVM with the date and mint letter. The edge of the smaller coins is milled whilst that of the larger coins bears the words SALVUM FAC REGEM DOMINE.

I have examined a good many specimens of this coinage and in nearly every case I have observed more or less sign that the coin has been overstruck on a coin of a different type, and it has usually been clear that the coin used as a flan was one of a similar value and late type of Louis XIV. In some cases I have noticed that the new obverse was on the old obverse and at other times the opposite was the case. On one of the smaller coins in my possession both the old and the new date are to be seen and as the old date is 1715 it is proved that the old coin was one of the last coinage of Louis XIV and this seems to make it clear that the Mint Officials wishing to issue a coinage of the new king as soon as possible used up as flans the unissued coins of Louis XIV. Overstruck coins are found in other cases in the French series but I have not found another case where the spicimens of a coinage show, so generally, signs of being overstruck on other coins.

COINS OF THE REPUBLICA OF LUCCA

Hazlitt, in his Coinage of the European Continent, figures two coins of Lucca (page 230) with, what he, at page 452. calls "the somewhat inexplicable legend" Sanctus Vultus.

In the cathedral of St. Martin at Lucca there is a small eight-sided chapel and in it is preserved a cedar-wood crucifix said to have been carved by Nicodemus. This, the most valued relic in the City, is exhibited three times in the year and the face of the Saviour believed to be a true likeness is known, as Volto Sancto, or the Sacred Countenance.

The Vultus Sanctus has accordingly appeared on the coins of Lucca from an early date. An early series bears the name OTTO REX, OTTO ROMANO REX or OTTO IMPERATOR and these coins were apparently struck in the name of the fourth Emperor of the name of Otto or Otho, 1208-1218, or judging from their style somewhat after his death. A later series bears the name CAROLVS IMPERATOR probably struck in the name of the Emperor Charles IV (1347-1378). Others are of a much more recent period. The legend round the Sacred Countenance is variously SANCTVS VVLTVS, S. VVLTVS. DE. LVCA, or otherwise variously abbreviated, and on one gold coin we find the Sacred Countenance on one side and St Martin and the Beggar, also a favourite device of Lucca, on the other.

COMMEMORATIVE GIFT TO THE BRITISH MUSEUM

THE BLEAZBY COLLECTION OF COINS.

The celebration of the Durbar at Delhi has brought forth some munificent gifts to the Empire of India, and in commemoration of the same event the British Museum has received from Mr. Henry Van den Bergh, through the National Art Collections Fund, the collection of Mahomedan coins of India which was formed by Mr. George Bleazby during a long residence in that country.

The Bleazby collection of Mahomedan coins of India is without question the finest and most extensive that has ever been brought together by a private individual. It numbers 173 specimens in gold, 1,480 in silver, and 995 in billon and copper. For the most part it consists of pieces which have been specially selected for their rarity and fine condition. The series comprises coins of the six dynasties, known as the Sultans of Delhi, and of the Moghul Emperors of India, whose seat of government was also at Delhi, and it forms a magnificent record of the history of India from A. D. 1166, when the victorious Mahomed bin Sam finally crushed the opposition of the Rajputs and became the first Mahomed Ruler of India, till the deposition of Bahadur Shah in 1857.

Mahomedan coins of India have an historical value possessed by no other series, and the Bleazby collection illustrates admirably the rise and fall of the various ruling dynasties for the last 11 centuries, their conquests and their reverses. From the Mint-names alone on the coins we can trace the gradual advance of the Moghuls in the 16th century. For instance, we find Babar, the founder of the Mogul dominion in India, striking coins in the heart of that country; then he is driven back by Shir Shah, who held out against the invaders for 20 years; but on Shir Shah's death the Moghul advance is resumed, and the last members of the Afghan (or sixth) dynasty, fighting with one another, disappear before the victorious armies of Humayun, the son of Babar.

The Mints represented in the collection number 150, and there are coins of rulers who are not known through any other records and whose money hitherto was unrepresented in the British Museum. For students of the history of our great Eastern Dominion these records are invaluable. This very generous gift by Mr. Van den Bergh not only doubles this series of coins in the National Collection, but also places it far ahead numerically and in completeness of any other collection either in India or on the Continent.

It is also worthy of remark that on several previous occasions the National Institution has had valuable contributions from the same donor, notably a magnificent collection of ancient Peruvian Pottery, which was presented a short time back.

INDO-PORTUGUESE NUMISMATICS.

In the article on Portuguese Ceylon Coins, which appeared in the Numismatic Circular of July 1911, a curious mistake occurred through the writer of that article accepting, as correct, a statement made by so experienced an author as the late Dr da Cunha. — On Folio 65 of his "Contributions to the Study of Indo-Portuguese Numismatics" Dr da Cunha, while referring to the issues of D. Pedro II (1667-1706), says: "About this time Goa was visited xxxx by Mr. William Barret, who, writing in 1684" — and proceeds to quote the various coins described by Barret as current, at that time, in Goa, Malacca, &c. giving, in a footnote on Folio 66, his authority, viz : — " Hakluyt's Collection of the early Travels, &c. Lond : 1810 Vol : II, p. 410".

At the time of writing the article on Portuguese Ceylon Coins the writer had not handled any volume of Hakluyt's work, but since has acquired a copy. To his surprise he finds that Dr da Cunha has made a mistake of 100 years in his date. Hakluyt's work : " The principal Navigations, Voyages, Traffiques and Discoveries of the English Nation, " containing the account of the voyage of Mr. William Barret, was first published in 1589, and that Barret's description of the monies current in Goa, Malacca, &c. was written in Aleppo, in the year 1584. Barret's description of a coin called a Patachine could not, therefore, have referred to the coin of 1636 illustrated in the article on Portuguese Ceylon Coins. The Patachine, to which he refers, may, therefore, have had S.T. on the reverse, — but no specimen is known and his description cannot, consequently, be verified. Some gold coins of Goa are known which have, on the reverse, a seated figure of St Thomas between the letters S.T. but no silver pieces are known with S.T. — In the reign of D. João III, the Viceroy, D'Affonso de Noronha (1550-1554), had a silver S. Thomé or Patacõe struck, but of that issue no specimen is known. — No description is given of the type, so it is impossible, at present, to say what design it bore.

It has been well said : " Give a mistake a start and there is no overtaking it " but the writer trusts that, in this case, this correction may meet the eyes of some of the readers of the article on Portuguese Ceylon Coins, above referred to.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.

Dec. 21. — Sir Henry H. Howorth, President, in the chair.

Sir Arthur Evans read a paper 'On the Artistic Engravers of Terina and the Signature of Evænetus on its Later Didrachm Dies.' The first part dealt with the works signed Φ and II, the view that these were engravers' signatures being maintained. Stress was laid on the pictorial method visible on the work of Φ at Terina and Pandosia — strikingly illustrated by the detailed background of the fountain scene, aud by the instantaneous element in such compositions as the Nymph on the hydria, and the hunter, Pan, slipping the leash off his hounds. It was natural, in this and other features, such as the facing head of Hera, to trace the influence of Zeuxis, already invoked by Lenormant in this connexion. On the didrachm of Pandosia signed Φ the inscription on an ithyphallic term hitherto given as ΜΑΛΥΣ was shown to read [Φ] ΑΛΛΩΝ, and the symbol was therefore apparently the " canting badge " of a magistrate. In the case of II the suggestion of works of Attic sculpture, such as those of the balustrade of the Temple of Nikê Apteros, was undoubted, but one version of his Nikê Terina was directly derived from a coin-type of Elis.

In the " rich " style of the later didrachms of Terina, struck shortly after 400 B. C., Syracusan influence becomes dominant — the direct result of Dionysius's campaigns from 391 onwards. The head of Nikê Terina on the earlier of these shows the impress of Cimôn's latest " medallion " style. The heads on the others at once recall those of the decadrachms of Evænetus. The extraordinarily fine condition of a specimen from a recent South Italian find had now enabled Sir Arthur Evans to detect the actual signature ΕΥΑ in microscopic characters on the band above the forehead of the seated nymph. This discovery supplies the first example of the signed work of a Silician artist at an Italian mint. A somewhat later variety of this class, exhibiting a crab — the Brettian symbol — in the exergue, had been with great probability referred by Dr. Regling, in his recent monograph on the coins of Terina, to the date of its occupation by the Brettii — 356 B. C. It was now shown that the crab and the monogram E behind the obverse head had been inserted on an old die dating from the Dionysian period.

SOCIÉTÉ FRANÇAISE DE NUMISMATIQUE.

Séance du 4 novembre..

La Société entend une communication du commandant Babut sur l'atelier de Narbonne.

M. de Billy présente un double tournois portant un signe d'émission encore inconnu.

M. Dieudonné communique une monnaie inédite donnée au Cabinet de France par M. Hazen Hyde; c'est une pièce frappée par Louis XII à Tarascon comme comte de Provence et portant la tarasque comme signe d'atelier.

M. Béranger, au nom de M. Doudé, décrit un teston de François Ier émis à Rouen et qui porte en fin de légende un E qui n'appartient, comme différent, à aucun des maîtres de la monnaie exerçant à cette époque.

Il présente ensuite un jeton en argent de Henri d'Orléans, duc de Longueville, comte souverain de Neuchâtel en Suisse, récemment entré dans sa collection. On n'en connaissait encore qu'un exemplaire en cuivre.

M. Blanchet signale sur un écu et un demi-écu frappés à Bourges en 1726 un signe secret encore inconnu, double point dans l'écu. Il communique ensuite, au nom de M. Luneau, un écu au soleil frappé à Montélimar pour le Dauphiné entre 1498 et 1501, et un gros inédit d'Humbert, dauphin du Viennois.

M. Bordeaux signale divers faits relatifs à la Monnaie de Melle et présente un sceau flamand.

Séance du 2 décembre.

Le commandant Babut fait l'historique des émissions du mahdi à Omdurman et présente quelques spécimens de ses monnaies, qui sont déjà fort rares.

M. Bordeaux expose dans quelles circonstances le Conseil municipal du Havre avait, en 1830, fait frapper une médaille en l'honneur du maire. Il communique aussi une médaille d'orfèvre.

Le docteur Bailhache présente un essai en argent du petit blanc de Charles VII; c'est le plus ancien connu.

M. Ad. Blanchet communique un exemplaire probablement unique de la médaille de Lodovica Felicina Rossi, attribuée à Andrea Cambi de Crémone.

M. Morican signale que les deux points qui existent sur des écus et demi-écus de l'atelier de Bourges, en 1726, se retrouvent sur des pièces émises par d'autres ateliers.

ALPHONSE LEGROS.

Nous avons le regret d'annoncer la mort, à Londres, où il était fixé depuis de nombreuses années, de notre compatriote le peintre et graveur Alphonse Legros. Il était né à Dijon le 8 mai 1837. Après avoir passé dans l'atelier d'un peintre décorateur de Lyon, puis avoir bénéficié, à Paris, de l'intelligent enseignement de Lecoq de Boisbaudran, qui forma tant d'excellents artistes, il entra à l'École des Beaux-Arts en 1855 et commença d'exposer, à partir de 1857, des scènes de genre, des portraits et des scènes religieuses, notamment en 1861, le beau tableau L'Ex-voto du musée de Dijon, qui trahit l'influence de Courbet et demeure son chef d'œuvre, la Lapidation de saint Étienne et Scène de l'Inquisition (1867), L'Amende honorable (1868), qui lui valurent deux médailles. Dès 1866, la vie étant fort difficile pour lui, car son talent un peu austère était peu apprécié du public français il se rendit à Londres sur les conseils de Whistler, y trouva un emploi de professeur, s'y maria et y demeura tout le reste de sa vie. Citons, parmi ses œuvres peintes à partir de cette époque : Un réfectoire, Les demoiselles du Mois de Marie, Portrait du cardinal Manning, des sujets rustiques, etc. Alphonse Legros fut non seulement peintre, mais aussi sculpteur, médailleur et surtout graveur. Son œuvre d'aquafortiste, qui commença dès 1857, est considérable, et ses eaux-fortes comptent parmi les plus belles créations en ce genre. Comme sculpteur, on lui doit notamment un Torse de femme, un Buste de paysan et un masque de Jeune fille, qui sont au musée du Luxembourg avec ses tableaux L'Amende honorable, Le Christ mort et le Portrait de Gambetta, légué récemment par Sir Charles Dilke.

COINS and MEDALS for SALE

Special attention is directed to the fact that every coin or medal catalogued in the following lists is guaranteed to be absolutely genuine (except when expressly stated in the description to be otherwise) and if not approved of can be returned, when the full amount paid will be refunded.

Collectors will also kindly note that every care is taken when compiling the catalogues not to overrate the condition of the pieces but to faithfully represent them according to their merits.

All orders should be sent to Spink & Son Ltd., 17 and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.

"The 32nd still armed with the old 'Brown Bess' musket was at Lucknow — the only Queen's Regiment within many hundreds of miles, — in the midst of a turbulent and malcontent population when the mutiny of the Bengal Army suddenly, in May 1857, placed it in the greatest peril. The heroic defence of Lucknow Residency by the Regiment (and a few loyal natives, commanded by the gallant Anderson and others), from June until the arrival of the first relief under Havelock, on 25th September, 1857, and the tragic fate of the detachment under Captain Moore at Cawnpore, are glorious episodes in the annals of war and records of British endurance. When Sir Colin Campbell arrived at the end of November, the 32nd was amongst the troops withdrawn to Cawnpore, where it witnessed the overthrow of the Gwalior Contingent. Next it was with Maxwell at Calpee, again at Lucknow and Cawnpore, and afterwards through the Oude Campaign, and in the pursuit of the rebel chief Benhi Madhoo across the Gogra. When the contest was over, Her Majesty was graciously pleased to direct that the 32nd be formed into a Light Infantry corps, in consideration of the enduring gallantry displayed by the defence of the Residency of Lucknow".

NAVAL GENERAL SERVICE.

Capture of the Russian ship Sewolod.

97326 One bar, Centaur 26th Aug. 1808. Verified. E. R. 10 » »
The Recipient served on board as Ordinary Seaman. The obverse of medal is slightly damaged otherwise extra fine.
⁂ "A Russian fleet of nine sail of the line, three 50 gunships, eight frigates and smaller vessels, in all 24 sail anchored in Hango bay, Swedish Finland on the 19th August. On the 20th Rear Adm. Sir Wm Hood in the Centaur, 74 Capt. Webley, with Implacable 74, Capt. J. B. Martin, joined the Swedish squadron of eleven sail of the line, but unfortunately more than a third of the crews were on the sick list with scurvy.
On the 25th the combined fleet weighed from Oro roads, and on the morning of the 26th at 4h., the two British ships were many miles to windward of the Swedes; and the Implacable, two miles to windward of the Centaur, was within five miles of the Sewolod the sternmost Russian ship. After several tacks, the Implacable, at 7 h. 30 m., ranged up alongside her, and so vigorous a cannonade was kept up that the Sewolod struck her colours.
At this moment, the Russian Admiral was within two miles of the Implacable bearing down to the rescue of the Sewolod. The Centaur having recalled her consort, the two British ship bore up to the Swedish fleet, then ten miles to leeward. The Implacable had 6 men killed and 26 wounded. About noon, the Russian fleet anchored in the port of Rogerwick, leaving the Sewolod aground on a shoal near the entrance of the harbour.
In the afternoon, the 74 having floated off, a division of boats from the Russian squadron proceeded to her assistance.
Sir Samuel Hood determined to prevent this, bore up, to cut her off before the boats could arrive.
The Centaur ranging alonside, discharged her guns with great execution, and then lashed the bowsprit of the Russian ship to the Centaur's mizen-rigging. Much valour was displayed on both sides, and after an hour's gallant fighting, the Sewolod's colours were again struck. The prize having taken the ground, was set on fire and burnt to the water's edge. The Centaur had three men killed; Lieut. P. Lawless and 26 wounded.

97328 One bar, Off Mardoe 6th July 1812. Verified. V. F. & R. 12 » »
The recipient served as Lieutenant on board the "Dictator".
⁂ On the 6th July 1812 the Dictator, 64, Captain J. P. Stewart, with brigs Calypso, Podargus & Flamer, attacked and destroyed the Danish 40 gun frigate Nayaden and three 18 gun brigs, 12 miles up a river at Mardoe, on the coast of Norway.
In this gallant enterprise the British had 9 killed, 35 wounded.
Vide Nicolas.
The above officers services are recorded in O'Byrnes, he was particularly mentioned for his gallant conduct off Mardoe.

ered at 17 h. A.M. by the 74-gun ship Venerable, Capt. James Andrew Worth, bearing the flag of Rear Admiral P.C. Durham, in company with the 22-gun ship Cyane, and the Jason, French letter-off marque they had captured. After a chase throughout the day, the Venerable arrived within hail of the Alcmène, the leewardmost frigate, at 6 h. 15 m. P.M. and had opened her fire as the guns came to bear, when the Alcmène put her helm up, and under all sail laid the British 74 on board. A very short struggle decided her fate and before 6 h. 25 m. The French colours were hauled down by the British boarders, headed by Capt. Worth. In this short conflict the Alcmène, out of a crew of 319 had 32 men killed and 50 wounded including among the latter the gallant Capt. Alexr Ducrest de Villeneuve. The loss of the Venerable consisted of 2 men killed and 4 wounded. As soon as the prisoners were shifted, the Cyane and Jason made sail in pursuit of the Iphigénie. In the evening of the 19th the Venerable was fast approaching the fugitive frigate, and at daylight on the 20th had arrived within two miles of her. A running fight was maintained until 8 h. A.M., when, after throwing over board her boats, and cutting away her anchor without effect, the Iphigénie struck her colours without sustaining any loss of men.

97330 One bar Boadicea 18th Sept. 1810. Verified. V. F. & V. R. 15 » »

The Recipient served on board the Boadicea as Midshipman. Only 18 Officers and men received this very rare interesting bar. Full particulars of this officers services are given in O'Byrne, he attained to the rank of Commander on the 28th Aug. 1828.

 Capture of the French frigate " Venus ".

The 38-gun frigate Boadicea, Commodore Rowley, with " Otter " sloop and " Staunch " gun-brig, lying in St Paul's bay. Isle of Bourbon, discovered, abreast of St Denis, the French 40-gun frigate Venus, and Victor corvette with the late British 32-gun frigate Ceylon, which they had just captured. The Boadicea and consorts immediately weighed, and went in pursuit.

At 8 h. A.M., the Victor took the Ceylon in tow; but, at 3 h. 30 m., finding the British gaining rapidly upon them, the latter removed her men from the prize, and, hauling up, made sail towards the Isle of France. The Venus then stood towards the Boadicea, who, having ran her opponent alongside, at 4 h. 4 m. P.M. compelled her to surrender, after a defence of ten minutes, in which she had nine men killed and fifteen wounded; the Boadicea having only two men wounded. Taking the Venus in tow, the Boadicea returned to the Isle of Bourbon, where the Otter also conducted the Ceylon. The Venus a fine ship of 1100, was taken into the British service, and, to, perpetuate the ship so heroically defended by Captain M. Willoughby at Grand-Port, was called Néréide.

97331 One bar, Victorious with Rivoli. Verified. V. F. & V. R. 10 » »

The Recipient was a Private in Royal Marines.

 Capture of the French " Rivoli ". On the 21st Feb. 1812, the 74-gun ship Victorious, mounting 82 guns, Capt. John Talbot; and 18-gun brig Weazel, Capt John Williams Andrew, cruising off Venice, at 3 h. P.M. discovered and chased the French 74-gun ship Rivoli, mounting 80 guns Capt. J.B. Barré; 16-gun brigs Jena and Mercure, and Mamelouck of 8 guns, with two gun boats.

The whole had sailed that morning from Venice, bound to the Port of Pola, in Istria. At 4 h. 15 m. A.M. On the 22nd the Weazel overtook the Mercure, and, after, engaging within pistol shot for half an hour, the French brig blew up. At 4 h. 30 m. A.M., the Victorious having arrived within pistol-shot of the larboard quarter of the Rivoli, a furious combat commenced, the two ships standing towards the Gulf of Trieste, with royals set and courses brailed up. In the early part of the action Captain Talbot received a severe contusion from a splinter which nearly deprived him of his sight and the command devolved upon Lieut. Thos Ladd Peake.

After the action had continued three hours and the Rivoli had become unmanageable Lieut. Peake recalled the Weazel, which at 8 h. A.M. stood across the bows of the Rivoli, and raked her twice. Meanwhile the Victorious maintained a steady cannonade, and at 8 h. 5 m. shot away the mizen-mast of the French ship. In another quarter of an hour the Rivoli fired a lee gun hailed the Victorious that she had struck. Her loss amounted to 400 killed and wounded, out of a crew of 810 men. The Victorious had 27 killed, her captain and 98 wounded.

The Recipient served as Ord. Seaman on board the Seahorse.

 Of the many expeditions up the bays of the rivers of the United States during the war none equalled in brilliancy of execution that up the Potomac to Alexandria. This service was entrusted to Captain Alexander Gordon of the 38-gun frigate Seahorse.

After the British had retired from Washington the Americans took strong measures to oppose Captain Gordons return down the Potomac and to " Punish the base incendiaries ".

The American news paper editors, for some days told their readers to expect the destruction of the British Squadron — " It is impossible the ships can pass such formidable batteries, commanded by our naval heroes, and manned by our invincible seamen. We'll teach them how to draw up terms of capitulation ". — After having gallantry defeated all the efforts of the enemy and completely silencing their batteries the British Seahorse and her companion sailed out of the Potomac and came to an anchor in safety on the spot whence they had weighed 23 days before. The loss was 7 killed and 35 wounded.

GREEK COINS.

ENTELLA.

Entella, now called Rocca d'Enteila, is situated on the left bank of the river Hypsas, about twenty-five miles from its mouth and from Selinus, and about the same distance from the sea on the north shore of Sicily.

The ancient traditions assign its origin to the Elymi. Tzetzes (in his notes on Lycophron, 964) tell us it was founded by Acestes, and named after his wife Entella (p. 106, Oxford Ed. of 1697).

Silius Italicus alludes to the same tradition (XIV, 205). Servius in his Notes on Virgil (Æn., V, 73), ascribes the foundation of Entella to Elymus — "A prince of the Trojans who is said to have founded the cities of Asca, Entella and Segestum in Sicily. Others say that he came to Sicily, after the burning of Troy, with Acestes; others state that Elymus was a bastard son of Anchises, a king of the native race of Sicily, and that Eryx was his brother."

Virgil himself (in V, 387) describes the pugilistic combat between Entellus and Dares, and speaks of Entellus as the aged friend of Acestes.

Entella is not reckoned by Thucydides among the cities of the Elymi, to whom he only assigns Eryx and Egesta.

No historical mention of Entella appears to be found as early as the coins of that city, the first of which were issued during the Transitional Period. Diodorus Siculus is the earliest writer to mention the city, and his reference to it relates to a date more than forty years after the end of the Transitional period.

Silius Italicus (XIV, 204) speaks of "the city of numerous and green vineyards."

"largoque vireus Entella Lyaeo."

Cicero speaks of the people of Entella, praising their industry "Cognoscetis judices Entellinorum summi laboris summæque industriam" (in Verram, Act. II, liber III).

The site is described by Fazello as a position of great natural strength, surrounded by precipices on all sides but one, and having a tableland of considerable extent on its summit (Fazello, De Reb. Sic., X, p. 472).

The earliest coins of Entella are attributed by Adolf Holm to the period 461-430 B.C. (III, p. 602) but in the British Museum Catalogue (p. 60) they are attributed to the "Period of Archaic art."

They are called Litræ by Adolf Holm.

I. Obv. Female figure to left wearing a long chiton with diploïs and chlamys over both arms, sacrificing with patera at a lighted altar.

Rev. ΛƎTЧƎ. A man-headed bull to right.
Weight of specimen in Brit. Mus. : 8.7 grains.
II. Obv. Similar type, plain border.
Rev. ЄΛTЄΛ. Similar type.
Weight of specimen in Brit. Mus. : 12.8 grains.
III. Obv. Head of young Heracles to left, wearing lion's skin.
Rev. ЄΛT; around, ○○○ ○○○ : border of dots.

Weight of specimen in Brit. Mus. : 4.7 grains.
This is described by Adolf Holm as a Hemilitron. The style of the specimen in the Brit. Museum is decidedly archaic.

THE TYPES.

The female figure on these early litræ may perhaps be meant for Demeter, for her head appeared on some of the later coins of that city, and Demeter seems to have been popular in that part of Sicily, for a figure of that goddess appears on the litræ of Enna about 450 B.C.

The only other similar figures on coins of Sicily appear to be the nymph Himera sacrificing with a patera on coins of that city, and that on the coins of Eryx.

When the figure of a goddess is accompanied by no symbol or object especially significant of any particular deity the attribution of a name to the figure is always doubtful.

It is natural to ask why the great goddess Demeter should be represented as sacrificing with a patera at an altar; to whom did she offer the libation?

On coins of the Roman Empire we constantly find such Personifications as Concordia, Bonus Eventus, the Genius of the Roman people, Juventus, Liber Pater, and others represented as offering libations with a patera.

But we also see Jupiter himself with his eagle by his side and a fulmen in his hand standing by his altar, and, on a denarius of Titus, Jupiter stands with a patera by an altar. Juno also is represented with a patera, and Venus also holds the patera and sceptre on coins of Orbiana. Vesta holds the patera and torch, on coins of Vitellius, and Julia Domna. On coins also of Septimius Severus we find Hera, in a long chiton and peplos, holding a patera and sceptre.

As the Romans placed the patera in the hands of the greater divinities Jupiter, Venus, Juno, Hera, and Vesta, the coin on which probably Demeter is represented is not out of harmony with the symbolism of the ancients.

The figures thus represented must be merely symbols of the worship due to those divinities. It hardly seems likely that the artist meant to suggest any service rendered by the deity represented, he wished rather to depict the deity, and the idea of the service due to him, and did so by making the deity perform the service himself. We are not warranted by the literature of Greece in making out any allegorical meaning for the type.

ERYX.

Nothing seems to have been recorded of this city by the ancient historians during the period 480-450 B.C. Thucydides (VI, 2) claims both Eryx and Segesta, as cities of the Elymi, and relates the old story of their being descended from the Trojan refugees.

We have therefore no other witnesses concerning Eryx but the coins during this period.

Adolf Holm attributes these to the period 461-430 B.C. The friendly connection of the two cities Eryx and Segesta is made certain by a coin in the collection of the Duc de Luynes which bears besides the inscription EPYKINO on the Obverse, also ΣЄГЄΣTAION on the Reverse. The occurrence of the strange word ΣIB on one of the coins also points to the same close connection of the two cities.

THE TYPES.

The fame of Venus Erycina is so great that the first thought on seeing a female head on a coin of that city is to attribute it to Aphrodite, but when we look at the type of the Reverse, and find that it is the town badge of the allied city Segesta, the question arises as to whether the female head on the Obverse may not be that of the nymph Segesta. It is however possible and probable that the Obverse type represents the goddess of Eryx, and the Reverse the town-badge of Segesta. The earliest coin of Eryx bearing a goddess with the symbol of Aphrodite, the dove, and with Eros before her is a tetradrachm of the fine art period — 415-400 B.C.

On the litræ of that period the dog type is still found on the Reverse, with Aphrodite on the Obverse. This long continuance of the hound-type is noticeable; and evidently the same town-badge was used by the citizens of both Eryx and Segesta. The coins illustrate the fact of the long continued friendship which existed between these cities.

There does not appear to be any evidence of a Phoenician origin for the cult of Aphrodite at Eryx as the influence of the Carthaginians did not affect the city until about 410 B.C.

We see in regard to the cities which were more thoroughly Phoenician, that Greek coins with representations of Greek cults were copied, and no original Phoenician designs were invented. It is therefore most probable that the goddess of Eryx was the Greek Aphrodite and not the eastern Astarte.

COINS OF THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD.

Litræ.

I. Obv. Head of Aphrodite of Eryx?, full-face; hair wavy, a formal curl hanging down on each side of the face : border of dots.

Rev. ϽΛ ΛI ΚV ЯƎ. A hound to right, looking back, wearing a collar.

Weights of specimens in Brit. Mus.: 10.5 and 12.8 grs.

II. Obv. IRVKA / ꓭ I ⊥. A female figure standing to left, wearing long chiton with diploïs, sacrificing with patera at a lighted altar (The B. M. Cat. has E for I).

Rev. A hound to left; above, a wheel of four spokes: plain border.

Weight of specimen in Brit. Mus. : 13.1 grains.

III, ꓤ O ꓤ IꓘVꟻƎ. A similar figure, with both arms extended, and chlamys over her right shoulder.

Rev. A hound with nose down as on the scent; above, a branch of ivy with berries; in exergue, volutes : border of dots.

Weight of specimen in Brit. Mus. : 12.4 grains.

IV. Similar to No III, but on the Reverse a honeysuckle ornament above the hound.

Didrachm.

V. Obv. Head of Aphrodite? to right.

Rev. IPVKAII. A hound; three ears of corn.

The coin of Segesta, with a similar Reverse, with the three ears of corn belongs to the fine Art Period. If we are right in assigning this coin from its style to the Transitional period, either the type was designed and first employed at Eryx, or there may have existed coins of Segesta bearing this device belonging to the Transitional Period.

As Segesta was the more powerful city we expect to find the mint-masters leading those of Eryx, and are surprised at a design appearing to have been produced earlier at Eryx than at Segesta.

the Medal of Merit for Arts and Sciences, instituted by Duke Ernest II. of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, 1888-89, and issued in 1891.

I do not know whether this Engraver is the same person as the artist who signed K. STROBEL on a Portrait-medal of Francis Joseph I. of Austria, 1873, issued by J. Christelbauer, Vienna.

STROBEL, HANS (Germ.). Warden of the Mint at Augsburg, 1580.

STROBL, JOHANN (Germ.). Goldsmith at Munich, circ. 1697. Kull refers to him in Mitth. der bayer. Num. Gesellschaft, XX, 99.

STROEHLIN, Dr PAUL FRÉDÉRIC CHARLES (Swiss). Numismatist, Dealer in coins, medals, stamps, engravings, books, &c., born 19. September 1864, died at Geneva, 4. March 1908. Son of Dr J. B. Stroehlin and Mlle Amiel, sister of the well-known philosopher. He was educated at Geneva, and studied also at Leipzig and Berlin, 1884-1887. In 1888 he returned to Geneva and three years later started, in conjunction with Dr A. Ladé, a coin and medal-business under the trade name of PAUL STROEHLIN ET Cie. The association was broken in 1898. From 1890 to 1908 Stroehlin was President of the Swiss Numismatic Society, of which he had been a member since 1879. He edited for many years the Revue suisse de numismatique, and since 1904 also the Journal des Collectionneurs. His Répertoire général de médaillistique, Annuaire de numismatique, and other works were never brought to completion.

P. C. Stroehlin formed a large collection of Swiss and foreign coins and medals, some of which he disposed of during his life-time, but the bulk was sold by auction at Geneva, November 1909 and February 1911, and in London, July 1910, under my direction. The catalogue which I compiled comprizes over 10.000 lots, and the collection realized £ 15.000.

Paul Stroehlin & Cie issued a number of medals, which bear the firm's signature. Among these: Réunion générale des Officiers, 1892 (engr. by L. Jamin); — Medal of the Swiss Numismatic Society, 1890; — A. Morel-Fatio, 1893 (G. Hantz); — Premium of Apprentices-school of St. Gallen; — St. Gallen Cantonal Rifle meeting at Lichtensteig, 1897 (designed by Stauffacher); — Inauguration of a new Masonic temple at Geneva, 1898; — Private Jeton, with arms of Geneva (N, R and E), &c.

Dr Stroehlin was a Knight of the Order of Christ of Portugal.

A Portrait-Jeton, struck in gold on a square flan, of Dr Stroehlin, was presented to him by the Swiss Numismatic Society, at the Fribourg meeting, 1904.

STROEMER, ANDREAS (Swed.). Mint-master at Stockholm, 1684-1699; his signature occurs on the currency under various forms: A. S.; — STR (mon.); — AS (mon.).

STROMAIR, JAKOB (Germ.). Mint-master (probably) at Eichstädt, 1386-1389.

STROMEYER, GEORG (Germ.). Warden of the Mint at Weinberg, 1588.

STRONE, HANS (Germ.). Mint-workman at Bernstadt, 1681.

STRONGI'TH'ARM, otherwise LONGMAN & STRONGI'TH'ARM (Brit.). Engravers, Jewellers and Silvermiths, Die-sinkers and Medallists, for many years established at 1 Waterloo Place, London S. W. The present owner is Mr. E. C. Ball.

This firm has been noted for all kinds of die-sinking work, seal-engraving, and trade in medals, miniatures, &c. Their signature STRONGI'TH'ARM occurs on some medals. I have noticed it, for instance, on a centenary medal of 'The Times' news-paper, with portrait of Mr. Walter, the founder, Bearwood, 1885.

STROUSSACK, JOHANN (Swiss). Mint-warden at Fribourg, 1473-74. He was a brother of the goldsmith Stephan S., and son of Hans S., who was probably also a Goldsmith or Moneyer.

STUART, GILBERT (Amer.). Portrait-painter, born in Narragansett, Rhode Island, U. S. A., 1755; came to England and worked with Benjamin West, 1775, returning in 1792; died in 1828. The painter of Washington.

"The head of Liberty on the Dollar of 1795 was designed by Stuart, at the request of the Director; the painter facetiously remarking that Liberty on the other coins had run mad — referring to the dishevelled hair on the head of Liberty on the previous coins — we will bind it up, and thus render her a steady matron".

While in England, Stuart painted the portraits of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Benjamin West, W. Woollett, Alderman Boydell, John Kemble, Dr Fothergill and many persons of less note. But his best work in this country is a full-length portrait of a Mrs. Grant skating in St. James's Park. It is in the collection of Lord Charles Pelham Clinton. Of his American portraits, that of Washington is the chef-d'œuvre. He painted the President several times.

STUART (Brit.). A clever Medal-chaser and Die-engraver, who flourished about the middle of the eighteenth century. He was much employed, by Mr. Hollis, as a skilful workman, and it is well-known that he designed the medal, executed by Thomas Pingo, excellence. But it is quite possible that many of the retrospective medals usually ascribed to Stuart are not by him. The following are however likely productions of this engraver : Coronation medal of Edward VI. ; — Henry VIII., as head of the Church; — Philip and Mary, portraits on either side ; — Mary (after Trezzo) ; — Admiral Blake (after Abr. Simon) ; — Bulstrode Whitelock (after Abr. Simon) ; — Elizabeth Cleypole (after John Kirk) ; — Thomas, Earl of Southampton (after Thos Simon) ; — Sir Edward Nicholas (after Simon) ; — Abraham Simon (after a portrait in wax by the artist himself) (vide supra, p. 510) ; — Thomas Simon (after an unknown original) (vide supra p. 519) ; — Anne, Countess of Dorset ; — Anne, Queen of Great Britain (illustrated), in the late King Edward's collection ; — Touch-piece of Cardinal York, son of the Pretender James III., as Henry IX. ; — Queen Mary Tudor, oval medal described by Till, "as a most exquisite work, being first cast and then finely tooled".

Portrait-medallion of Queen Anne, wife of James I.

In a recent Sale catalogue, a number of chasings by Stuart brought a high price; these comprised : Oliver Cromwell and General Fairfax : Æ. Medal ; obv. OLIVAR. D. GR. &c., bust to left ; Rℒ. GENERAL FAIRFAX, Bust to left. Sir Thomas Fairfax ; — oval Æ Badge, in wreath border ; Rℒ. Arms on garnished oval between branches of laurel and palm. Lord Inchiquin ; — Æ. Medal ; Rℒ. inscription, &c., in six lines. Sir John Hotham ; — Æ. Medal ; obv. MORS. MIHI. VITA, bust to right, etc.

STUBENRAUCH, KARL (Germ.). Mint-engraver (?) and Medallist at Darmstadt, 1839-1848 ; emigrated about that time to America and settled down at St. Louis, U. S. A.

The only medallic work by him I have come across is the Medal of John A. Logan, patriot, statesman, model volunteer ; delegate 21st Nat'l Encampment ; Grand Army of the Republic. It is dated 1820.

STUCKHART (also STUCKGART or STUCKART), FRANZ (Hung.). Medallist and Die-sinker, born at Tyrnau in Hungary 1781, died in Vienna, 5. December 1857. His name occurs for the first time in the Prague Mint-records in 1799, when he applied for a situation as Engraver. From that date till 1806, he was employed at the Mint of Prague. In 1801, he is mentioned as der ebenso geschickte als fleissige Diurnist Franz Stuckhart. From 1806 to 1809, we find him at the Kremnitz mint ; 1809-1815 at the Mint of Vienna ; in 1815 he was sent to Schmölnitz, and on 1. September 1816 he resigned voluntarily his post at the Austrian mint, to accept the office of Engraver at the Polish mint of Warsaw.

By Stuckhart are the following productions : Baptismal Medal ; — Confirmation Medal ; — Memorial medal of Archduchess Maria Christina ; Rℒ. Mausoleum in Vienna, 1798 ; — Emperor Joseph II ; Rℒ. Statue in Vienna ; — Francis I. and his Allies, 1815 ; — Marriage of Emperor Francis I. with Maria Ludovica Beatrix, 1808 (obv. only) ; — Napoleon I.'s marriage in Vienna with Marie Louise, 1810 ; — Birth of the King of Rome, 1811 ; — Prince Schwarzenberg and Prince Metternich, 1814 (2 var.) ; — Return of Pius VI. from his captivity in France, 1814 ; — Karlsbad Mineral Springs ; — Medal of St. Anthony of Padua ; — Large Marriage medal ; — Large Prize medal with bust of Francis I. ; — Kosciusko, memorial medal, 1817 ; — Large Anniversary medal with Minerva ; — Austrian Encampment of troops near Prague, 1804 ; — Mozart, 1791 ; — Allegorical medal of Inseparability (Two peacocks, UNZERTRENNLICH) ; — Allegorical medal on indissoluble Friendship ; — The passing Century (1800) ; — The Patron Spirit ; — In praise of Women (EHRE DEN FRAUEN! etc.) ; — Friendship-medal ; — St. Anne ; — Battle of Waterloo, with busts of Blücher and Wellington, 1815 ; — Concordia medal with the bust of Kaiser Francis ; — Empress Ludovica ; — Napoleon and Marie Louise ; — Johannes von Nepomuk ; — Flora ; — Ceres ; — Bacchus ; — Saturnus ; — Shooting medal ; — The Holy Supper ; — Varied types of Christening, Confirmation, Birthday medals, &c. ; — Clemens Wenzel Lothar Prince Metternich, 1814 ; — J. W. Tuscany, 1807 ; — Prize medals of 1833 ; — Visit of Emperor Francis II. to Prague, 1804 (Rℒ. only) ; — Marie Palth, of Prague ; — Maria Wanderbit, of Prague, 1818 ; — Prize Medal for Diligence, 1821 ; — Frederick Augustus of Saxony, Prize medal for diligence ; — Recovery from illness of Francis II., 1826 ; — Peace of Luneville, 1801 (in conjunction with A. Guillemard) ; — The Austrian Volunteers, 1813 ; — Peace of Paris, 1814 (2 var.) ; — Wellington's Victories in the Peninsula, 1813-1814 ; — Peace of Paris, 1815 ; — Centenary of Josef Haydn, 1832 ; — Johannes Meli, Sicilian poet, † 1815, etc.

By Stuckhart are also various coin-dies. The puncheons for the copper Quarter Kreutzer 1816, preserved in the Vienna mint, bear his initial S.

His medals are variously signed : F. ST. ; — St. ; — ST ; — F. STUCKGART F. ; — STUCKHART ; — STUCKHARDT ; — STU ; — F. Stuckgart f.

STUDER, BERNARD ANTON (Swiss) of Lucerne, Goldsmith 1722-66, Mint-master there, 1753.

STUDER, JOHANN GOTTFRIED (Germ.). Mint-master at Dresden, 1813-1832. His initials G. S. or I. G. S. occur on the currency issued by him of Frederick Augustus I., King of Saxony, 1806-1827.

STUDER, MELCHIOR (Swiss). A native of Lucerne ; was apprenticed at the Lucerne Mint 1594 ; Mint-master in Uri 1608 ; then at Lucerne 1608-1619 ; died in 1620. In 1608 Studer only coined hammered money, but in 1610 he struck Dicken. The Lucerne Mint reached the zenith of its activity under him, and between 1616-1620 money to the amount of 396000 Gulden were coined there. Louis Joly, Jean Gottard, Nicolas Sextier of Nancy and Jean Forin of Romlisberg in Lorraine sold to Studer in 1616 for the sum of 675 Florins a coining-press from which Schillings were issued.

The following entry occurs in the Lucerne Mint-records :

STÜBER, FRIEDRICH LUDWIG (Germ.). Mint-master at Dantzig and Elbing, 1760-1767. His initials F. L. S. occur on the coinage. We find his name also as F. L. Stieber.

STÜCKELBERG, JOHANN MELCHIOR ERNST (Swiss). A painter of Basle, born on 22nd February 1831, died at the age of 72 in 1903, pupil of Dietlerdas, Dykmans and Wappers in Antwerp ; studied later in Paris, Munich (1854) and Italy (1856-57) ; visited also Holland, 1863, 1885, Madrid 1868, and settled down at Basle. He painted four frescoes for the Tellskapelle on the lake of Lucerne ; " Die Stauffacherin " (Parliament Buildings, Berne), " Marientag im Sabinergebirge " (Basle Museum). The Museums of Basle, Cologne, Geneva, St. Gallen, Winterthur, Zurich and others possess characteristic paintings by him, of fine poetical inspiration and harmonious style. With Böcklin and Sandreuter, he is one of the three artists who made the name of Basle famous in the nineteenth century.

dem Masse bekannt ist, als es die Zahl und die Qualität seiner Arbeiten eigentlich fordern. Während den wenigen anderen deutschen Medailleuren längst die öffentliche Würdigung zuteil geworden ist, muss Paul Sturm merkwürdiger-und ungerechterweise noch auf die Anerkennung seines bedeutenden und schönen Werkes warten.

"Paul Sturm hat vor den meisten seiner Kunstgenossen einen erheblichen Vorzug: er kam aus dem Handwerk und behielt auch sein Lebtag die handwerkliche Gediegenheit, die im Eindruck seiner Werke nicht an letzter Stelle zur Geltung kommt. Wie er schon in seinem äusseren Habitus der schlichte Mann der Werkstatt ist, so tragen seine Medaillen schon für den oberflächlichen Blick den Stempel der handwerklichen, werkstattmässigen Tüchtigkeit. Damit hängt eng zusammen, dass Sturm in seinem Kunstgebiete eine schwerwiegende Reform einführte, die Wiederentdeckung eines in tiefe Vergessenheit geratenen Verfahrens, nämlich den Steinschnitt. Während der moderne Medailleur — besonders die Franzosen — ein grosses Modell aus Ton oder Plastilin herstellt, darnach den Gipsabguss macht und diesen zum Zwecke der Reproduktion in Bronze mechanisch verkleinern lässt, ist es Sturms prinzipielles Bestreben, das Modell möglichst in genau derselben Grösse herzustellen, wie sie später die fertige Arbeit haben soll. Sein Hauptmaterial ist der gewöhnlich zur Lithographie verwendete solenhofener Stein; um ihn zu bearbeiten, bedarf er keines Hilfsmodelles, sondern nur einer Skizze einer orientierenden Zeichnung, die meistens auf den Stein selbst gebracht wird. Der Stein gestattet die subtilste Ausführung, er ist so feinkörnig, dass die geringste Modellierung darauf sichtbar wird, Stichel und Eisen übermitteln dem Stein die leiseste Bewegung der Haud und geben den einzelnen Schnitten die Kennmarke der Impression. Das Material gibt unmittelbar den Eindruck wieder, den der Künstler von einer Persönlichkeit erhalten hat, es ist nicht erst ein Überziselieren nötig, wie später bei der gegossenen oder geprägten Bronze. Aus diesem Grunde haben auch die Steinschnitte vor den in Bronze oder in einem anderen Material ausgeführten Medaillen ihren überragenden Wert. Der Steinschnitt wird aber auch zugleich dem anderen Sturmschen Kunstprinzip, der Herstellung in Originalgrösse, gerecht; die alten Künstler, die Pisani, die Beham, verfuhren nicht auders, denn von den modernen Verkleinerungsmethoden wussten sie noch nichts. Die alte Kunstübung wollte die Individualität des Porträtierten, wie sie sich im Künstlerauge spiegelte, zur Darstellung bringen. Die moderne Reproduktionsart erlaubt freilich, eine Menge Details auf die Medaille zu bringen, aber sie bekommen durch die Komprimierung eine unangenehme Verschärfung, die Übergänge sind hart, die Flächen begrenzen sich allzu genau. Man hat in einer nach einem Plastilinmodell hergestellten Medaille kein eigentliches Kunstwerk vor sich, sondern vielmehr bloss ein photographisches Abbild des grossen Modells, der Steinschnitt trägt dagegen die unmittelbare Faktur der kunstlerischen Haüd. Es lässt sich auch behaupten: eine Medaille, die nach einem Steinschnittmodell hergestelltist, hat einen anderen, weit gediegeneren und abgeklärteren Charakter, als nach Wachs oder Plastilin oder Ton. Denn der Modellierungsmodus dieser Materiale prägt der Arbeit schon in der Herstellung selbst ihren Stempel auf. Der ursprüngliche Steinschnitt wie die nach ihm hergestellte Medaille hat daher die grössten Vorzüge vor den Resultaten des mechanischen Verfahrens. Es ist ja freilich sehr viel leichter und einfacher, ein Porträt in Wachs oder Plastilin hinzumodellieren und dabei den Vorzug auszubeuten, die zur Verfügung stehende Fläche mit füllenden Zutaten auzupfropfen, aber man möchte den modernen Medailleuren wünschen, die Zeit und Mühe, die zur Herstellung solcher Steinschnitte gehört, nicht zu scheuen, es lohnt sich reichlich. Es ist Sturms Verdienst, wenn der Steinschnitt wie er im 16. Jahrhundert in Augsburg und Nürnberg, besonders von Hans Sebald Beham gepflegt wurde, wieder zur Blüte kommt. Das Streben, alles mechanische Verfahren beim Kunstwerke überhaupt auszuschalten, die unmittelbare künstlerische Handschrift im Werke direkt sichtbar zu machen, lässt das Sturmsche Kunstprinzip, die Schädlichkeiten der Verkleinerung möglichst auszumerzen, als im höchsten Masse gerechtfertigt erkennen. Welche Früchte eine solch solide Kunstübung zeitigte, wird sich sogleich ergeben.

"Für die wenigen Jahre, in denen der Künstler auf diesem Gebiete schafft, liegen zweifellos Leistungen vor, die sich dem besten anreichen, was die moderne Kunst kennt. Sturm hatt eaber auch eine bedeutende Anwartschaft für dieses Gebiet, die Herkunft aus dem Handwerk, die mühelose Beherrschung der Technik, der angeborene Sinn für das Material, die Sorgfalt der Arbeit, die unermüdliche Treue des künstlerischen Strebens, der Blick für das Wesentliche, für die Charakterzüge einer Persönlichkeit in allem schos-seine Befähigung für die Medaillistik zusammen. Sturm hat es in seinem Leben nicht leicht gehabt" (Medaillen und Plaketten von Paul Sturm, Kunstgewerbe Blatt, 1904, pp. 141-144).

STURZ, WOLFF (Bohem.). Mint-master at Joachimsthal, circ. 1525-1527. He issued Double Thalers, Thalers, Half Thalers, etc. (Fiala, Donebauer Catalogue, nos 3759-68).

STUTT, LOUIS ADOLPHE (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born in Paris; pupil of J. C. Chaplain. At the Paris Salon 1905 he exhibited two Portrait-medallions.

STUTZ, KONRAD (Germ.). Mint-engraver and Mint-master at Fürth about 1620, Würzburg 1632; Mint-master to the district of Franconia 1624 (according to Schlickeysen-Pallmann, 1622-1654). Ammon states that he was a native of Onolzbach, appointed Mint-master to Franconia, first at Fürth, then at Nuremberg, and adds that he was still living in 1634. His initials occur amongst others on an undated Thaler of Bishop Johann Fuchs von Dornheim of Bamberg, 1623-33. Gebert -Nürnberg gives the following particulars of Stutz under 29th July 1620: "Am gleichen Tag wird beschlossen, Cunrat Stutz, Eisenschneider, im Auftrag der markgräflichen Räte zu Bayreuth etliche hier bei Cunrat Stierlein angedingte zum Münzwesen gehörige Stück verabfolgen zu lassen" (Geschichte der Münzstätte der Reichstadt Nürnberg, 1891, p. 78).

STUTZENBERGER, KASPAR (Swiss). A native of Berne; since 1481 a burgher of Lucerne; Mint-master at Lucerne 1481-1499; on 9th January 1500 he was no longer in office.

STYX, PETER (Bohem.). Mint-engraver at Prague, 1592, in which year he supplied models in wood for medals.

SUARDA, GIAMBATTISTA (Ital.). A Goldsmith of Milan, second half of the sixteenth century. His name is mentioned by Gnecchi (Monete di Milano, Int. LXII) as a Gem- and Medal-engraver, in conjunction with those of Leone Leoni, Jacopo da Trezzo, Annibale Fontana, Antonio Abondio, Giambattista Pozzi, and others.

SUCHARDA, Prof. STANISLAS (Bohem.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Prague. He won a Gold medal (Diploma of the First Class) at the Brussels Salon International de la Médaille 1910, where he exhibited the following works: Libussa prophesies the glory of Prague, cast bronze plaquette; — Tryptich. Prayers for the Fatherland, silvered electrotype plaquettes; — Time, bronzed electrotype plaquette; — The Willow-tree, Czech national legend, bronze plaquette; — The Warning, bronze plaquette; — The Oracle, electrotype medal silvered; — Prague and Vetave, bronzed electrotype plaquette; — Krok, First Justice of the Czechs, silvered electrotype plaquette; — Karel Dimmer, bronze medal; — Lady's Portrait, ivory medal; — Man's portrait, bronzed electrotype medal; — Cech, leader of the Czech, silvered electrotype plaquette; — Youth, silvered electrotype plaquette; — Libussa, silvered electrotype plaquette; — Gardening, bronze medal; — The City of Prague, silver plaquette; — Spring, silvered electrotype plaquette; — The Gardener, bronze plaquette; — Czech Tale, silvered electrotype plaquettes.

At the New York International Medallic Exhibition, March 1910, he exhibited a collection of sixteen Plaquettes and Medallions, no titles given.

In style, Sucharda is a pupil of Charpentier, the French Master. The Austrian Society for the Promotion of Medallic and Glyptic Arts ordered from him in 1908 a large plaquette "Böhmische Spinnstube", which is an interesting production. By him is also a double Portrait-plaquette of Karel Dimmer 1894-1904, and a small Portrait-plaquette of F. Bouda, both successful and characteristic.

SUCKERT, ELIAS (Germ.). Mint-workman at Oels, whose name occurs on Records in 1704 and 1706.

SUCRO, CHRISTOPH (Germ.). Mint-master at Stettin, 1677-1681. His initials occur on the coinage, and I have noted them on an $\frac{1}{8}$ Thaler of 1677 commemorating the Capture of Stettin by the Elector Frederick William, whose bust it bears on the obverse.

SUC, ETIENNE NICOLAS EDOUARD (French). Sculptor, born at Lorient (Morbihan) in 1802, died at Nantes on 16th March 1855; pupil of Lemaire; was awarded a medal of the third class in 1838. Many of his works are in the Saumur Museum.

By him are a number of Portrait-medallions: 1835. M. Ghys, violonist; — M. Menard, Breton chronicler; — M. Martin, etc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Chavignerie et Auvray, op. cit.

SUE-ABADIE, JEAN (French). Sculptor of the nineteenth century, born at Toulouse, pupil of Jouffroy. He has signed several Portrait-medallions.

SUERMONDT, X. D. C. (Dutch). Mint-master at Utrecht 1815-1838; his initials occur on coins of the Dutch East Indies, 1816-1839. The first coins he issued were AV Ducats of 1815, bearing as privy-mark a small trefoil at the beginning of the legend. In 1817 he took as his distinctive mark, a mummy, but was obliged to alter it into a torch.

SUESZNER, JOSEPH (Austr.). Mint-master at Carlsburg, 1853-55.

SUFFIELD (Brit.). The signature SUFFIELD FECIT occurs on a medal of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart. on his election for Evesham being declared valid, 1819 (Grueber, Personal Medals, Num. Chron. 1890, p. 63).

SULLY, MAXIMILIEN DE BÉTHUNE, Duke of (French) 1560-1611. The celebrated Minister of Henry IV. of France is said to have composed himself the legends of the jetons which he was in the habit of presenting on 1st January of each year to the King. On the jetons composed by Sully, cf. the interesting article published in Revue numism. franç., 1863, vol. VIII, p. 425.

SULZBERGER, HIERONYMUS (Germ.). Mint-master at Rostock, 1615-1616; appointed on 27th May 1615.

SUPERCHIO, MESSER GIROLAMO (Ital.). Goldsmith of the second half of the sixteenth century, mentioned by Bolzenthal in connection with medallic work.

SUREAU, LAURENT (French). Mint-master at Paris, 1488-94-1507.

SURGE, MICHEL HENRI (French). Sculptor, Medallist and Gem-engraver of the nineteenth century, born in Paris; pupil of Jouannin and Levasseur. Valdeuche, Portrait-medallion in plaster; — M. Ventujol, Portrait-medallion in bronze; — 1883. M. Foret, Portrait-medallion in plaster; — M. Chapel, Portrait-medallion in plaster, etc.

SURHON, JACQUES DE (Belg.) Mint-master at Tournay, from 12th January 1583 to 31st August 1600, and again from 1st May 1604 to 26th September 1609.

SURIA, THOMAS (Amer.). A Mexican Medallist of the early years of the nineteenth century. The following medals bear his signature: Patriotic dedication medal of Carlos Maria de Bustamante to King Ferdinand VII., 1808 (signed: THOMAS, SURIA); — Archbishop Lizana of Mexico, 1810 (signed: XIMENO INV. SVRIA SCVLP. ANO 1810); — Proclamation of Ferdinand VII., 1809; — Industry and Valour united in the defence of the monarchy (THOMAS SVRIA EN MEXICO AGOSTO DE 1809); — Proclamation medal of the city of Mexico, 1809 (signed: THOMAS SURIA), etc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Ramon Catalogue. — J. T. Medina, Medallas coloniales Hispano-americanas, 1900.

SURZAPF, LEONARD (Swiss). Moneyer at Fribourg, 1504.

SUTRI (Ital.). Goldsmith and Engraver to the Papal Court, 1471. Vide Eug. Müntz, Les Arts à la Cour des Papes, 1498-1503.

SUSILLO, FERNANDEZ ANTOINE (Span.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Seville; pupil of Bonassieux. At the Salon 1893 he exhibited Bas-reliefs intended for a monument of Christopher Columbus.

SUTMAN (Brit.). A medal of the Guildhall Exhibition, 1866, bears this Die-sinker's signature, about whom I have not been able to trace any further particulars.

SUTTNER VON SUTTENBACH, HANNS BARTEL (Bohem.). Mint-master at Prague, 1623-1625. His privy-mark, the forepart of a griffin, occurs on Kipper Thalers and Half Thalers of Ferdinand II., and also on Double Thalers, Thalers, Half and Quarter Thalers, Groschen, etc. minted for Bohemia at Prague.

SUYS. The signature L. SUYS FILS accompanied by A FISH GR. occurs on a medal commemorating the American railway at Brussels, 1869 (Moyaux, n° 90).

SUZAN surnamed REY. Not SUZAN REY as supra, p. 99. Suzan dit Rey, whose name occurs circ. 1698-1700 was a clever Gem-engraver and Medallist. Vide REY, p. 99.

SVEDELIVS (Swed.). Vice-director of the Helsingfors Mint, under Mint-master Lihr, circ. 1895. He issued Finnish coins of Nicholas II., by the engraver K. Jahn.

SVENDSEN, CHRISTIAN ANDREAS (Dan.). Mint-master at Copenhagen, 1868 until after 1888, when Jorgensen's Danske Monter 1448-1888 was published.

SVENDSEN, GEORG WILHELM (Dan.). Mint-master at Copenhagen, circ. 1831-1861. He died on 4th June 1861. I have noted his initials on the Rigsbankdaler 1848 of Christian VIII. and Species of Frederick VII. on the death of Christian VIII., 1848. His issues are signed V. S. or W. S.

S. W. (Germ.). Monogram of a German Medallist of the second half of the sixteenth century. It occurs in incuse letters on a Portrait-medal of Onophrius Korn, dated 1562. This medal, remarks Erman, exhibits a peculiar chasing of the hair and costume and reminds one in the conception of the reverse of the Italian manner.

Onophrius Korn, 1562.

SWAINSON, MARY (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born in London. She has exhibited Portrait-medallions, both at the Royal Academy, London, and at the Paris Salon de la Société nationale des Beaux-Arts, 1906-1908. Among these I have noted : Mrs. E. N. Swainson; — Miss Whitehouse; — Miss Susan Draper, etc.

SWAN, JOHN M. RA. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor, by whom I have seen a Portrait-medal of Matthew Maris Esq., which was exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1900.

SWAN, Miss M. A. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor; author of a Portrait-medallion of the late J. M. Swan, R.A., her father.

SWEIGER, HANS (Austr.). Moneyer at Vienna, 1427.

SWINDEREN, NICOLAUS (or NIKLAAS VAN) (Dutch.). Medallist of the eighteenth century, worked at The Hague from about 1730 to 1760. He was chiefly employed by the House of Orange, members of which he portrayed by numerous medals. These are variously signed : N. V. S.; — N. V. S. F.; — N. V. SWINDEREN, F.; — N. S.; — N. V. SWINDEREN.

To collectors of British medals, the following productions by this Engraver are of especial interest : William, Prince of Orange, Knight of the Garter, 1733; — Marriage of William, Prince of Orange, and Princess Anne, 1734; — Childbirth of Princess Anne of Orange, 1736 (signed : N. V. SWINDEREN, F.); — Restoration of Breda to the House of Orange, 1737 (2 var.) (N. V. SWINDEREN : F :); — Jubilee of the Peace of Utrecht, 1738 (illustrated); — Birth of Princess Caroline, daughter of the Prince and Princess of Orange, 1743; — William, Prince of Orange, stadtholder, 1747 (5 types); — Birth of Prince William of Orange, 1748 (3 types); — Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle concluded, 1748; — Anne, Princess of Orange, Regent of Holland, 1751 (2 types); — William V., Prince of Orange, knight of the Garter, 1754; — Death of the Princess of Orange, 1759 (2 types).

SYLM, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (Germ.). Mint-master at Lübeck, appointed in 1769.

SYMON (Swiss). Mint-master at Lucerne, 1517.

SYMONNET, ÉTIENNE (French). Mint-engraver at Grenoble, 1641.

SYMONNET, MONNET (I) (French). Mint-engraver at Grenoble 1580-1620. His son Pierre succeeded him in 1620, on his resignation of the office.

SYMONNET, MONNET (II) (French). Mint-engraver at Grenoble, 1641.

SYMONNET, PIERRE (French). Mint-engraver at Grenoble, succeeded his father Monnet S. in 1620.

SYRIES (Greek.). Gem-engraver of the old Ionian school (sixth century B.C.), one of the first Greek artists whose name is recorded on glyptic works. The signature Συρίης ἐποίεσε occurs on a steatite of the British Museum (illustrated). The back of the scarabaeus is replaced by a mask of Silenus in relief, whereas on the flat side is represented a male figure playing the lyre. Babelon thus describes the work : "La délicatesse du travail permet de l'analyser dans tous les détails, depuis la barbe en coin, les pommettes et les yeux saillants du personnage, jusqu'à l'ossature de son torse maigre, de le jeu exagéré des muscles, la transparence enfin de ce voile qui, épousant les contours du corps, laisse deviner autant de science anatomique que d'habileté technique" (La gravure en pierres fines, p. 99).

"Die Namensform", says Furtwängler, "lässt einen Ionier erkennen, die Schreibung schliesst aber das kleinasiatische Ionien aus; denn im sechsten Jahrhundert, in welches der Stil des Bildes weist schrieb man dort nirgends E für H und S für Σ. Dagegen passt alles dazu Euboea als Heimat anzunehmen; so hat denn auch Köhler a. a. O. bereits die Inschrift als titulum Euboicum bezeichnet. Da kein Lambda vorkommt ist zwischen Chalkis und Eretria nicht zu entscheiden. An die Colonieen möchte ich nicht denken, wenigstens nicht an die westlichen, da das Material mir nur von Gemmen aus Griechenland und den Inseln des ägäischen Meeres erinnerlich ist. Bei Beurteilung des Stiles ist die Weichheit des Steines ebenfalls zu berücksichtigen. Feines sauberes Detail war hier unmöglich. Der Künstler beschränkte sich deshalb auf des was ihm die Hauptsache war, die Hervorhebung des muskelkräftigen Gesammterscheinung des Mannes. Das Gewand schmiegt sich den Formen des Körpers an, sie kaum verhüllend; die Falten sind nur als dünne flüchtige Linien eingegraben; die Muskeln der Beine und des Armes wölben sich mächtig heraus. Die derbe Frische, welche das Werk charakterisiert kennen wir auch sonst als der älteren chalkidischen Kunst besonders eigen. Ich glaube den Stein um die Mitte des 6. Jahrh. ansetzen zu dürfen" (Jahrbuch des Kaiserlich Deutschen Archäologischen Instituts, Band III, 1888, pp. 196-7).

SZARNOWSKY, FRANZ (Hung.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Budapest; pupil of Chapu. At the Paris Salon 1896 he exhibited two Portrait-medals.

SZENTGYORGYI, STEFAN (Hung.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Bégaszentgyorgy (Hungary), at the present moment (1910) residing in Brussels. At the Brussels Salon de la Médaille held in connection with the Universal Exhibition in 1910, he exhibited a cast Portrait-medal of a Gentleman, and a bronze Portrait-plaquette of a Lady. At the Triennial Exhibition of Fine-Arts at Brussels, 1907, the Hungarian artist had five Plaquettes, in the style of Yencesse, and in the Paris Salon of the same year 5 Plaquettes in bronze.

SZYDLOWIECKI (Pol.). Treasurer to the Crown of Poland at Cracow, 1532-35. His initial S occurs in conjunction with that of the Mint C on currency issued during his tenure of office.

SZIRMAÏ, TONY ANTOINE (Hung.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Budapest on 20th August 1871; pupil of the Budapest School of Decorative Arts, and later of Prof. Eberlé at the Munich Academy of Fine Arts. After a two years' stay at the Palazzo Venezia in Rome, where he studied under Prof. Kopf, he went to Paris in 1892. There he entered the studio of the Master Ernest Barrias. He has lately given his exclusive attention to the production of Medals and Plaquettes, which number by now over 400, and depict the most varied subjects.

At various Salons (Société des Artistes français) and Exhibitions of medals held in Paris he has been awarded a Silver Medal, Bronze medal, and Mention honorable; also a Silver medal at the Exhibition in London, 1908, &c.

He holds numerous honorary distinctions : Commander of the Orders of Nicham, Lion and Sun of Persia, Double Dragon of China; Officer of Public Instruction, France; Crown of Roumania, Wasa of Sweden; Civil Merit of Bulgaria; St Sava of Servia; White Elephant of Siam; Turkish Medjidie; Knight of the Order

M. Szirmaï is exhibiting every year at the Salon des Artistes français.

Among the principal publications which have repeatedly mentioned the artist's work we find : The Studio; Revue de numismatique belge ; Revue de l'art ancien et moderne (Babelon); Mittheilungen der oestr. Gesellschaft der Münzfreunde; Berliner Münzblätter ; Bolletino de Milan (Ricci); Numizmatikai Közlöny, etc. and numerous illustrated periodicals.

At the Salon International de la Médaille contemporaine held at Brussels in connection with the Universal Exhibition 1910, Mr. Szirmai had a very fine exhibit of 95 of his principal medals and plaquettes.

M. Szirmai cannot be said to follow any popular leader. His works betray a marked personality which dominates the whole of his effort, and is manifest in every one of his productions. During the last few years, he has occupied himself almost exclusively with medallic art, which allows him full scope for the exercise of his ingenuity as a designer and a craftsman, and in which his distinctive capacities can be applied to very definite advantage.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Editors,
The Numismatic Circular,
Gentlemen,

It may interest the readers of your excellent Circular to be made acquainted with the perhaps latest addition to our numismatic patrimony.

It is a quadrans of the city of Carseoli, chief town of that warlike people, the Equi, who, though only about sixty miles from Rome, kept the Romans at bay for over a century.

Only one other coin of this city and people has up to the present turned up, and is I believe illustrated in Haeberlin's recent work, but while that one is a sextans and has the double-edged axe, this one a quadrans, has the two new moons (?) back to back, and the name is more complete.

These coins were probably cast when the city after having been almost destroyed, was repeopled by the Romans, in the years 320-3 B. C.

See for Equi, Sambon " Recherches etc. ", page 110, and for a very complete description of the remains of the city of Carseoli, " The REPLICA OF AN EXTREMELY RARE SCOTTISH BADGE.

I have in my collection a replica in copper of an extremely rare Scottish badge. This exquisite example of the medallic art is oval in shape and was struck from dies prepared by Mr. Joseph Moore of Birmingham. It was exhibited at a meeting of Fellows of the Royal Numismatic Society in London, on Thursday January 18th 1912. The obverse bears the Arms of the City of Glasgow, and the reverse a most artistic design by Mr. D. Cunninghame of Glasgow. The design for the obverse was adopted by the magistrates of Glasgow in the year 1867. A patent of the City Arms had been previously granted by the Lord Lyon and is subjoined.

The following is a brief description of the badge : —

O. — Within a compartment formed by decorated curves, encircled by a border of thistles, the Arms of the City of Glasgow. The whole within an ornamented rim.

R. — Within a compartment formed by decorated curves, encircled by a border of thistles, a female figure wearing an embellished robe, and seated on an elegant chair. She holds in her right hand an olive branch and in her left hand a pair of scales. Inscription on a scroll below : — LAW. ORDER. FREEDOM. The letter M (for Moore) below the last R of the word ORDER. Portions of a ship and anchor and a beam steam engine are shown in the background. To the left and right of the female figure floral emblems. On the ornamental curve adjoining the floral emblem on the left : — CUNNINGHAME S. The whole within an ornamented rim.

E. — Plain.

THE PATENT GRANTED BY THE LORD LYON.

TO ALL AND SUNDRY whom these presents do or may concern, We, George Burnett, Esquire, Advocate, Lyon King of Arms, send Greeting : Whereas the LORD PROVOST AND MAGISTRATES OF THE CITY OF GLASGOW have, by Petition of date the fifth October current, represented unto Us, that certain Arms therein described have been for a long period carried by the City of Glasgow, but that their predecessors in office had not obtained the sanction of the Lyon Court for bearing the said Arms, in terms of the Act 1672, Chapter 21 ; and have prayed that we would Ratify, Maintain and Confirm to the Petitioners and their successors in office and to the City of Glasgow, the said Armorial Ensigns, with the addition of Supporters and Crest; KNOW YE THEREFORE that we have devised and do by these presents Assign, Ratify, Maintain, and Confirm to the said Lord Provost and Magistrates, and to their successors in office, and to the said City of Glasgow, the following Ensigns Armorial, as depicted upon the margin hereof, and Matriculated of even date with these presents in Our Public Register of All Arms and Bearings in Scotland namely : — ARGENT, ON A MOUNT IN BASE VERT AN OAK TREE PROPER, THE STEM AT THE BASE THERE OF SURMOUNTED BY A SALMON ON ITS BACK, ALSO PROPER, WITH A SIGNET RING IN ITS MOUTH, OR; ON THE TOP OF THE TREE A RED-BREAST, AND IN THE SINISTER FESS POINT AN ANCIENT HAND BELL, BOTH ALSO PROPER; above the Shield is placed a suitable Helmet, with a Mantling Gules doubled Argent, and, issuing out of a Wreath of the proper Liveries, is set for Crest THE HALF LENGTH FIGURE OF ST. KENTIGERN AFFRONTÉ, VESTED AND MITRED, HIS RIGHT HAND RAISED IN THE ACT OF BENEDICTION AND HAVING IN HIS LEFT HAND A CROZIER, ALL PROPER; in a Compartment below the Shield are placed for Supporters TWO SALMON PROPER EACH HOLDING IN ITS MOUTH A SIGNET RING, OR; and in an Escrol entwined with the Compartment this Motto LET GLASGOW FLOURISH. In Testimony whereof these presents are subscribed by us, and the Seal of Our Office is appended hereunto, at Edinburgh, the twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-six.

My best thanks are due to Mr. Robert Renwick, of the City Chambers, Glasgow, for kindly supplying me with much of the foregoing information.

In conclusion I wish to express my warmest gratitude to Messrs. Spink and Son, Limited, London, for their kindness in providing the blocks from which the illustrations are printed, and I think I may venture to add the personal goodwill which they have always displayed towards me.

TYPE I.

RUPEE, 1911.

O. — Legend : — GEORGE V KING EMPEROR. Bust of the King-Emperor in profile, looking to the left. On the truncation of the bust : — B.M. His Majesty is represented wearing the Imperial Crown, and the ermine Robe of State, the Collar of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, the Collar of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire and the Badge of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. The whole within an ornamented rim.

R. — The inscription : — ONE | RUPEE | INDIA | 1911 in four lines, and the denomination of the coin in Persian, beneath the date, is contained in a linear circle, surrounded by another linear circle, in the centre of the piece, around which is carried a Saracenic scroll, encircled by two concentric linear circles. In the spaces to the left and right between the scroll and the inner concentric circle are conventional representations of the rose, the shamrock, and the thistle, while above and below, the Indian lotus is shown. The whole within an ornamented rim.

E. — Milled with straight lines.

Simultaneously with the Proclamation of the King-Emperor at the Delhi Durbar on Tuesday, December 12th, 1911, the Calcutta Mint authorities issued the rupee bearing the effigy of the King-Emperor, George the Fifth on the obverse. The coin is a very handsome one, the portrait of the King-Emperor being an excellent likeness by Mr. Bertram Mackennal, who was specially commissioned for this work. As will be seen from the illustration of the coin, His Majesty is represented wearing the Imperial Crown, a most important point when the reception which the previous rupee met with is considered. The King-Emperor Edward the Seventh was, unfortunately, depicted in the classical manner, the bare head and neck only, being shown on the obverse of the coin, much to the surprise of the majority of his Indian subjects. These, naturally, demanded some outward symbol of royalty; and the absence of this, led the rupee to be designated "the naked head". This has been successfully rectified in the recent issue. The reverse of the coin was designed and modelled by Mr. Percy Brown, Principal of the Government School of Art, Calcutta, this being the first occasion on which the reverse design of a rupee intended for general circulation in British India has been entrusted to an artist resident in that country, and Mr. Brown is to be most heartily congratulated on having originated such an appropriate and artistic design.

HENRY GARSIDE.

TO BE WITHDRAWN AT ONCE.

LAHORE, January 23rd. — The Bank of Bengal here and the local Treasuries have to-day received orders to withdraw from circulation all new rupees bearing the date of 1911 and the effigy of His Imperial Majesty.

BOMBAY, January 23rd. — According to the Times of India, it has been decided to withdraw the new rupee which has been in circulation for several weeks, and of which several lakhs have been issued. "As soon as the coin was issued it was universally criticised, and no amount of explanation has been able to do away with the fact that the elephant on the King's chain presents to the naked eye a decidedly porcine appearance. This defect will now be remedied. The designs for the Indian coinage are prepared in England, and the Mints in this country are responsible only for turning out coins of a correct standard, and not for the original engraving. It is the authorities in England, and not in this country, who are primarily responsible for what has occurred. Further, it appears that the new anna was found not to be symmetrical, but the error was detected before many of them had been minted, and so the faulty coins did not get into circulation. In due course we may learn how much India has had to pay for the errors of the designer and engraver in the London Mint." —

"AN ERROR IN THE MINT. — It would appear that knowledge of natural history is somewhat lacking among the draughtsmen responsible for the designing of coinage in London. There was a bazaar rumour, not long ago, to the effect that there was a pig on the new Indian rupee, and as a result the Mohammedans were determined not to handle the evil thing. The statement, though laughed at at the time, has turned out to be at any rate approximately correct, the elephant in the design being said to have a decided porcine appearance. The similarity must be something more than imaginary to induce the authorities to withdraw the coin from circulation, when several lakhs of it have already been issued. It has been left to the designers of the British Mint to suggest a resemblance between the degraded and reviled swine and the grand giant which plays so proud a part in oriental pageantry."

EIN UNEDIERTER DEUTSCHER PROBEPFENNIG.

Bald nach dem deutsch-französischen Kriege 1870-71 beschloss die deutsche Regierung, anstatt der bisher üblichen Taler-Währung die Mark-Währung einzuführen.

Hand in Hand ging damit auch eine andere Einteilung des Münzwesens : während früher die grösste Silbermünze der Taler, (bezw. der Doppeltaler) war, — bestehend aus drei $\frac{1}{3}$-Talern oder Gulden, sechs $\frac{1}{6}$ Talern oder halben Gulden, zwölf Achtehalbern oder 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ Silbergroschen, dreissig Silbergroschen, sechzig $\frac{1}{2}$-Silbergroschen, neunzig Kupfergroschen oder 4 Pfennigen, hundertzwanzig Dreiern oder 3 Pfennigen, hundertachtzig 2 Pfennigen und dreihundertsechzig 1 Pfennigen —, welcher demnach gemäss dem Duodezimal-System sich bis zu 360 Einzelpfennigen abstufte, schuf man jetzt als grösstes Silberstück das 5-Mark-Stück, welches sich aus fünf 1-Markstücken à zwei 50-Pfennigstücken à vier 25-Pfennigstücken à zehn 10 Pfennigstücken à zwanzig 5-Pfennigstücken à fünfzig 2-Pfennigstücken à hundert 1-Pfennigstücken zusammensetzt; bei den 25-10-und 5-Pfennigstücken ist als Metall Nickel, bei den 2-und 1-Pfennigstücken Kupfer verwendet.

Neben dem 5-Markstück prägte man in Gold 20-Markstücke und 10-Markstücke, (— die goldenen 5-Markstücke wurden wieder eingezogen —), in Silber für den Kleinverkehr Zweimark- und 20-Pfennigstücke; doch erwiesen sich auch letztere bald als unpraktisch.

Daneben liess man auch die alten Silbertaler als Dreimarkstücke bestehen, welche hauptsächlich als Gedenk — und Jubiläums — Münzen Verwendung fanden. Die kleineren Münzsor ten dagegen veränderten nach Einführung des Dezimal-Systems nicht nur völlig ihr Aussehen, sondern sie erhielten sogar durch die Verwendung des Nickels ein neues Metall.

Alte Sorte. Probe Pfennig. Neue Sorte.

Avers. Revers. Avers. Avers. Revers.
Æ. Æ. Æ.

Die Prägung der goldenen 20-Markstücke hatte zum Teil schon 1871 begonnen und war 1872 überall durchgeführt, während die Prägung des neuen Silber —, Nickel — und Kupfergeldes im Jahre 1872 ins Auge gefasst und erst 1873 in allen Bundesstaaten durch Ausmünzung wirklich vollzogen wurde.

Daher trägt der weiter unten abgebildete Probepfennig auch die Jahrzahl 1872 und ähnt seinem Aussehen nach durchaus noch den früheren Pfennigen des Duodezimal-Systems, während er andrerseitsdurch seine Umschrift beweist, dass er für das Dezimal-System bestimmt war.

Der Probepfenni[n]g, in der Münzstätte B (= Hannover) hergestellt, ist nur einseitig ausgeprägt. Im Felde liest man in vier Zeilen den Wert, die Jahrzahl 1872 und den Buchstaben der Münzstätte; die obere Umschrift lautet HUNDERT EINE MARK, die untere Umschrift lautet SCHEIDE MÜNZE.

Es ist noch darauf hinzuweisen, dass auf der Probemünze die neue Wortform 'Pfennig' statt 'Pfenning' der alten Sorte gebraucht ist, dass der neue Münzfuss 'hundert eine Mark' angegeben wird statt des alten Münzfusses '360 einen Thaler' und dass diese Angabe auf dem Avers anstatt, wie bei der alten Sorte, auf dem Revers sich befindet.

Die neue Sorte Pfennige haben die Angabe des Münzfusses (100 eine Mark) einfach weggelassen, dafür aber in der Umschrift die Worte 'Deutsches Reich' und[in] die Jahrzahl, in der untern Umschrift das Wort 'Pfennig', und in die Mitte des Feldes eine grosse 'Eins' gesetzt.

Somit stellt der Probepfennig einen Übergang von der alten Pfennigsorte zur neuen dar.

Soviel mir bekannt ist ein Abdruck dieses Pfennig-Averses noch nicht veröffentlicht, auch ein doppelseitig ausgemünzter Pfennig der besprochenen Art nirgends beschrieben worden, so dass ich mich veranlasst gefühlt habe, diese Probemünze zur Kenntnis der geneigten Leser zu bringen.

Rev. CONFIDENS.DNO.NON.MOVETUR. Lion to left.

2. Bianco. Billon. Imitated from a coin of Bologna.

3. Parpajola of 3 soldi. Imitated from a coin of the Swiss Canton Uri. Billon.

SIRO D'AUSTRIA (1605-30).

Siro was one of the most persistent imitators of the currency of other states on record. Twice put under the ban of the Empire for forgery, he was finally deprived of his dominions in 1630, and he died a pauper at Mantua in 1645. Murder and forgery were among the most trifling of the many crimes committed by the amiable Siro.

4. Billon imitation of the silver testoon of Hanau in Alsace.

Obv. DIVUS.QUIRIN.EPS.PRO.COR(reggio). Bust of St.Quirinus to right.

Rev. SIRUS.AUSTRIA.SAC.ROM.IMP.PRINC.C(orregio). Arms.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS &c.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

January 18th. — Sir Henry H. Howorth, K.C.I.E, President in the chair.

Messrs. Cumberland Clark, Hubert A. Druce, and R. H. Forster, F. S. A., were elected fellows of the Society.

Exhibitions: — By Mr. Henry Garside, a replica in copper of the gold badge of office worn by the Lord Provost of Glasgow, struck by Joseph Moore of Birmingham from the designs of M. D. Cunninghame; by Mr. W. E. Marsh, a sixpence of James I with date 1609 and M. M. coronet, a hitherto unknown combination which limits the date of issue of this coin to 25th March-17th May 1609; by Mr. L. A. Lawrence, F. S. A., a unique silver half-crown of the second issue of James I with M. M. lis, plain harp with semicolon stops on obverse, and pellets on reverse, and a profile groat of Henry VII with M. M. obverse, lis, reverse, greyhound's head; by M. F. A. Walters, F. S. A., three pennies of the first coinage of Henry VII of London (M. M. rose & lis), Canterbury (tun) and Durham (cross) all of the highest rarity; by Mr. Bernard Roth F.S.A., a rare gold stater of the Iceni (Evans, XXII-I); by Mr. G. C. Brooke, a heavy noble of Henry IV (belonging to Mr. Spink) and a light noble of the same reign (belonging to Mr. Lawrence) both struck from the same obverse die, which has broken annulets in the legend and had a slipped trefoil punched on the side of the ship before the striking of the light noble.

Mr. H. A. Grueber read a paper on the "Quarter-Angel of James I". This piece which was recently presented to the British Museum has been hitherto unknown. In addition to being the only quarter-angel known of James I, it is the only piece that has survived of the first issue of angels half- and quarter-angels. The king is entitled A. N. S. C. FR. & HIB. REX instead of MAG BRIT. FR. & HIB REX, which was ordered to be adopted in October 1604. The reverse bears the royal shield instead of the usual ship.

Mr. G. C. Brooke read a paper on "The Tax called Monetagium, and the sequence of Coin-types of William II". Monetagium was mentioned once in Domesday and in Henry I's Charter of Liberties (1100) it was abolished. This tax had been made a basis for fixing dates to the issues of the types of William I and II on the ground that it was a tax paid every three years, on condition that the king should not change the money more often than once in that period. The tax was assumed to be identical with the "monetagium" levied in Normandy. But in Normandy the dukes had long been debasing the quality of the coinage for their own profit and shortly before the Council of Lillebonne in 1080 the duke undertook to cease to change the money on the condition of a triennial payment called "monetagium"; the people accepted the condition, the standard of the coinage was fixed by the assembly at Lillebonne, and William, finding that his new money was being taken out of the country in exchange for the still base coinage of neighbouring barons, closed his mints and stopped his Norman issues. In England conditions were quite different, the coinage was not debased at this time nor was there at this period any apparent change in the currency to confirm the assumption of a similar concession in England. Further, that the English tax cannot have been a concession is obvious from its abolition by the Charter of Liberties by which Henry I conceded some limitations of his power and renounced evil customs and usurpations of his two predecessors. The English tax could therefore have no relation to that of Normandy nor do we know that is was paid triennially. It was probably an imposition by William I upon the shires and boroughs for the local mints which he allowed them to retain. It therefore imposed no triennial limit to the currency of each type. Indeed, were it identical with the Norman tax, it could have had no influence on coin-types, for it was the quality of the coinage of Normandy that William undertook not to change, and that too he undertook to leave permanently unchanged and not merely for periods of three years; the payment of the tax was to be triennial, the standard of the coinage permanent. Thus in no sense of the word could "monetagium" be made a basis for a system of dating coin-types.

A study of the lettering on the coins of William II tended to show that his "two stars" type (Hks. 250) preceded his "crosses pattée and fleury" types (Hks. 247). Punches, by which the lettering was made upon the die, sometimes outlived the issue of a type, and thus the punches used for the "Cross in quatrefoil" type (Hks. 246), which immediately preceded these two types, were also used on several coins of the "two stars" type, on other coins of this issue were used larger punches, which continued throughout the "Crosses pattée and fleury" issue, on a few coins of which punches were occasionally used of the same sort as appeared throughout the last issue of William II (Hks. 248) and the first of Henry I (251). An overstrike of the Thetford mint of the "Crosses pattée and fleury" type upon a flan which previously bore the "two-stars" type confirmed this arrangement of these two issues.

SOCIÉTÉ FRANÇAISE DE NUMISMATIQUE.

Séance du 6 janvier.

M. Bordeaux communique un volume de règlements monétaires du Sénat de Francfort, contenant, sur le change des écus de Louis XIV, un tableau d'une interprétation difficile.

Il présente aussi un liard portant la marque de l'atelier de Grenoble et qui semble appartenir à l'émission concédée en 1655 au fermier général Blandin; enfin, des monnaies de cuivre contremarquées dans les Flandres en vertu d'ordonnances espagnoles.

La Société revient sur la question des écus et demi-écus portant au revers deux points de compas.

Le comte de Billy présente un sceau; M. Kœchlin, les nouvelles monnaies de Grèce et d'Italie; M. Bérenger, deux placards monétaires de la Révolution; M. Blanchet, un méreau de Besançon et, de la part de M. Côte-Baritel, un laisser-passer de monnoyer.

M. Dieudonné étudie les monnaies de Philippe Ier frappées à Nantes.

NEWCASTLE SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.

The Duke of Northumberland presided on Wednesday, 31. January, at the annual meeting of the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries.

The annual report of the council referred to the excavations at the Roman city of Corstopitum (Corbridge) and to the discovery of gold coins in excellent preservation. The latest date represented in the hoard was A.D. 159. The importance of this hoard and that of 1908 to Roman archæology, it was said, was the illustration which they gave of two periods of disturbance, widely differing in time, and by their help and that of the pottery obtained archæologists were becoming able to construct the history of this important site. It was known in the time of Agricola, and occupied, possibly with periods of abandonment, until the eve of the departure of the Romans from Britain. The work of investigation had already occupied six successive summers, and yet a seventh year's work would be entered upon with promise of even greater achievement; for, notwithstanding all that had been accomplished up to present, less than half the site had as yet been explored, and a task of years remained to be done. The council hoped that a proposal to re-erect the old White Cross in Newcastle as a memorial to the late King Edward would be carried out.

The Duke of Northumberland was re-elected President of the Society.
